NORTHERN MICHIGAN.

Gov. Bliss has appointed John A. Newville, of Wilson township, as one of the official Michigan delegates to the great International Live Stock Show at Chicago this winter.

President Hoad emphatically denies that the Pere Marquette is for sale or that it will be sold. The fact is, he says, that the P M is endeavoring to get into a voting trust so that in case no change hands, thereby putting a end to the persistent rumors of sale.

Hiat Jordan Enterprise: E. N. Clink is home from his trip to the south part of the state. He says he was more successful than he anticipated in introducing his patent wagon tongue, and had three or four factories will make use of the device. In addition to this it is in demand for use on seeders, drills and wheel cultivators.

Cheboygan Tribune: The farmers were never more prosperous than at this time under the present Republican administration. The other day the writer saw one of our well known farmers making a deposit of over $300 in bank. Another well known farmer informs us that for his pea crop, raised on a few acres, he received $925 from Keeney & Son. There is no question but that farming pays, yet there are a number who are tooman enough at every election to vote "for a change" and give the Democratic free trade party another chance, after the disastrous results brought upon the country by the last Democratic administration.

East Jordan Enterprise: The largest single business deal that has taken place here in some time was consummated last week, when all of the real estate holdings of the South Arm Lumber Co. were purchased by the East Jordan Lumber Co. The sale includes the store, residence and barns and docks at South Arm and something over three thousand acres of land, with timber sufficient to run the mills here for two year's cut. When the South Arm Co's mill burned last spring it was supposed that they would rebuild but having large interests in the Upper Peninsula near Marquette and their holdings here being somewhat scattered they decided it best to sell outright. We understand that the consideration in the transaction was in the neighborhood of $60,000.

Kalkaska Leader: Those who have watched and studied the climate of northern Michigan have noticed the decided amelioration thereof in the past quarter of a century. Of course in this latitude winter will always be more or less in evidence between Nov. 1st and May 1st, and one season will not be just like another, but there has been a constant tendency during the period mentioned toward an abatement of the rigors of the old time winter. Back in the seventies and early eighties heavy snow falls from November 1st to January 1st was the rule rather than the exception, and comparatively early in November wheeled vehicles went into winter quarters to stay, while days when the sun shone and the air was not filled with fine particles of snow were very rare.

William H. White, the Boyne City lumberman, in the following interview, which appeared in a recent issue of the Grand Rapids Herald, tells of the experiment he Co. are making in utilizing their cut-over timber lands for raising Angora goats: "We are trying an experiment with Angora goats on our cut-over lands in Antrim and Charlevoix counties that is promising great results. We have a tract of 7,000 acres of these hardwood lands now forced in and at present are pasturing 300 head of cattle and 250 sheep there. Our first shipment of Angora goats, 150 in number, has just arrived, consisting mostly of wethers, and they have been turned loose to clean up the brush. Our primary object, of course, is to sell the land, which had been logged off and log the past two to six years, and then seeded. We are using the goats to protect the seeding, and to furnish an object lesson to settlers as to the possibilities of this section of Michigan for agricultural purposes. We have fattened 300 western cattle there during the past summer. Now we want to see what the Angora will do. Angora goat's food is at present than worth 15 cts a pound. We will cheer the goats, then fatten them for the fall market, and then get a new puppy. These goats are gentle and are not afraid of dogs turning and facing the assailan when they come loose."

The corsetier sets now up in the old Gravenhurst house at Boyne City. For months the house presented a gloomy appearance for Miss Gravenhurst, in New York, staying with her mother. She died a few weeks ago. The property came west to settle her affairs and it is the opinion of her old friends that she will not return to live.

SCHOOL COM. COLUMN.

The question is often asked—"Is a teacher required to teach studies above the eighth grade in the rural schools?"

The law says "the district board shall specify the studies to be pursued in the schools of the district," and the same section provides for the selection and adoption of text books. This law gives a school board to specify the course of study and then any teacher hired by that board is required to teach the course of study that has already been prescribed for the school.

If a teacher goes into a school under contract and finds that no course of study has been specified, as is very often the case, such teacher would be justified in following the course of study as given in the State Manual.

If the district board in any district should adopt the course of study as given in the Manual and decm it advisable to add to that some or all of the studies of the ninth and tenth grades, the teacher who engaged to teach the school would be required to teach those branches.

WANT A WILD EAST SHOW.

Pennsylvania Suggests to Visiting King of Siam.

Hamilton King, United States minister to Siam, has blood that his Chulalongkorn would like very much to visit this country as a guest of its nation. It is further said that his imperial majesty has set aside 1,000,000 ticals ($500,000) to pay the expenses of such a visit. Secretary Hay computes the cost of entertaining his royal visitor at $10,000. If for this outlay the king will leave behind him the brass rods above named and give a free show all along the route, the visit will not be a bad investment. A real king, traveling with full retinue, will be something new. Foreign princes are no longer novelties, but an oriental monarch traversing the country in full regalia would be worth while. Let the invitation sought be extended to "Pi Quang, even if he accepts pulls Buffalo Bill out of business for the time being.—Portland, Oregonian.

A Million Voices

Could hardly express the thanks of Homer Hall, of West Point, Ia., for his wife. A severe cold had settled on her lungs, causing a most obstinate cough. Several physicians said her had consumption, but could not help him. When all else failed she was found by her to use Dr. King's New Discovery for consumption and within "it completely cured her and saved my life. I now weigh 225 lbs." It's positively guaranteed for coughs, colds and lung troubles. Price 50c and $1.00. Trial bottles free at F. G. Hines & Co.

RICHES DISCLOSED BY DOGS.

Two Instances in Which They Unearthed Mine Wealth.

In the latest Australian mining news, says the London Daily Chronicle, there is an account of the discovery of a valuable golden nugget in a curious fashion. A dog out walking with his master, a farmer, chased and caught a kangaroo. In the struggle the animal got torn up, and when the farmer arrived on the scene his eye detected some exposed specimens of golden quartz. Further search revealed a rich reef, and the farmer's manic balance has been considerably increased by his dog's fight with the kangaroo. Thirty years ago a long productive Australian gold field was discovered through a shoeless horse rattler setting the quartz stones and throwing it at the dog. Brought good for evil, the dog brought the stone back to its master in its mouth. The dog lodged at 10 lb. It was a mass of quartz thickly studded with gold.

A Flock of Lambs Driven to the Shambles.

A goodly escort of Royal Arch Masons, on Tuesday, accompanied seven of their companions to Petoskey, in solemn state and melancholy contemplation. The occasion of this pilgrimage was the induction of the seven into the mysteries of Cryptic Masonry, more commonly known as the Council of Royal, Select and Super-Excellent Master.

The lambs who were thus ruthlessly and cruelly driven to the slaughter were, Companions E. G. Hunt, John M. Alexander, D. M. Kerr, J. D. Markham, Ray L. Faulkner, Frank P. Golken, Guy Brown, and four Petoskey lambskins, including Companion Shepperson.

The bloody work began at four-thirty p. m., and continued (not counting one hour from six to seven for cleaning up the gore and partaking of a light supper) until midnight.

Then forty Cryptic Masons, now the eleven relics of former human vanity to the banquet table, where they were propped up and braced up for the feast and what came after it—toasts, and nearly an hour at point graduate. Nothing of an event was, from start to finish, a most successful exhibition of human suffering and inhuman cruelty.

The old settlers who accompanied the lambs, were, H. Lee Iddings, Geo. F. Brown, M. L. Stockman, I. S. Weaver, Geo. Eaglelton and W. A. Smith.

Lake Carnival Events.

Mrs. U. S. Grant, wife of President Grant, died at her residence in Washington, Saturday night. Heath was due to heart failure. Mrs. Grant having suffered for some time from valvular disease of the heart, which was aggravated by a severe attack of bronchitis. Her age prevented her rallying from attacks. Her daughter, Mrs. Grant Sartoris, was the only one of her children with her at the time of her death, her three sons, who had been summoned, all being out of the city.

The situation in Venezuela is improving, with the probability of arbitration, although an actual state of war has existed for seven days. The allies are Angelo German forces and the Venezuelans. The only serious feature of the difficulty, so far as the United States is concerned, is the refusal of the Monroe doctrine. Dewey is close by with the largest American fleet ever assembled. He has had experience enough. The little Dewey at Manila has been the cause of no end of comment. The following is from the Detroit Free Press: Capt. Jas. Hall, the little schooner Lulling, loaded with coal for Port Huron, had an exceedingly rough time of it coming across lake Erie in the terrific storm which held sway Saturday night and Sunday, and was instrumental in keeping the big sidewheeler City of Cleveland out in the lake and arriving in Detroit over six hours more than the Lulling left Cleveland Friday afternoon under sail. A good wind gave her fine headway until the blizzard struck her and she ran into shelter behind Kelley's Island with her bowsprit gone and otherwise damaged. The schooner came up the river and, in tow of a tugboat from Amherstburg, got stuck in the ice just below Mamajuda light. She arrived in port in the lower part of lake yesterday afternoon and it is a serious question whether she will get through the ice to her destination this winter.

MARINE NEWS.

Capt. A. H. Faulmer returned home from Erie Monday. He sold the tug John Smith there, but goes back next spring to run her.

The new steel tug Wm. H. Kinch, built at Grand Haven for the Buffalo Dredging Co., came in here Tuesday morning for shelter on her way to Buffalo.

Probably the last cargo clearance from these parts this year was the steamer Fletcher, which went out from Boyne City Friday with lumber for Chicago.

The fishing tug Gelken came in here Tuesday morning with two men on her tannat steering her with lines attached to her out-board rudder chains—the rudder post having broken.

The steam barge A. J. Hopkins barely escaped being a wreck. She was loaded with lumber at Torch Lake and put out to sea Tuesday of last week, soon after getting out into Lake Michigan a terrific storm seized her and for five hours she battled with the wild waves and made Harbor Springs early Wednesday morning with a loss of 50,000 feet of lumber. Not knowing the harbor she grounded between the breakwater and a bar on the fearful blackness of the storm. At daylight she worked herself off with no injury to the barge, and put at the docs all day. The frightened crew threatened to leave the ship but in the calm next morning she pulled out of the harbor and again put to sea. The tumbler is for Toledo. The deck load came ashore at South point, two miles west of Charlevoix harbor. Much of it was picked up and hauled here.

Cleveland Leader: The little schooner Charles Lulling, which was chartered Thursday to carry coal to Port Huron, got away yesterday. It was, indeed, a strange sight to see her hoist sail in the face of a strong head wind and start up the lakes this time of the year. There was a strong tincture of winter in the air, and it seemed as if the vessel must meet some disaster before she completed her journey. Those who have had reason to comment upon the situation, however, recall that she is perhaps, more safe and more steady than some of the bigger boats made of steel and propelled by steam. The Lulling has good fit-out with new sails and strong new rigging. As she left the lost she was making the best kind of a start and moved more easily and freely than some of the boats which seem much more secure. The old schooner has made a name for herself as has been hanging over the lakes rather uselessly for five last week or ten days, lay, south of the Monroe doctrine. Dewey is close by with the largest American fleet ever assembled. He has had experience enough. The little Lulling at least has been the cause of no end of comment. The following is from the Detroit Free Press: Capt. Jas. Hall, the little schooner Lulling, loaded with coal for Port Huron, had an exceedingly rough time of it coming across lake Erie in the terrific storm which held sway Saturday night and Sunday, and was instrumental in keeping the big sidewheeler City of Cleveland out in the lake and arriving in Detroit over six hours more than the Lulling left Cleveland Friday afternoon under sail. SCHOOL COM. COLUMN.

The teachers of Charlevoix county are hearty second against the action of a certain company who are preparing the country organizing Teachers' Library Unions.

Any movement that will induce the teachers to do systematic reading in good books is to be commended, but in no probability this would be one result of the work of the Library Union among the teachers.

It is much more preferable to own one's books and having them within reach of the lower part of the house with them. They serve a much better purpose. The teacher desires to have another entering into four years' contract with a company to take such books as are recommended by the union. He cannot this week teach the pupils in the school as he should. This movement contemplates organizing the teachers into unions for the purpose of a concerted effort with reference to salary or place. This is entirely wrong and will do no good. It will work more harm than good. It is test to keep out of such combinations.

It is reported that the agents of this company are representing that the county board of school examiners will give certain credits for work done in the unions. This county will keep the line work, and, instead the state superintendent thinks it is a question whether the county board would have any authority under the law to issue such work.

I think it would be better all around to let these agents come and go. It will be time enough to have to take over the county board when the school is ready to take your time now.

For three years I suffered untold agony from the worst form of indigestion, Waterbrash, Stomach and Bowel Dyspepsia. But this excellent medicine did me a world of good. Since using it I can eat heartily and have gained 20 pounds." For Indigestion, Loss of Appetite, Stomach, Liver and Kidney troubles, Electric Bitters are a positive, guaranteed cure. Only 50c. at F. Second Cousin Sarah

BY THE AUTHOR OF "ANNE JEFFREY," "SUTTON'S WIFE," "LITTLE KATE SHAW," ETC., ETC.

(COPYRIGHT, 1910, BY THE BOBBS-MERRILL CO.)

The week was ended and had taught me much. Sarah's character was known to me, and I was sure that I could trust her. Her sympathies were with me, and I felt that she would do anything she could to help me. Her attitude toward Mrs. Elizabeth Bell was a study, and I felt that she was quite capable of taking care of the house and looking after the interests of the second Thomas Kimball, and his companion, a friendly dog, if the events with which they factored him and Sarah were to come to pass.

I found Elizabeth Bell waiting for me at Thomas Kimball's, where I landed, in the executive head quarters, the department, as he so often called it, when speaking about his business affairs. It was, I felt, a fitting place for the conference which was to follow, for the executive nerve center of the house was in the room in which I found Elizabeth Bell.

"Well, Elizabeth," said I, as I shook hands with her, "I have come to see what we can do for the second Thomas Kimball."

"Yes," said she, with a sigh, as she sank into a chair, and I took a seat in the easy chair I was fond of using when I came to this place. I wanted you to know, Mr. Kimball, I felt bad, very bad, about the way I talked to you the last time I was here. And I want you to know, too, that I felt bad about the way I treated Sarah."

"Well, Elizabeth," said I, with a smile, "I'm sorry you felt that way about it, but I'm glad you feel that way now. Sarah is a good girl, and I like her very much, and I want to do what I can for her and for the second Thomas Kimball."

"Yes," said she, with a sigh, as she looked at the floor, "I know you do, and I want to do what I can, too, but I don't know what we can do."

"Well," said I, with a smile, "I don't know that we can do much, either, but we can try, and we can do what we can."

"Yes," said she, with a sigh, as she looked at the floor again, and then she added, with a sigh, as she looked at me, "I know we can do what we can."

"Well," said I, with a smile, "we can do what we can, and we can do what we can do, and we can do what we can do, and we can do what we can do

PROSPERITY AS AN ISSUE.

With Men Who Are Making Money It Carries Great Weight.

It is not astonishing that to-day certain leaders have been anxious to interest the country in the question upon which they are trying to make the coming campaign. They found out, as the last session of Congress came to a close, that the arguments of "expansion" and the Hawaiian treaty had failed to create any popular dissatisfaction with the anti-democratic Philippine policy of the administration. Their aspirations to renew the enthusiasm of the country who were trying to secure reciprocity with China made any criticism of the party in power on that issue out of the question, and they found no one spoke to the trust and tariff question. The fact that they did not do so, before they thought they could be culpably guilty of attacking the prosperity of the party under which the prosperity of prosperity began. There is a world of truth in the bald assertion that the time of the last assembly. The country looks for better regulation of the trusts, there is a growing sentiment in favor of a revision of certain duties, but there is no inclination to jeopardize prosperity.

The bank deposits of the country show, in some measure, what this prosperity has been. In 1893 they amounted to $4,629,000,000, and in 1897 to $5,196,847,320, a gain of $566,847,320. In 1901 they amounted to $8,232,032,[illegible], a gain of $2,035,185,[illegible]. The difference in the bank deposits of the country, at the beginning and end of four years' Republican administration was five times as great as it was at the beginning and end of the preceding Democratic administration. Astute Democratic politicians must have seen that they could not hope to reduce, much less overcome, the Republican Congressional majority in the face of such figures. Also accounts for the way in which they have taken to the woods. They were looking for cover long before Congress adjourned, leaving the various orators from Tennessee and Colorado to wrestle with defeat. Until the Republican party is guilty of some astounding blunder, or the Democratic party undergoes regeneration, the people will be willing to leave the affairs in the hands which have made them so prosperous.—Detroit Tribune.

Not Now.

This paper is very glad to be counted among those that favor tariff revision. The tariff schedule ought to be revised from time to time. They always have been and always will be unless the party that believes in the tariff goes to sleep and does a job on the tracks. Progress means changes—changes in the tariff among others. There is nothing in which this paper believes more firmly. But the question of the time and the manner are important enough to be the essence of the whole matter. In times like these, of industrial prosperity on the one hand and industrial uncertainty as to the future on the other, it is better to conserve than to tear up things through agitation. Too many people have become excited on this question to permit calm action to be taken. The tariff is too partisan and too factional a question now to permit business men to be taken. This strikes us as a good time to wait and watch and study.

We should not be surprised but what a whole revision of the tariff after the manner of the Dingley revision, ought to be made following 1904. The present tariff was not made for all time, but the principle underlying the tariff is still sound.—Cedar Rapids Republican.

A Good Safeguar Story.

When Mr. Balfour was secretary for Ireland, says Today, and, as some body extravagantly expressed it, half the nation were in prison and the other half were trying to get there, he took occasion to use the celebrated Father Healey the following question: "Do the Irish really think me as harsh as their newspapers say? 'My dear sir,' replied the priest, 'if they only hated the devil half as much as they hate you my occupation would be gone.'"

Hypnotic Power.

To Statesmen Out of a Job.

Well gentlemen, what do you want a change? Nominate your poison. State the remedy for a general condition of prosperity probably unknown elsewhere in any other country. How to introduce paralysis in the commercial world how to stop the hum of machinery, how to reduce the demand for products of all sorts, how to increase wants and diminish the means of satisfying them, how to kill industry, to crush paupers, to ruin business, institutions and empty workshops, these are some of the questions to which the massive minds of "statesmen out of a job" are now exclusively devoted.

The leap in the dark has been tried before. The man who tries it throws when he strikes the solid earth. In proportion to the distance he has to fall to the bottom he is bruised down. Prudent men don't leap in the dark. They don't leap at all after they have reached a certain age. Old men are wrotter. It is easy for young men. It is terribly hard to jump in the dark.—Chicago Tribune.

HOTEL UNDER THE SEA

French Watering Place Offers Visitors Unique Attraction.

Nice Perdon, on the south coast of France, there is a submarine hotel, which attracts large numbers of visitors every summer. The building is of steel on concrete foundations, and has been fitted with large plate glass windows, from which the guests may look upon the wonders of subaqueous life at a depth of six fathoms. Electric machinery at the neighbor pumps an air so those haunted lodgers, and at the same time drives away the impure air through disused tubes. It was in this hotel that the famous artist Blandinig penned some of his most thrilling romances when taking his annual flight from the hustle and noise of the French capital.

Tale of a Shirt.

Speaking of a shirt it reminds by the talk of a shirt which comes from Washington. A young man, an applicant for a civil service job, having passed to a high enough examination, was told to go away and return on Thirty days he appeared. He moved his outer clothing and stepped the beam at the required 150 pounds. The medical examiner congratulated the young man and he was just about to step down off the scales when an iron weight fell from somewhere and rang on the steel platform. Attached to the weight was a string, and from the string dangled a piece of lined from the tail of a shirt.

A Philosophical Suicide.

Dr. G. L. Cook, a blind preacher in New York, recently gave up practice because of his age. He lived comfortably with his sister and had nothing to do, but time hung heavy on his hands. A day or two ago he went home and calmly said: "I am getting old. I'm in the way and don't like to go on like this. I don't want to become a burden to my sister. I'd better die while I'm able to do it. I have taken three grains of morphine." A physician ran to the door in a very short time, but the old man was served recovery and died in an hour or so.

Cave Dwellers in England.

There are several remarkable cave dwellings at Knaresborough, in Yorkshire, the proprietor of one of which has adorned the various levels of his hillside cave home with battlements, and calls it Fort Monagie. At Arcley Kings, in Worcestershire, Seldon, near Exeter, Seaham on the Durham coast, Stourton castle, Castle Hill, Dudley, and elsewhere are other homes of modern troglodytes; and at Ladaig, near Oban, is a cave given up and for a long time used as a place of worship.

Wrote Wrong Obituary.

A London newspaper man said to be capable, was suddenly called upon to write an obituary of Bret Harte. With a head full of something else, he was not told what—he wrote a colum and a half, and sent it to the printer. When it came back to proof he was horrified to find that he had written a healthy article about Mark Twain. It was too late to rewrite the obituary and he was obliged to change the name and the fitting of the books and let the article go in.

Reanimates Heart From Corpse.

In a Cable from Moscow the correspondent of the London Daily Mail says that a Dr. Kouliabko has succeeded in his experiments in reanimating the heart of an infant, which had been extracted from a child who had died twenty-four hours previously. The heart beat with normal regularity for one hour. Dr. Kouliabko hopes that his discovery will assist in resuscitation in cases of death by drowning.

Scotch Conjugal Concord.

Good stories come from Scotland a well as porridge and haggises. The last is quite admirable in its way. Two gentlemen were in a railway carriage arguing and gesticulating in the most in order to avoid disturbing asleep the beam at the required 150 pounds. The medical examiner congratulated the young man and he was just about to step down off the scales when an iron weight fell from somewhere and rang on the steel platform. Attached to the weight was a string, and from the string dangled a piece of lined from the tail of a shirt.

Free Trade and Free Riot.

The book issued by the Democratic Congressional Committee for the instruction of that party's speakers and the enlightenment of the users in the present campaign contains 277 pages almost entirely devoted to two subjects.

About one-third of the volume is filled with resumes of the American army's conduct in the Philippines. The remainder is chiefly devoted to denunciation of the power of protection to home industries. Imperialism is described as a humbug and worse than protection.

The head and front of the army's offending, from the viewpoint of the Democratic authors of the book, evidently is that it put down lawlessness and restored peace and order in the islands.

The Democratic constitution for this policy is, of course, that we should leave the islands at once and permit the people to resume their head-cutting diversions, which we so cruelly interrupted.

Because, while the American people have prospered under the protective policy as never before in their history, trusts have also flourished, these Democratic leaders would also substitute for it a system free trade.

"Free trade," they observe, "would open our markets to benefit our own country." Free trade is their remedy for trusts and all the ills they ascribe to protection. Free trade with all the world is the goal they set for the nation and to which they promise the Democratic party will lead.

The American people have had, however, considerable experience of free trade under the auspices of free trade and free riot, and do not care for any more.—Chicago Inter Ocean.

The Farmer's Way.

It is rather noticeable that the Democratic papers are not resorting this year to their time honored custom of telling the honest farmer that he is the victim of protection and free rule. Things have come the farmer's way so directly during the present administration of affairs that the old Democratic wail would be worse than a poor joke. His lands have increased in value more than ..... per cent, and everything the farm produces sells at prices far in advance of those ruled in the days of free trade. The Indiana farmers are also in favor of letting good enough alone.—Terre Haute Tribune.

Bringing It Home.

When Horace Mann made a famous speech for the enlistment of a battleship that had cost many thousand dollars devoted to the reformation of bad boys, he said: "If all the money which has been spent upon this battleship results in the reformation of one boy, it is money well spent. Somebody said to him: 'Mr. Mann, do you think one boy is worth all this money?' He replied: 'Yes, if it is my boy or your boy.'—Primary Education.

Russian Puzzle.

Why the Russian nobleman wantlin his American wife with a millionaire dower of $70,000 should address his application to the president of the American bank usurd is one of those puzzles when nobody can a nonsense and a sentimental sadness and hard up can possibly unravel.—New York Tribune.

What Do They Want?

The tariff reformers should at once designate what duties should be lowered and how much. Congress is expected to agree within thirty days after convening, these tariff reformer editors seem to be able to agree within a number of days. If the reformers want to hit high prices, they will have to hit farm produce. The understanding is that the prices of everything had been low there would have been no tariff discussion. Therefore the reformers must want lower prices. If this be true they should sell on a cut prices means cross down. Prices are always up ..... good times are in prosperous times. Do they want poverty sent?—Los Angeles Times.

OLD CRIME REVIVED.

EVIDENCE FOUND IN MURDER CASE MANY YEARS OLD.

Sheriff in Indiana Claims to Know Who Killed Sweetest McNeith, Near Old City, Ind., in 1904. The Clattered Water Tunnel Completed.

The murder of the daughter of Sweetest McNeith near Old City, Ind., which has been considered one of the most mysterious crimes in Indiana, is said to have been solved by Sheriff Lee Hunter, who claims to have evidence of a confession of Frank Hunter, a brother of the murdered girl, which is sufficient to convict him. Mr. McNeith, who was a farmer, was murdered in his home in the year 1904. The girl was found dead in her bed with her throat cut and her head almost severed from her body. Her mother was also found in her bed with her throat cut, but she recovered from her wounds. Her brother, Frank, was found in the house with his throat cut, but he recovered from his wounds and was tried for the murder of his sister. He was acquitted and left the country. Sheriff Hunter, who is a nephew of the murdered girl, has been working on the case for years, and he claims that he has now secured the evidence that will convict the murderer. The sheriff has been sworn to secrecy as to the identity of the person he has in view, but it is said that he has secured a letter from Hazleton to Los Angeles, Cal., in which the writer of the letter is told to go to Mexico City, where he will be safe from the sheriff. The letter was signed "Frank." The sheriff has been working on the case for years, and he claims that he has now secured the evidence that will convict the murderer. BEAVER ISLAND NEWS.

Mrs. Capt. McCartney made a trip to Charlevoix last week.

Mr. John Gillespie and Charles Gordon were in attendance at circuit court last week as jurors.

W. T. Gallagher and Capt. Frank Lett returned from business trips to the mainland on Tuesday last.

Our doughty Capt. Pete is still making his regular three trips per week and says he will continue to as long as he can make his rounds.

Dr. A. M. Wilkinson and wife returned from Charlevoix last Tuesday where the doctor went to attend the Charlevoix County Medical Society.

Great preparations are being made for a proper celebration of the Christmas Holiday this year by the children under the direction and efficient management of the Sisters.

Capt. John McCann's new house is nearly ready for occupancy. The plastering is done and the inside finish is largely completed. The captain and his family hope to keep Christmas in their new home.

Mr. Wilson Stevens, manager of the Beaver Island Lumber Co., arrived on Tuesday with his wife and daughter, and will make their home permanently on the island. He formerly occupied by Mr. Frank B. Mayer. Mr. Stevens will get a building under way for a home this winter ready for occupancy by spring.

The steamboat Mark B. Covell, of Manistee, was in port the 11th and 12th inst. with a cargo of machinery for the new mill and supplies for the company's store. Four or five employes of the new company with their families also arrived and until they can get settled in their new homes will stop at the Beaver Hotel.

Rev. Father Zugelder has the finishing work on the new Parish alone house about completed and will move into it by New Year. Great credit is due the Father for his push and perseverance in accomplishing so much building and other improvements on the Parish property during the short time of his pastorate here.

Mr. A. Staley of the Island meat market made a trip to the mainland to make purchases for his market, which he will continue to run through the winter in the same business the and altogether satisfactory manner for which Mr. Staley is famous. Beaver Island is well and favorably situated in having so good and experienced meat cutter.

The case of Mr. Jas. Gibson, who went to Ann Arbor under the direction of his physician here has attracted quite wide-spread attention in University Medical circles. The case proves to be one of considerable rarity, the diagnosis of Tuberculous sore throat being made by the celebrated Microscopist, Dr. A. S. Warthin, to whom a section of the diseased tissue was sent.

Some idea of the amount of business coming to the Island this winter may be had from the statement of the shipping clerk of the Beaver Island Lumber Company, on Tuesday, when he stated that over 200 men will be employed—that the present plant acquired by purchase from W. F. Gill will be greatly enlarged and improved and a new mill constructed at once for the manufacture of shingles, that a railroad is in process of construction from their plant to their timber lands, and a number of camps will be fitted up in the early spring for the cutting and skidding of the timber to the right of way and water.

A Million Voices

Could hardly express the thanks of Homer Hall, of West Point, Ia., for ten why. A severe cold had settled on his lungs, causing a most obstinate cough. Several physicians had to be consumption, but could not help him. It's positively guaranteed for coughs, colds and lung troubles. Price 50c. and $1.00. Trial bottles free at F. G. Hines & Co.

NORTHERN MICHIGAN.

Elk Rapids Progress: The deal for another summer resort at the south end of Torch lake has been consummated, Mr. Wm. H. Bennett, of Montrose, Mich., having purchased 50 acres of the lake frontage from the farms of Geo. and Lewis T. Brown.

Northport Leader: A quantity of new species of trout was received today from the U. S. Fish Commission and placed in the fish pond for consumption. They are the Loch Leven, imported from the highlands of Scotland and are not now known much in Michigan. They attain a size of from 5 to 6 pounds weight and live and thrive along with brook trout. If they do well we shall have some of the finest trout swimming here in the village or any place in the State.

Mrs. Mary Kearney, of Boyne Falls, met with a peculiar accident which resulted in death. She was going to her home on Saturday evening, and in ascending Pelock hill she stumbled and got her leg. She lay there all night and the next morning was found dead, having died to death.

Less than a year ago W. H. Dingman bought an 81.500 farm near Cadillac, paying $100 down. Today he has the deed in his pocket, owns 25 head of cattle, three teams of horses and a full outfit of farm tools and owes but $600 on the lot, with enough produce and hay now in hand to pay off the whole. He has also leased 160 acres adjoining and next year will plant the whole in potatoes. He expects to live it on six thousand dollars to the good at the close of next season. And the land he has it on is what they call the "prize harvest."

Mrs. L. H. White, of Harlor Springs, was artistically robbed recently while strolling a fire with gasoline. With her clothing all aflame she had presence of mind enough to roll out of the house and roll herself in the snow, thus escaping a horrible death.

Northbound Pere Marquette express No 1, which leaves Traverse City at 12:05 was crowded Friday of afternoon at Comfort. As the train, running rapidly, swung round the curve at that point it collided with a number of freight cars of No. 35 mixed which had been left standing on the siding, but which had loosened from the brakes and run through the switch onto the main line. Fireman Ed. Thayer jumped from the engine and escaped injury. Joshua Mahoney engineer, stayed by his post, setting the brakes, and also escaped unhurt, although the engine was badly damaged and the timber from the freight cars flew around the engine cab. Three freight cars were completely demolished. The passengers received severe jolts and were thrown out of their seats by the force of the collision but none were injured.

Traverse City Eagle: After a year and a half of hard labor, success has crowned the effort of Dr. C. J. Kneland to establish a canning factory in Traverse City. The building of the factory is assured by the organization of the Traverse City Canning Co. The company is capitalized at $25,000. There are but three stockholders, Dr. Kneland, Jay Hamm and Mr. Morgan. The company has purchased a three-cornered piece of property, containing about one and three quarters acres on Hall street and adjacent to the Pere Marquette and M. & N. R. railroads, which insures excellent shipping facilities. It is also convenient to the dock of the Northern Michigan Transportation Co. Contracts for the building of the factory will be called for without any delay, so that the factory will be in shape to handle next season's crop. The factory will consist of two buildings each 40x125 feet and two stories high. The main building will have two wings each 30x100 feet. The capacity will be 50,000 cans per 10 hours in the busy season. It will run nights and Sundays. Will give employment to 200 hands. The company will do a general canning business. Contracts will be secured this winter for 30 acres each of corn, beans and tomatoes. All kinds of fruit will be purchased and canned. Several contracts have already been secured.

HOW THEY GOT GOOD ROADS.

A Scheme That Might Be Tested in Every Township.

Richmond township, Macomb county, according to Senator Early, claims the honor of having the best roads in Michigan, and one energetic man gets the credit for it all.

Elected highway commissioner against his protest, he accepted the position and proceeded to justify the wisdom of the voters. First he induced the township board to buy a first-class graver pit; then he hoaged and the roads, putting carefully their effects. Following this, Mr. Commissioner, as he met farmer A. B and C. down to farmer X. Y. and Z. accosted them thus:

"See here, John, I want you to go to the pit, get a load of gravel and fill up that mud hole in front of your house!

Mr. Commissioner followed this scheme persistently until he had patched of good roads all over the township. The next problem was to unite the patches. He asked the township board to agree to pay the farmers $1 per day for working on the roads in winter, but was assured that it would be useless, as no farmer would lend his team out and work a day for any such sum. "Never you mind, will you pay the money?"

"Yes," they would.

The result was that in the course of one winter, Richmond township put out $1,800 for 1800 day's work on her roads.

The argument used by Mr. Commissioner when Mr. Doubtful objected to the small pay, was:

"Gentlemen, you are working for yourself and getting a dollar a-hoe."

He won. The farmers found they could haul heavier loads on the frozen ground and a great deal was accomplished for a little money. During that winter gravel was placed on one side of the road only, saving roads for travel and later the other side was treated in like manner.

That is how Richmond township secured her good roads.—Lowell Ledger.

Second Cousin Sarah

BY THE AUTHOR OF ANN JUDGE, SPINSTER, "LITTLE BAYS STORY" ETC., ETC.

CHAPTER VI.

Sarah Rinehart did not go to Wormsnee. So much good, she said, she had promised to accompany her cousin Hesden.

Did Sid know when she came into the hall, by himself, with a small over the bonnet, and a cloak on her arm?

The cabin had come and Sarah Rinehart had a little to spare with her cousin, in such a strange quietness which was not like her usual manner. Sid was not at all a good companion on Cousin Hesden's mind. Sid was the young man who had brought about the trouble between Sarah and Hesden.

Sid was the young man who had a bad habit of drinking, which was the cause of his being discharged from his place in the storehouse, and then the old woman was sad for sake. A fortnight had passed and Sid was the face of the never had seen Sid out of his senses.

"Hesden—cousin—I'm sorry you had such difficulties; and running in such weather."

"Why is sorry, Sarah? Not—I'm better, gone?"

Yes.

Sarah Rinehart regretted sadness and the gentleman, and was sorry for Sid. Sid was a good man, if he did drink too much, and yet his time and it was a shame for Hesden to be so disappointed, which followed would not necessitate the old Mr. Rinehart's death.

The woman was attached upon the old man, and was in fear lest the shock of the consequence would be fatal. The old man was a hard man, and was not on good terms with great gravity of manner, as she remarked Sid's conduct, and Hesden's conduct.

"Sid—Hesden to be just—is a strange acquaintance of your cousin, Sarah," said Hesden, as they left the cabin.

"Sid is a good man, Hesden, and I think he is a strong man."

"Sid—Sid—Sid—Sarah—Sid—Sid—Sid

Sultan a Poor Paymaster.

An official investigation proves that 75 per cent of all the employes of the state in Turkey—that is, the officers and men of the army and navy, the gendarmerie and police forces and all members of all branches of the civil service—never receive more than half of the salaries and wages due to them. Twenty-six per cent obtain from seven to ten months' salary in the year, and the remaining 1 per cent are kept by getting their full pay.

A Use for Clams.

The Ohio penitentiary managers and economists, says the Cincinnati Enquirer, had been wondering what to do with the crops of breakfast that were left out every time the town prisoners sat down to a meal. They desired to get to the crust off all bread and make the crust into bread pudding. Since this information has worked its way through the prison the piles of leftover crusts are daily increasing.

English Village Sold Cheap.

A Yorkshire village has been sold at Stockton for the sum of $1,510, which seems cheap enough for such a desirable lot. As the auctioneer remarked, to be able to refer to "my village in Yorkshire" was alone worth the money, apart from the substantial compensation of a farmhouse and buildings and sixteen acres of grass land, ten dwelling houses, four cottages, several small gardens and a blacksmith's shop.

Switzerland's Liberal School System.

The public schools in Berne, and are operated by the government, and civil service rules are strictly applied. The teachers, who are mostly women, are very well paid and never charged school fees. Pupils who get an odd three-cent tooth then are penalized heavily. The result is that the country has an excellent corps of teachers.

World Growing Very Small.

The British cable between Canada and Australia has been completed, and Marconi thinks he will soon have regular communication through the air between Nova Scotia and England. So the world grows smaller, it is true, and the brotherhood of the nations is brought nearer from out the dim future where poets have seen it in their dreams.

Many Hunchbacks in the World.

Spain has the most hunchbacks of any country. In one small village at the foot of the Sierra Morena there is one in every thirteen inhabitants. Whether, in the neighborhood of the Lodge, has a great many people suffering from deformities, it has been reckoned that there are a million hunchbacks in the world at present.

Train Rushed Through Torrent.

During a recent heavy rain the New York & Harlem railroad tracks in Irvington were suddenly flooded to an unusual depth and traffic was seriously impeded. A north-bound mail dashed down a grade and encountered the torrent, of which the crew had been given no warning. The momentum of the train carried it through the inundated section without damage.

Zola Not Popular in Paris.

A public subscription for a monument to Zola now amounts to about 37,000 francs.

Eggs in Missouri.

A Boone County hen owned by Jack Grissom has produced a novelty in the form of an "egless egg." The shell was perfect, but when broken open was found to have no contents. The production of such fruit is a species of enterprise which Missouri farmers will hardly approve of their hens.

White Girls "Burden."

At the Atchison, Kas., carnival one of the attractions was an Indian girl orchestra from one of the government schools in Arizona. Some of the girls were full bloods and some were half-half said. "I am just as good as the breeds. Two of them got to quarreling over some small matter and one beat out the other with a hair switch."

Instinct of Birds.

The principal routes taken by migratory birds, as registered in books of natural history, show a wonderful geographical instinct on the part of the feathered bloods, as they take, for the most part, the seas and oceans in their narrowest and the river valleys at their longest.

A Butterfly Farm.

Near Scarborough a farm exists for rearing moths and butterflies. Half an acre of land has been planted with trees and shrubs for the purpose. In their season the stock of caterpillars is 20,000. From 30,000 to 40,000 preserved insects are kept in reserve, so that butterflies and moths can be supplied irrespective of the time of year.

Petroleum in Place of Coal.

An effort is being made to secure legislation to compel the use of petroleum instead of coal in London. The fogs from which the city so often suffers through its interference with both business and health is caused by the unburned particles of soot from its chimneys.

Postage stamp collecting has been sold in Hamburg for $125,000, which is believed to be the largest philatelic transaction on record. The collection was that of the European stamps of the Count of Pribyslaw, a vice president of the London Philatelic society.

A Letter-Writing Nation.

This is a nation of letter writers. Otherwise the estimate of the postmaster general of the entire appropriation for postmasters in the United States would not approach the total of $46,000,000 for the mail service plus the complete sum of mail expenditure amounting into hundreds of millions of dollars. Not for postage, but for the mere pleasure of writing letters.

Suggestive Names.

The Cockscomb mountains of British Honduras, in some sense an unknown part of the famous Mahogany coast, are undergoing a process of christening which will identify them for all time with the beginning of the twentieth century. One range has just been named the Queen Alexandra mountains, another range takes the name of the Prince of Wales, and a 4,000 foot peak has been named Mount Joseph Chamberlain.

Some Valuable Hints.

If your cellar is as will as healthy for the children, it is damp. It will do no value that delicacy, saville, which turns in much moldy, suggests the bathroom dental. Water in the cellar can be used for the purpose and entertainments of ducks, which are palatable; these few hints may suffice to suggest some profitable industry in housekeeping.

How is This for Rent?

For a spacious 35 foot side and 110 foot deep, a block distant from Herald square, New York city, beginning with May 1, 1903, a railroad will for the coming three years, pay $75,000 as annual rental. Architects for the business company are drawing plans to transform the room into what it is asserted will be the finest ticket office in the United States.

Waltz of French Origin.

The controversy lasting centuries that papers as to the origin of the waltz was settled by the discovery that the waltz was first danced at the French court on Nov. 8, 1716, when it was announced as the composition of a French courtier who called it "Volta." Heretofore it has been generally assumed that the waltz originated on the blue danube or thereabouts.

Three Lions in Hot Pursuit.

A menagerie in the Temple Square at Thirty-third street managed to make their way into a neighboring cage in which a panther was lodged. A terrible fight ensued, and, despite the efforts of the keepers, the panther was literally torn to pieces by the intruders.

What Determination Can Do.

Dr. John Clifford, a famous English preacher, when eleven years old, began to work as an ordinary "hand" in a lace factory. At sixteen he was messenger of the lace warehouse department, later he became a bookkeeper, and then began the studies which enabled him to become a great preacher.

The Tallest Corn Stalk.

John Martin of Platte county, Missouri, is looking for the man who can produce a taller corn than was raised by him on his farm. Some stalks which he recently exhibited measured seventeen feet, grown from seed which he procured in Mexico, and Mr. Martin claims the belt.

The Indian Chief Tammany.

Tammany lived to the seventeenth century. He was a native of Delaware, but settled on the banks of the Ohio river. He was a chief noted for his tribe, and his reign was discreet and peaceful. His great maxim was: "Unite, in peace unite for mutual happiness, in war, for mutual defense."

Automobiles and Dust.

In a study and discussion of dust French scientists are pointing out that the quantity of minute particles raised and suspended in the air has been greatly increased in urban communities by the advent of the automobile. They estimate that one automobile stirs up as much dust as twenty carriages.

Confusing.

The lettuces are always telling about the early bird getting the worm, as if it were a moral lesson. But they have nothing to say about the early worm, and how's a fellow to know whether he will be the early worm or the early bird? Philosophy is a skin game.—St. Paul Dispatch.

A Building for the Smiths.

Representatives of the smith family have applied for space for a building at the World's Fair at St. Louis, to be the headquarters of the smiths, of that great family which claims the exposition. Some genius has calculated that there are 14,000,000 Smiths in the world.

New British Coaling Station.

Sierra Leone is to be a British coaling station, and it is intended permanently to attach a gunboat and a cruiser to it. The fortress at Sierra Leone has for some time past been strengthened by the erection of some of the most modern guns of heavy caliber.

All in One Man's Hands.

The mounting for sixty guns and guns in coast fortifications are so designed and constructed as to throw into the power of one man, in so far as possible, the whole control of directing the gun at the desired target and firing it when ready, says the Engineering Magazine.

Spanish Wedding Custom.

An Expensive Medal.

As a medal a Munich artist has struck a fullgowns ton from a mosaic. The animal said 12 pounds of beautiful fatty and drained 10 guineas of milk. The cost of its food and its keeper's pay is $19 a day. The menagerie is to receive $1,500 if the lion dies.

How to Use Dogs.

Senator Hoar was talking about Massachusetts visitors about Washington one day and was telling of a straightforward old rustic who was sued by a Boston and college shady lawyer of his time. "Why," was asked, "was he able to hold a lawyer like this?" "He pulled." "Yes," replied the senator, "by the scruff and by pressing."

HEIR'S UNIQUE PLAN.

BALKS DESIRES OF QUARRELING, COVETOUS RELATIVES.

Revenues Legacy of $400,000 Cannot Prejudice Him to Their Importunities—Distribution Only Among Poor Who Will Appreciate Money Most Is Path.

The world is full of quarrelling relatives over a bequest of a million dollars, or even thousands. Yet a Pittsburgh man has found a way to balk the greed of his kin. He has signed into the hands of his lawyer a document which will be opened in a few days after his death, by which all his property, amounting to $400,000, is to be given away to the poor who will appreciate it most and who will not be able to use it to cause trouble among his relatives. The document is in the form of a letter addressed to the executors of his estate, and it reads as follows:

"Pittsburgh, Pa., ——, 190—.

"To the Executors of my Estate:

"Gentlemen: I have made no will, and I do not intend to make one, for I know that if I do my relatives will be at each other's throats, quarrelling over the money I leave, and I do not want to cause them any trouble of that kind. I have a sufficiency of money for my needs, and I do not want my relatives to think I am trying to buy their love with my money, for I am not. I know that if I do not make a will my relatives will be disappointed, but I do not care for that, as I know that if I do make a will they will be disappointed and I will be cursed instead of being forgotten, as I will be if I do not make a will. I know that my relatives will be disappointed if I do not make a will

NORWOOD NEWS.

John Parsons left on Thursday last for London, Canada, to visit relatives.

Will Hudson, of Alden, is spending the holidays with his aunt, Mrs. Mary Bissell.

Albert Harwood, who has been very ill, is improving.

Jamie Wilkinson, who is attending school at Lansing is home for the holidays.

Allen Greenman leaves for Iowa today—well, the rest we will report later.

Invitations are out for Mr. and Mrs. Wm. Perkett's 25th wedding anniversary. It occurs on Saturday evening, Dec. 27th.

Perhaps one of the saddest accidents that has occurred for some time was at the home of A. Van Deheldes, the owner John who was assisting him to digging a well, slipped and fell in head first, falling a distance of 26 feet, causing his death. He lived 24 hours.

Attended but a school meeting on Monday evening for the purpose of hiring another teacher. Miss Dykstra gets the position.

The Grand Traverse Bay Telephone Company will in a few days have their wires so far north as Norwood. Subscribers will be connected to Charlevoix early in the spring.

NORTHERN MICHIGAN

Papers have been prepared and will be filed within a day or two for the incorporation of the Harwood & Hoe Theater Co., Ltd., of Petoskey with a capital stock of $30,000. The incorporators of this company are G. M. Harwood and wife, H. D. Hoe and wife and W. F. Hopkins. A modern theatre will be built.

The hardwood industries in the North have for a number of years had to meet sharp competition and low prices for hardwood from the South, but of late owing to the diminishing supply of available good stock, the prices in all sections are rapidly advancing. There is little doubt that the hardwood holdings of the Davis Ward estate, will actually bring in more than sell the place even.

Central Lake Torch: Eight good farmers up in Banks township have combined and purchased a hay press machine will press their own hay and be independent of the avaricious hay press man. They may also earn a little pin money on the side by doing an occasional stroke for their less fortunate neighbors. We understand that John Spreek is one of the chief conspirators.

By the death of Alexander Campbell which occurred lately at the home of his son, Alex., on Douglass street, miles from Elk Rapids on the east side of the Lake in Antrim county, the Grand Traverse region loses one of its oldest, most widely known and respected pioneers. In June 1855, Mr. Campbell came to the Grand Traverse region and settled on a farm about five miles from Elk Rapids, then a part of Grand Traverse region.

Cheboygan county is cheery because Steven Tomlin, one of the leading farmers on the east side of Mullet Lake this season raised a crop of wheat on a two acre lot. When it was threshed it measured 507 bushels. The thresher disputed his claim that the wheat was produced from ten acres and went and measured the ground themselves and according to their survey it was a little less of the ten acres by a few rods, showing that the crops averaged over 50 bushels to the acre.

The M. E. church of Central Lake Rev. J. D. Deets pastor, has lately put a large receiver on the telephone which may have placed in the church about 20 feet away from the pulpit. This telephone is on what is called the farmers circuit, whose patrons are mostly on one wire and are called by different signals. If you want to hear what is going on, take the receiver down and hear anybody talking with anyone. The first Sabbath that the phone was used in the church there were 200 phone listeners, and every one could hear the sermon, singing, and entire exercises perfectly. The six listeners in the church made sounds audible as if all were present in the church and the only point lacking was that no collection could be taken up phone.

Nothing Doing.

The Tariff Tinker snatches the Dinner Pail in vain for anything which shelters these great monopolies.

The Safe Plan.

Those who are clamoring for revision will not in any event be pacified by the passing of one stalwart protective law. The real truth is that this clamor had its origin among free trade Democrats. They worked up the same sort of a movement in 1893 and when the Republicans made a revision, in harmony, as they believed, with the principles of protection, these free trade Democrats used the fact that this reduction hurt certain industries to array some industries against the Republican party and thereby defeat it. The entirely safe plan is to ignore free trade clamor, stand by prosperity and such a safe and sane revision will come when it is made such tariff changes as experience shows it certainly desirable in the aligned tariff revision to warrant Republican nominations.—Toledo Times.

Dolliver's Quiet Attitude.

Senator Dolliver occupies a peculiar attitude. He thinks the tariff ought to be modified on account of the superfluous revenue on the floor of the treasury and then in the next breath he says he is not alarmed about the tariff, that they will work out their own salvation or destruction. The Iowa platform calls for modification of the tariff in all the trusts and now the senator says there are no trusts or at least none near saying that. The explanation is that Dolliver does not believe in modifying the tariff, but thinks the people want it done—and his relief in regard to trusts is one common to a good many people. The senator however in answering Spooner and Henderson admitted that he did not believe it possible for a Republican congress, meeting in December next, to reconsider and revise the tariff. He agrees with both the senator and speaker in admitting that there are known schedules at which the axe should much needed debate, and that it is time to get together. However, there are a good many Republicans who will be unable to get together so long as the idea nonsense is going around to the effect that McKinley was the sixteenth author of the Ode. Such pure form, the Bob statement are disposition to the immigration of modern Mother Goose.

Working Girls in Turkestan.

In Turkestan every wedding engagement begins with the payment of a substantial consideration to the girl's parents. If the girl pits her lover the impression of her foot is to be reserved unless the parents have another daughter to give as a substitute.

Always.

The number of sheep in the United States has increased twenty millions since the repeal of the Wilson tariff. A corresponding tariff always did increase the wealth of the farmer—Hilton (Ind.) Republican.

—Petoskey Daily news: Monday morning's southbound Pere Marquette freight seems to have been specially unlucky. In preparing to make up the train in the morning the engine run amuck from the turn table thus delaying her departure until about 10 o'clock. The train had reached a point several rods this side of the Charlevoix station when something broke and flag, eleven cars of the train were derailed and piled in various attitudes on and around the tracks.

—The fire department was called out Wednesday afternoon to fight an obstinate little fire on Mason street. The house owned by the widow Wisley, and occupied by W. W. Washburn, caught fire in the kitchen part, and was well ablaze before the alarm was given. The fire succeeded in getting into the roof of the main part, but did not get below. The fire boys did excellent work, as usual. Mr. Washburn and wife were absent in Lansing, and Mr. Washburn's father, with his wife, were keeping house. Much of the furniture was removed.

—Instead of using Shakers at Christmas time have discovered a new method of fooling. The fee being clear, the fish are discriminate, and as the instinct of fear seems the strongest of the approach of the figure above the ice, he "takes to the heels," as it were, and the skater to his and fancy. The fugitive till he overtakes him or drops into an air-hole. The pursued takes along the surface till, tired out, he stops to cool and the skater, coming a hole in the ice, knocks him in the head with a club or takes him with a spear. The fun matchless attention is invited to this new plan of fishing. If it was right for a Charlevoix fish warden to permit a man fishing a trout that bit his nose while he was staking his three from a hole in the ice, those Coldwater chaps should be made to sweat. We have always said—and we'll stick to it—that blue should be impartially administered.

—The Beaver Island Lumber Co. of St. James, has been incorporated with a capital stock of $75,000. This is the company which is planning extensive operations in timber on the island, even to the extent of building a railroad six miles in length.

—Here is something worth knowing: When a splinter has been driven deeply into the tissue it can be extracted without pain by steam. Near ly fill a wide mouthed bottle with hot water, place the injured part over the mouth and press tightly. The suction will draw the flesh down and in a minute or two the steam will extricate the splinter and the inflammation together.

—We notice that many of our exchanges have very properly resolved that they will omit "crumbs of comfort." Of course, it is all a matter of taste. But it really good taste for friends of a dead person to print public "cards of thanks" for those who may do a simple, neighborly duty in caring for the deceased in his last hours or in ministering to the comfort of the mourning friends?

—The sonorous sounds of the steamer John Spry and the answering shrieks of the bridge whistle disturbed the village at six o'clock Tuesday evening. The Spry arrived from Manitowoc and went directly to Boyne City. As we go to press the Spry is loaded again with lumber, and expects to clear for Chicago to-night, weather permitting. If this sailing it looks as if she would have good weather. This, in all probability, will be the latest winter cargo clearance on record for this port. The Spry will make an effort to get back to Boyne City.

—There is no use dangling the fact that War E. Curtis, in the Chicago Record-Herald of Dec. 20th, gives the best cigar "insurgents" a very black eye, and Cuban reciprocity a corresponding black eye, taking the sea. The Charlevoix Sugar Co.'s prospectus. Mr. Curtis finds it difficult to reconcile the statement that Cuban reciprocity would cripple an "infant industry" with the statement in the affore and prospectus that beet sugar factories will pay from 50 to 80 per cent dividends. While the SENTINEL has never favored the so-called Cuban reciprocity to the extent of discussion the injuries their favor as against any other independent nation, it has held and now holds that the best sugar industry in the country cannot be perceptibly injured by the proposed twenty per cent reduction on Cuban sugar. Much more than twenty tack has been blister and burn, comb, and cannot stand the searchlight of investigation. Viewing it in the light of "justice to Cuba," the tariff on the Antilles has had all the "justice" the deserves, and should be made to take what comes with the independence that American blood and American money has given her. Let Cuba stand on her own legs or fall down.

—Sam Jones tells the following story of how he came to join the Methodists and Methodists: "Before I was a Christian I learned one thing and I want you to know it. Man is away from home and was robbed in the train, I had all the money and my friend back had. He didn't have any. They got mine and we got all of the next station. That was when I was a sinner and they were saints. I was a sinner, and I was a sinner, and I was a sinner, and

"Well, I declare!" said Sarah Jane, as Mary Hollard, in her pretty blue dress, came down the stairs to breakfast one morning about the middle of June, and stood before her with a little courtesy and a smile that was half shy and half mischievous. "Why, Sarah Jane!" said Mr. Hezekiah Bunce, who was at his second cup of coffee, and was reading the Hopeville Herald, "what's the matter with her? She looks—she looks—why, she looks—she looks—well, she looks—she looks—she looks—

NOVEMBER RESULTS.

SIGNIFICANCE OF THE ELECTIONS OF 1902.

It is in the States of the Middle West and Far West That Republicanism Shows the Largest Gains and the Greatest Strength.

Perhaps some of the political logicians who so confidently figure out of the returns of the election of November 4 a pressing demand for tariff revision at the hands of the Republican party would do well to review their calculations. It has been the world over and over again that the West is the chief storm center of tariff revision sentiment. The vote in this year's election does not bear out that contention. It is a curious and significant fact that the West shows tremendous Republican gains. Let us compare results in 1894, with results in 1902. Both being mid-Presidential years, the comparison is fairer and more instructive than that between 1900 and 1902. Of the fifteen States west of the Mississippi river the Republicans carried eight and the Democrats seven four years ago. This year but one of those States, the so-called "Cotton Colony" of Nevada has been carried by the Democrats. The majorities in the fifteen trans-Mississippi States in 1894 and 1902, respectively, were as follows:

Iowa	70,000	.....	80,000	.....
Minnesota	20,000	.....	35,000	.....
South Dakota	7,000	.....	15,000	.....
North Dakota	2,000	.....	10,000	.....
Nebraska	.....	2,000	5,000	.....
Kansas	15,000	.....	40,000	.....
Colorado	.....	42,000	8,000	.....
Montana	.....	2,000	2,000	.....
Wyoming	2,000	.....	2,000	.....
Idaho	.....	1,000	3,000	.....
Utah	.....	1,000	6,000	.....
Nevada	.....	500	.....	500
California	19,000	.....	50,000	.....
Oregon	10,000	.....	15,000	.....
Washington	1,000	.....	10,000	.....
Total major.	.....	.....	280,000	500
Net	128,500	49,500	279,500	500

Here is a majority of 128,000 in 1894. The total Republican majorities in these national States in 1902, when only eight out of the fifteen were Republican, were 279,000. This year the Republicans carry fourteen out of the fifteen States and the total majority has swollen to 279,000, while the Democratic majority of 49,000 in seven states four years ago has fallen to a paltry 500 in a single state, Nevada, in 1902! Does that look as though the itch for tariff tinkering was epidemic in the West? The answer must be No, when we consider that to the fifteen trans-Mississippi States the Republicans have this year added forty-nine and the Democrats nine Representatives in Congress. Four years ago the Republicans elected forty and the Democrats twelve. In spite of the fact that Congressional representation has increased by seven the total number of Representatives from these States the Democrats lose three and the Republicans gain nine as compared with four years ago.

States west of the Mississippi river that six years ago were rated as solidly and safely Democratic and were relied upon with certainty for Bryan electoral votes have been turned to the Republican party one by one until in 1902 but one of the trans-Mississippi States is carried by the Democrats. What has wrought this tremendous revolution in the central and far western states? The answer is production and its fruits. There is not the slightest doubt of this. In these States the efforts of The American Protective Tariff League have for several years been especially concentrated. The facts of protection prosperity have been persistently and effectively brought home to the voters in these States. They have found out what protection means to them. They are sending increased delegations of protectionists to represent them in Congress. What for? To tear down protection? To tinker the Dingley tariff? To unsettle business, to demolish the consumption of farm products and to lower prices? Is that what the great central west and the great far west have been doing? The man who thinks so is blind and deaf to obvious facts and conditions. Tariff reform clearly is not strong in the agricultural and mining States of the West. There they stand for the tariff as it is, for protection and prosperity. Protection to the West saved the lower House to the Republican party in 1894. It has done it again in 1902. Protection will always save the Republican party. Anything short of it will always rub the Republican party and the country.

A Pretty Screen.

A beautiful and not especially expensive screen is one of the attractions in a woman's studio. The frame is plain, dark wood, with a dull finish. The filling is made of India print curtains, stretched plainly, with closed no fullness. The curtains are cut out to fit the panels, no attention being paid to the pattern, which adds to the quaintness of the effect.

Morally but Not Physically Mystic.

Some people, evidently not of the best moral training, have been visiting Harry Hudnutt's museum and helping themselves to Hood's excellent cultivated hens, ducks and roosters. We has shot a couple of them in the air to frighten, but more ways than from this on they want to keep their cost tails down.—Elston Comet.

Has Long Voting Record.

Silas W. Wood of Iowa Falls, has cast his ballot for eighteen presidential candidates, a record held by comparatively few men. Mr. Wood's first vote was in Wayne county, Indiana, in 1844, which he voted for Henry Clay.

Diplomat Once Star Pitcher.

John Hay, John Hay, the new Chinese minister to the United States, was once the star pitcher in the Philips academy baseball team when it was regarded as the best organization of its kind in Massachusetts. This was twenty years ago.

Mitchell Is With a Book.

John Mitchell will write a book on "Organized Labor," to be issued in the spring September 1903.

FOLLY OF REVISION

NO CONDITION CALLS FOR TARIFF TINKERING.

Scripture Says: "They That Be Well Need Not a Physician, But They That Are Sick."—The Country Is Too Healthy for Quack Remedies.

"The extraordinary prosperity of the country makes ridiculous any and all assertions that the tariff is so bad that it must be revised immediately to relieve the people of its burdens. In this simple sentence the New York Commercial Advertiser expresses the situation with truth and force. It is not true that the country is suffering because of tariff burdens or tariff inequalities. It is not true, because, as everybody knows, the country is phenomenally prosperous under the tariff as it is—so prosperous, indeed, that it has lifted up a portion of tariff agitation, and uncertainty as this time would seem to be an act of insanity, while forty Senator Burrows of Michigan was right in saying that the time to make modifications in tariff schedules is not when the country is everywhere prosperous, so that when business depression exists, which can be cured or alleviated by tariff changes. They that be whole need not a physician, but they that are sick." This country is not sick. It does not require the services of a tariff tinkering doctor. The product of a tariff revision at such a time would make business sick. Even the appointment of a commission to revise the tariff, as the Commercial Advertiser truly says, would create uncertainty and unsettle conditions. No business man would know what changes were contemplated or whether Congress would or would not concur in any recommendation of changes. No calculation beyond the immediate future could be formed and no contracts for a considerable period ahead could be made. Business would have, what business does not want and cannot endure—uncertainty. As Andrew Carnegie has expressed it, "A tariff consultation would have to be called something." Doing what? Doing something with the tariff, of course. But what it would do, business men would not know. Result, doubt, indecision, uncertainty. These are bad for business, bad for industry, bad for employment, and bad for wage paying.

Senator Scott of West Virginia the lately said:

"But there is one subject upon which I can speak for West Virginia, as represented in both branches of Congress. We are all agreed that we want no revision of the tariff. The Dingley law suits us right down to the ground. The Republicans who are scared about the tariff was Mr. Hoar of Massachusetts. The result was that his district elected a Democrat. I think that all Republicans should start firmly against all assaults upon our protective tariff."

It not this the manifestly correct stand for all Republicans? is it not the best stand to take for the country and for the party? Congressman Babcock thinks so. He wants an extra session of the Fifty-eighth Congress called the hour on the tariff. Senator Depew thinks the time has arrived when the tariff should be readjusted to meet changed conditions. We did that in 1897. We readjusted the tariff not only to meet changed conditions, but as a means of changing the then existing conditions. We succeeded in changing the conditions for the better and instead of a decrease of unparalleled prosperity. Shall we change conditions once more? If so, in what direction shall we change them? Certainly not for the better. Tariff revision downward has never been known to change conditions for the better. It has always changed them for the worse. It will do it again if the revision movement is persisted in. Tariff revision upward is the only sort of revision that has ever benefited the country. Nobody is pressing for tariff revision upward. Though it would mean an increase in the income would be distinctly advantageous, but nobody proposes that. If revised at all, the tariff is to be revised downward, always downward. The country does not want that, and if it is done, the country will suffer for it. This is no time to revise the tariff. Let prosperity alone for at least two years to come, and perhaps by that time we shall have become so accustomed to prosperity that we shall have grown to like it. At present it really seems as if some people could not endure it.

Edison's Idea of Hard Work.

Thomas A. Edison, the inventor, was a witness the other day in a suit which one phonograph company brought against another in New York. He was a very good-humored witness but his goodness was rather trying to the lawyers. Mr. Edison said he left the exam: "Well, I'd rather go out any time for a day's work than be a witness."

Marriage and Morals.

According to the full statistics just issued by the United States census for the year ending December 31, 1900, there were 7,092,000 married men and 6,878,000 married women living in the United States. Of these there were 1,114,000 married men and 1,114,000 married women who were living apart from each other, leaving 5,978,000 married men and 5,764,000 married women who were living together as husband and wife. Of the married men living apart from their wives 1,000,000 were married a second time, and of the married women living apart from their husbands 1,000,000 married a second time. Of the married men living together as husband and wife 5,000,000 married a second time, and of the married women living together as husband and wife 5

NOVEMBER RESULTS.

SIGNIFICANCE OF THE ELECTIONS OF 1902.

It is in the States of the Middle West and Far West That Republicans Showed the Largest Gains and the Greatest Strength.

Perhaps some of the political bodies who confidently figure out of the returns of the elections of November 4 a promising demand for tariff revision at the hands of the Democrats party would do well to revise their calculations. It has been assured over and over again that the West is the chief storm center of tariff revision sentiment. The vote at this year's election does not bear out that contention. It is a curious and significant fact that West Virginia, the mendous Republican gains. Let us compare results in 1902 with results in 1902. Both being mid-Presidential years, the comparison is fairer and more instructive than that between 1900 and 1902. Of the fifteen States west of the Mississippi river the Republicans carried eight and the Democrats seven four years ago. This year but one of those States, the so-called "rotten borough" of Nevada, has been carried by the Democrats. The majorities in the fifteen trans-Mississippi States in 1898 and 1902, respectively, were as follows:

Iowa	60,000	.....	70,000	.....
Minnesota	20,000	.....	35,000	.....
North Dakota	7,000	.....	15,000	.....
South Dakota	10,000	.....	15,000	.....
Nebraska	.....	1,000	2,000	5,000
Kansas	35,000	.....	40,000	.....
Colorado	.....	10,000	.....	4,000
Montana	.....	1,000	.....	2,000
Wyoming	1,000	.....	1,000	.....
Idaho	.....	1,000	.....	1,000
Utah	.....	2,000	.....	6,000
Nevada	2,000	.....	1,000	.....
California	20,000	.....	25,000	.....
Washington	15,000	.....	20,000	.....
Oregon	7,000	.....	12,000	.....
Total majority
Net Republican gain

Here is an extraordinary reversal. The total Republican majority in these identical States in 1898, when only eight out of the fifteen were Republican, were 74,000. This year the Republicans carry fourteen out of the fifteen States and the total majority has swollen to 276,000, while the Democratic majority of 49,000 in seven states four years ago has fallen to a paltry 500 in a single State, Nevada, in 1902? Does that look as though the itch for tariff tinkering was epidemic in the West? The answer must be No, when we consider that in the fifteen trans-Mississippi States the Republicans have this year elected forty-nine and the Democrats nine Representatives in Congress. Four years ago the Republicans elected forty and the Democrats twelve. In spite of the fact that Congressional representation has increased by seven the total number of Representatives from these States the Democrats lose three and the Republicans gain three as compared with four years ago.

States west of the Mississippi river that six years ago were raised as solidly and safely Democratic and were relied upon with certainty for Bryan electoral votes have turned to the Republican party one by one, until in 1902 but one of the fifteen States is carried by the Democrats. What has wrought this tremendous revolution in the central and far western states? The answer is protection and its fruits. There is not the slightest doubt of this. In these states the efforts of The American Protective Tariff League have for several years been especially concentrated. The facts of protection prosperity have been persistently and effectively brought home to the voters in these States. They have found out that protection means to them. They are sending increased delegations of protectionists to represent them in Congress. What for? To tear down protection? To tinker the Dingley tariff? To unsettle business, to disturb the consumption of farm products and to lower prices? Is that what the great central west and the great far west have been voting for? The man who thinks so is blind and deaf to obvious facts and conditions. Tariff reform clearly is not strong in the agricultural and mining States of the West. There they stand for the tariff as it is, for protection and prosperity. Protection to the West cured the lower House to the Republican party in 1894. It has done it again in 1902. Protection will always save and Republican party. Anything short of it will always rule the Republican party and the country.

A Beautiful Sight.

A beautiful and not especially expensive screen is one of the attractions in a women's studio. The frame is plain dark wood, with a dull finish. The filling is made of India print curtains, stretched plainly, with almost no fullness. The curtains are cut out to fit the spaces, no attention being paid to the pattern, which adds to the quaintness of the effect.

Morality But Not Physically Moral.

Some people, evidently not of the best moral training have been visiting Henry Bushnell's menagerie and judging themselves by Bush's method, emulated some ducks and even some ...ers. He has shot a couple of times in the air to frighten, but now he says from this on they want to keep their coat tails down.—Lisbon Comet.

FOLLY OF REVISION

NO CONDITION CALLS FOR TARIFF TINKERING.

Scripture Says: "They That Be Well Need Not a Physician, But They That Are Sick—The Country Is Too Healthy for Quack Remedies.

"The extraordinary prosperity of the country makes ridiculous any and all attempts that the party is to say that it must be revised immediately to relieve the people or its business to this single science the New York Commercial Advertiser expressed the situation with such sane force. It is not true that the country is suffering because of tariff burdens or tariff inequalities. It is not true, because, as everybody knows, the country is phenomenally prosperous under the tariff as it is—so prosperous, indeed, that to upset by a period of tariff agitation and uncertainty at this time would seem to be an act of incredible folly. Senator Burrows of Michigan was right in saying that the time to make modifications in tariff schedules is not when the country is everywhere prosperous, but when business depression exists, which can be cured or alleviated by tariff changes. They that be whole need not a physician, but they that are sick. This country is not sick. It does not require the services of a tariff tinkering doctor. The process of a tariff revision at such a time would make business sick. With the appointment of a commission to revise the tariff, as the Commercial Advertiser truly says, would create uncertainty and unsettle conditions. No business man would know what changes were contemplated or whether Congress would or would not compel in any recommendation of changes. No extensive deals would be made, no contracts would be formed and no contracts for new enterprises would about could be made. Business would have, what business does not want and cannot endure: uncertainty. As Andrew Carnegie has expressed it, "A tariff commission would have to do something." Doing what? Doing something with the tariff, of course; but what it would do, immense men would not know. Beyond doubt, indeed, uncertainty. These are bad for business, bad for industry, bad for employment and bad for wages-paying.

Senator Scott of West Virginia has lately said:

"But there is one subject upon which I can speak for West Virginia, as represented in both branches of Congress. We are all agreed that we want no changes in the tariff. The Dingley law suits us right down to the ground. The Republican wing got scared about the tariff was Mr. Flower of Massachusetts. The result was that his district elected a Democrat. I think that all Republicans should stand firmly against all assaults upon our protective tariff."

Not only is the unanimously correct stand for all Republicans. Is it not the best stand to take for the country and for its party? Congressman Babcock thinks not. He wants an extra session of the Fifty-eighth Congress called to tear up the tariff. Senator Depew thinks the time has arrived when the tariff should be revised to meet changed conditions. We did that in 1897. We readjusted the tariff not only to meet changed conditions, but as a means of changing the then existing conditions. We succeeded in changing the conditions from ruin and distress to a degree of unparalleled prosperity. Shall we change conditions now more? If so, in what direction shall we change them? Concerns not for the better. Tariff revision downward has never been known to change conditions for the better. It has always changed them for the worse. It will do it again if the revision movement is persisted in. Tariff revision upward is the only sort of revision that has ever benefited this country. Nobody is pressing for tariff revision upward, though in some directions an increase in the duties would be certainly advantageous. But nobody proposes that. If revised at all, the tariff is to be revised, or tinkered, only downward. The country does not want that, and if it is done, the country will suffer for it. This is no time to revise the tariff. Let prosperity alone for at least two years to come, and perhaps by that time we shall have become so accustomed to prosperity that we shall have grown to like it. At present it really seems as if some people could not endure it.

Marriage and Morals.

According to Ohio jail statistics last year in that state 2,814 married men and 4,278 unmarried men were committed, while the New York Sun says: "Married men are more moral than bachelors." IMMENSE TREES IN FLORIDA.

Monarchs of the Forest That Have Stood for Centuries.

It is difficult even to guess at the age of the ancient live oaks, but some of them must number centuries old the oldest, and greatest of them all is a monarch at the South, with its outer branches sweeping the ground in a circle 120 feet across, with trunk as great as ordinary trunks of trees and bearing a passion of aerial twigs, and epiphytic moss their bark. This venerable tree is supposed to be the largest live oak in Florida. Hundreds of gigantic branches rise almostwly from the ground and form themselves into the spreading oak foliage that crowns this tree, the sagging branches gain some lower support have clasp posts of long moss age. Their only record being the angles and curves of expansion, each to which they too their respective art is trailing skyward.—Country Life in America.

Birds Find Refuge on a Lighthouse.

The capture of a large eagle in Puget Sound recently reported to the United States light house board, and a remarkable fall of birds last summer at the lighthouse located on the Farallon Islands, off the coast of San Francisco, have recently reported to the United States light house board. The capture of the eagle came about in the following manner: The bird took refuge in board the vessel. A dense smoke from northern forest fires hung over the locality and completely obscured the sun and land. Evidently the birds had lost their way and exhausted by their long flight, the wanderers lighted on the ship, unfamiliar to the greatness of the crew. At one time sixty of the feathered strangers were perched on various parts of the ship. Owls, crows, hummingbirds and other non-marine species were noticed during the time.

A Polish War Chest.

The Chamber is aboard of the existence of Bogoyawski Switzerland of a fund consisting of nearly $50,000 which has been subscribed by Poles in various parts of the world for the purpose of waging war upon Russia when a suitable time arrives. Last year the subscriptions from Poles in America amounted to as hard as $1,000.

Twain Not Huckleberry Finn.

It is a common belief that Huckleberry Finn is Mark Twain himself. Elvira Dunch, published some years not long ago which were founded on this idea. But it is not so. Mark Twain's original in his book is Tom Sawyer, and Huck Finn, and Mr. Clemens himself is the authority for this statement.

Queer French Law.

"Homicide through imprudence" is said to be the charge that will be brought against the singer Melba, for the death of Mrs. Gore. It is one said that there are ridiculous stories about the death of the American woman, but this charge is more remarkable some of some one should explain what it means?

Hay Many Millionaires.

Dr. Jaus, in his new school city in America, has there are more millionaires in Lightfoot, Dr. then in any other town of its size leaving out Death results. In New York a fraction from this place. Mr. Jaus people are no common there that they cut no more for the "common people."

A Valuable Find.

Two years ago the German colonial society offered a prize for the finding of a plant in the German colonies furnishing gutta-percha suitable for cable purposes. A telegram from German New Guinea says that euta-percha, or wild rubber, has been found in large quantities.

Paris Likes "Coke Walk."

Having become somewhat used to the Lotz Pulter five dance Paris has now taken up the coke walk and gone pretty crazy over about it. The entertainment was introduced by some negro performers at the Nouveau Cirque and now lessons are being advertised for private houses.

Demand for Canals.

The canal idea seems to be catching. Gov. Odell wants to put $50,000,000 into a canal connecting the great lakes and the Atlantic, which could be traversed by the largest boats. The next few decades are bound to see some gigantic engineering enterprises carried into execution.

Forests in Germany.

Imperial statistics for 1900 show that Germany has 34,405,308 acres of wood; in 1893 there were 34,303,712 acres, and in 1892 34,473,890 acres. The figures for 1900 thus show an increase, as compared with 1893, of 216,176 acres.

Peculiarity of Bats.

It has often been attempted to blind bats by tying a bandage over their eyes, but this does not prevent them from flying about a closed room as well as if their eyes had avoiding all obstacles, such as stretched strings crossing each other in all directions.

ARTIFICIAL RUBIES NOW MADE.

Process Turns Out Stones as Beautiful as the Real Ones.

The manufacture of artificial rubies which in appearance are as good as the natural stones is now an accomplished fact. A demonstration of this achievement was given to the members of academic des sciences yesterday afternoon.

Some years ago artificial rubies were placed on the market, but a microscopical examination revealed the fact that the crystals were imperfect. The rubies manufactured by M. Verneuil, however, are of a superbred color and of a purity and sparkle equal to the precious stones. The cost of producing them is not a heavy one as that there is every reason to anticipate that the new industry will lead to a notable diminution in the price of the formerly precious stones.

The rubies are obtained by a new process, in which the blow-pipe plays an important part, and the stones are both beautiful and of a goodly size. The specimens shown at the meeting of the academy was much admired by the savants.—London Leader.

THE STREETS OF JAPAN.

System of Numbering Houses Must Be Somewhat Confusing.

In Japan houses are not numbered according to their sequence, but according to the order of their erection. That is to say that No. 79 may stand No. 1, with No. 102 on the opposite side. No. 2 is probably a mile down the street. The city of Tokyo is made up of 1,200 streets, to which are 315,000 houses. These houses are divided into fifteen wards. If a street passes through more than one ward the houses are numbered according to the wards in which they are that is a house reading through six wards will possess six number plates. It would be like looking for a needle in a haystack for a stranger to try to find a number in Tokio. Yet a Japanese driver knows the position and number of the houses in Tokio. He is able to do this by having duely his business the one study of the time.

Passing of the Mustang.

Everyone who has lived on the frontier, especially on the Southwest, will feel a pang of regret at the announcement that the brute mustang or broncho is survey but survey passing away. Texas cattle had a society any other business except mustangs and Cheviots ponies, but that pioneer day has passed.

Yacht for Japan's Crown Prince.

Japan's crown prince is up to date in more things than latest accoutrements in a yacht. The vessel has been ordered to this by the Mitsubishi shipbuilding firm. The yacht is double-masted, has one funnel, measures sixteen feet beam, draws 7 feet on the water line, and draws nine feet, with a displacement of eighty tons gross.

Young Japs Don't Smoke.

Charlevoix County Treasurer's Office, Charlevoix, Mich., Dec. 24, 1902.

I do hereby certify that the above is a true and complete report of all taxes collected or received by me at my office upon the business of selling or offering for sale spirituous or intoxicating liquors or mixed liquors by retail, during the year ending Dec. 1st 1902.

HENRY C. COOPER, County Treasurer.

NORTHERN MICHIGAN.

The Detroit & Charlevoix R. R. are putting in a large and well equipped machine and repair shops at Howard.

Boyne Falls is boosting. The Hoel & Wright veneer mill is to be built this winter and spring, and the Mears saw-mill is busy getting out lumber for it. The plant will cost $50,000 and employ sixty men.

The Boyne City Brick Co. has made an important discovery in its grounds. A fine bed of clayin was found and thorough tests resulted in getting brick of the greatest strength and durability. The bed of shale is practically inexhaustible. Next summer a paving brick department will be added to the plant, which already has been enlarged to produce 7,000,000 brick, all of which are contracted for the next season.

Congress will be urged this season to appropriate $50,000 to aid in the erection of a monument on the grounds formerly occupied by the military post on Mackinac Island and now a state park. The money is needed to build a railway track from the lighthouse dock across the reserve to the monument site to be used for conveying the building material to extend the dock if necessary to facilitate the work, and for laying the foundation and superstructure of such a monument.

"After several months of silence the electrical information has reached Frankfort to the effect that the Alpena, Gaylord & Western Railway Company will begin building roadbed early next spring," said the Frankfort Tribune recently. "Surveyor Stevens has completed his tasty of the routes of land traversed by the road and the financing of the bonds is now in progress. It is anticipated that the first work done will either be in Frankfort or Traverse City."

Detroit Tribune: Petoskey and Harbor Springs are still swapping warmwood and gall. A young man of Harbor Springs having taken two young ladies on a cutter ride and not with a fly over said runaway cutting 82, the record of miles up and between chuckles remarks that "It ought to be a lesson to Harbor Springs fellows who come over here to rush our young ladies." Nothing so much sets two rival towns by the ears as a cutter hoss squabble, excepting an inoperative base ball umpire.

East Jordan Herald: W. F. Empey arrived in town Thursday noon from the Canadian northwest and he has since been busy exchanging greetings with old friends. Since leaving here he has been engaged with his brother Joseph, in the hotel business at Grenfell in the province of Assiniboia, but they have sold this property and Mr. Joseph Empey has embarked in the furniture and undertaking business. We understand that W. F. will return to the West after arranging some of his property interests here.

East Jordan Herald: Joe Maddock was home from Ann Arbor several days last week. He is doing so well in make and time adjusted his sale case as he alighted from the train Saturday evening and he had 42 cases surrounded by a company of admiring friends. In spite of the hard work and the training and a hard foot-ball season, in which he has participated in every game the Varsity has played, he is twenty pounds heavier than when he went away in September. We have heard of the way in which Joe's massive shoulders have forged daily way through the opponent's line and made their impression look like a quarter and a. Canadian live coal, please and yet in spite of the honors he has won and the prestige he has helped his state to gain in the athletics of the West, he is still the same polite, unassuming, companionable fellow he has always been. He is going after the championship in some of the sports in the spring and we are of the opinion that he will establish a new record for the shot put and hammer throw.

East Jordan Enterprise: The Ann Arbor & West Michigan railroad project is not dead, by any means, and we hear that active work will be begun in the spring. The proposed route of this road not only threads some excellent tracts of timber, but it also opens up a country with soil as rich for agricultural possibilities as any in Michigan. The real value of our lands are only just beginning to be appreciated, as it flows up the rapidity with which Northern Michigan lands are being picked up in the past few months, and it does not require a special gift of prophecy to tell that not only this road but many others will be projected in Northern Michigan within a very few years.

Smith of the Charlevoix Sentinel having heard that a lady who is one of the old residents of that village had dropped dead during service in the Baptist church, immediately sat down and wrote an appreciative obituary, only to discover later that the subject was not dead at all, she thereupon he prepared a libelling editorial on "The Criminality of Thoughtlessness," wherein he scores the person who sets afloat reports without being sure of the facts. It falls to say what might be said however, that while a false report of death may only cause a temporary shock and cost a boring drover other false statements a lasting reputation, such as one hears almost every day, inflicts injuries upon innocent people which endure as long as life lasts.

BOUGHT THE PROPERTY.

Capt. E. S. Wilson Acquires Ownership of the Fox Estate Bridge Street Property.

The most important transfer of real estate in Charlevoix for some time occurred yesterday, when Capt. E. S. Wilson bought of Mrs. Ella Fox the 165 feet on Bridge street, extending from the river to the Sentinel building, including also the thirty feet dock property in the rear of the aforesaid building.

The property was to said to have two frontages on the river, forming the best steamboat docking facilities in Charlevoix harbor. Capt. Wilson has occupied the property the past eleven years under a lease, which was to run yet fourteen years. He leases also from the dock front on the Gotlick property.

Capt. Wilson will not tell what price he paid for the property, or what his plans are concerning it, but it is more than likely that it will be improved.

THE SUPERVISORS.

The Board Grouning Under a Load of Claims, Mostly of the Small Pox Variety.

Aside from the approval of the county officers' bonds, the board of supervisors have been chiefly engaged in this week in auditing claims.

The second annual batch of small pox bills came down from Evangeline and Boyne Valley townships, the aggregate amounting to over $2,000 the bill of one physician being $600. The committee on claims are at work as we go to press, and there is little doubt that the bills will be pared down.

The board will meet again February 17th, to act on the petition of Dr. C. Lovesday, of East Jordan, for permission to drain Deer Creek for a short head. The purpose of this work is to furnish power for electric light purposes, and if the petition is granted to be developed. It is said that with this power, ample energy can be conveyed to East Jordan and Charlevoix to run both electric light plants.

There is no doubt about the board granting the petition, as the enterprise is one that recommends itself to every town on our inland waters.

An Automatic Body.

Whether Governor Pingree should favor the abolishment of trial by jury, or suspend the habeas corpus act, the tariff commission would be equally valueless as a member of power.

Indeed, we know of no efficient body within the Michigan body politic, or rather the tax commission, the note of which may not be passed upon by the Governor through the secret executive statement, and the second mechanical station into the various rams—those business vessels looking for all the world like gigantic lemonade sticks.

At the bottom like monster serpents, the ends of bigger pipe, they do work, for, at least in sugar. The next step is at the mixer, then the centrifugals, which separate the sugar from the syrup, on the same principle as a cream separator. The wet sugar is elevated to the drier, or granulator, from which it comes through spouts with a rush into the 300-pound barrel waiting below. Those barrels are placed on a mechanical contrivance, which rocks them until the contents are thoroughly packed.

The men white grains crowd to any such board of assessors, with perhaps no wonder, for they have had a terrible experience since they left their pans, the sugar beet, away in yonder shed. The first lot of sugar is curbed and the syrup is sent back for another boiling. The sugar in the mixer is removed another proportion of finished sugar is obtained.

Again the remaining syrup makes another boiling, and again the sugar is taken down the spouts. But still there is a great percentage of the syrup left. It will be anything but the manufacturer of sugar, and pending its being shipped for that use it is pumped to a molasses tank ready for the reception. There is left a portion of waste excepting the water, and it cannot be turned waste, for it goes back again to carry more beets from the bins. It seems as if the only waste is the water that is worn out by working under the vessels with which it comes in contact.

CAN NOT PAY $6 A TON.

Beet Sugar Men May Offer Less To Farmers This High.

In view of the agitation among the farmers in regard to demanding $6 a ton for their sugar beets next season Watts S. Humphrey president of the Beet Sugar Manufacturers of Michigan said:

"So far as the farmer asking $6 a ton for their beets, he would ruin the whole business—the manufacturers conflict run the factories. That is practically three cents a pound for all the sugar in the beets. The yield of sugar is only about 220 pounds of sugar to the ton of beets.

At the market price of sugar today, if it was sold, sugar would bring but little more than 4½ cents a pound. It would be less than 4 and 6-10 cents a pound that the manufacturer would get for the sugar, on the same principle that is, the manufacturer would have to pay the broker's commission, and freight and the cost of manufacture for less than 4 and 6-10 cents per pound."

In regard to a published statement that 400,000 pounds of the above stuff are stored away, he said that sugar has not been moving for the past 10 days on account of dull market. Each factory has its own warehouse and there the sugar is being piled up, there being no demand for it.

How Beet Sugar Is Made in Michigan

It is extremely difficult for the mind to understand the laborious process of manufacturing sugar. The beets drop through the bottom of bins into sinkers filled with warm water and are then carried underground to the main building, the tossing and tumbling in the water removing much of the dirt from them. Arriving there they drop into buckets attached to a continuous wheel and are conveyed to the huge steam washer, where every particle of dirt is removed. Again they are elevated to the automatic cutter, whose business is to slice the beets into ribbons. On they travel by endless belt to be dumped into an immense diffusion battery.

This is where the sugar leaves the beet, going on its pergrination, while the pulp is ignominiously dumped into the back yard. The sweetness is now technically known as raw or thin juice. After passing through the measuring cannon, is put through the first evaporation. Here it is boiled and clarified with lime; next it is filtered, then pressed, returning to the second evaporation, where more lime is added and the juice carbonated. The third evaporation is reached, after which comes the filter presses, the sulphur presses, the mechanical filters and last the evaporator, which reduces it to a thick juice. But it is a long way from the barrels yet, for it must now go through the second carbonation, and the second mechanical filtration into the vacuum pans—those business vessels looking for all the world like gigantic lemonade sticks.

At the bottom like monster serpents, the ends of bigger pipe, they do work, for, at least in sugar. The next step is at the mixer, then the centrifugals, which separate the sugar from the syrup, on the same principle as a cream separator. CHAPTER XIV.

Yes, there after the events recorded in our last chapter, then was a Sunday in the life of a peaceful character, in the old-fashioned sense of the word, and yet events of a most sensational character followed on that Monday and the Tuesday. Lucksbury, The place—or, if you prefer it, the people, and the one who presided over them, were all strange together; it was some time before the whole story by piecemeal, and by instalments, was pieced together, and the whole truth of the matter was known to those who had taken an active part in it, and to those who were interested in it, and who had watched it from afar.

Of the people of this community it is scarcely necessary or right to impute any motive to any one. The community was small, the circumstances was manifold, the men and women concerned in it, were, and the one against whom it was directed, was a woman of a most noble character, of a most high-minded, and high-spirited, and high-principled, and high-souled, and high-hearted, and high-minded, and high-souled, and high-hearted, and high-minded, and high-souled, and high-hearted, and high-minded

IS TIME TO LINE UP

FOR THE POLITICAL FOOTBALL GAME IN 1904.

Tariff is to Be the Issue, and Workers Must Decide Whether to Remain Republican or Join the American Free-Trade League.

The Free Trader (organ of the American Free-Trade league) for November says:

"Now and during the next two years is the time for the Free-Trade league to gain the spelling ear of the people, to educate their intelligence and direct their struggling industrialism until they rise in their might and make an end of protection monopoly.

President Taft in an "appeal" to the people invites the Republicans who are leaving the fold and other ideas to join the free traders in the battle against protection. He says:

"The true policy, the plain duty, of these reformers is to ally themselves with advocates of free trade. Free traders do not concern themselves with the past record of the protectionists of the Democratic party and they do not ask for any retraction. We welcome these dissatisfied protectionists, and what they do ask of them is no more than what led them to support protection in the past, that they should now realize and declare that the time has come for them to advocate a change of policy."

How proud Cap. Cannon, inventor of the Blue Helmets and their aims should be to be now welcomed to the free trade camp! In one sentiment we must agree with Mr. Lamb, a man must be one thing or the other; there is no middle ground, no standing still. Any departure from the policy of the American system of protection is a step into free trade.

Free traders know the new comers carry out their wishes in the fall. They will only be too glad to break the ranks of their opponents, to conquer by dividing. This is the only hope now left of gaining a victory for their un-American cause. They do not insist on their opponents becoming pronounced free traders; they are satisfied to have them renounce protection in whole or in part, but they want them to stay "Dissatisfied."

As President Lamb says:

"The reason why free traders believe it important that all reformers of the tariff should renounce adhesion to connection to the same which leads them to believe that they, on their part, are right in committing to the gradual steps proposed by dissatisfied protectionists, even while confident that better measures could be taken. The reason is that measures of reform, to be permanent, should secure a support from public opinion which shall be united and loyal. If tariff reform does not avow its intention of constant progress toward free trade, it may succeed as the polls, as in 1892. Yet it is sure to fail in Congress, as it did in 1894, and to be undone as in 1897, and the work must all be done over again. The tariff reform movement failed because it was abandoned by the dissatisfied protectionists, who had supported it in 1890 and 1892.

This is the new free trade idea, and it is most acceptable. Let us be, as we must be, one thing or the other; we have no protectionists. If the tariff is to be the issue for 1904 and the battle is to begin now, let us line up where we belong and as we believe. Those who want a connection, or revision, or reciprocity, or any of the cereals, are in line with the American Free Trade league, whether they want to acknowledge it or not. The proof of this is the fact that the league no longer calls upon the old guard of college professors for arguments, but contents itself by quoting from Carnegie & Co.

So let us line up for the great union of 1904, and let us all be honest enough to get on the side where we belong and face the opponents.

Claims to Have the Biggest Mills.

So far as statistics in regard to cotton manufacturing plants have been published, Manchester people have the satisfaction of knowing that the largest cotton mill building in the world is that recently built by the Manchester Print Works and covering with its two wings a remarkable area. Statistics, too, show that the big No. 11 mill of the Amoskeag Manufacturing company, on the west side of the River, is the largest mill establishment devoted to cotton cloth manufacturing in the world. That is, no portion of the No. 11 mill is used for storehouse purposes; it is entirely devoted to the making of cloth.—Manchester (N. H.) Union.

Missionaries in Africa.

There are many in America who believe that all heathen countries are well covered with missionaries, but the following would seem to prove that there is still wide fields for labor yet uncovered. Dr. Aitken, writing from Lokoja, in Northern Nigeria, africa, says:

"I walked straight away until I have walked the whole length of England and practically visited five church fields. I could see another missionary and I I think we now he would be in a safe going to Uganda."

Burglars Took the Hint.

A planing reading. Will not return until Nov. 9. Signed, Owen the door of a restaurant in West Pittsburgh, was so informed by burglars that when the family did return at the time fixed they found the house ransacked and silverware, jewelry and much clothing missing. The gang were evidently on the thieves had left no hints on the part.

WILL BE NO REVISION

STRONG WORDS BY SENATOR HALE OF MAINE.

There Will Be No Meddling With or Emasculation of the Present Tariff, Whether Under the Guise of Reciprocity or Reform.

Senator Hale of Maine one of the most influential men on the Republican side of the Senate chamber, said:

"Neither this winter, nor the next, nor the winter thereafter, unless Congress loses its head will any revision of the tariff be made. The results of the Dingley tariff act have been so generally satisfactory that it is difficult to understand the cry which is set up in certain quarters, not by the people generally, in favor of a revision.

"The Dingley act has given the people of the United States more money, more business, more trade and more prosperity than any bill ever enacted. The people understand this and the late election shows that, with certain exceptions, entire content exists under present conditions. It would be the height of folly now to try to disturb these conditions.

"The free traders, including almost all the Democratic leaders and the money, weak-kneed Republicans who are howling for revision and reciprocity, would do well to take notice of what will happen provided they get their way. It is absolutely safe to say that no tariff revision can take place except at the end of a long session, after a bitter and protracted fight, which in itself will disturb nearly all and destroy some of our business.

"The outcome will be, if any revision is passed, a practically Democratic tariff. The consumption on important schedules in the tariff between the Republicans and the entire Democratic force in Congress will insure such a Republican measure, but a Democratic one. Nor can any partial or limited revision be made without entering into the construction of an entire bill, and in fact, there can never be any change in certain articles without entering upon the whole subject of tariff revision.

"Besides this, if it were possible to concentrate on a single article, in the tariff would for a moment stop the free trade and Democratic agitation for entire revision. An eminent democratic leader has said that there will be no rest until the infamous policy of protection is broken down and destroyed.

"I am sure that what I say represents the general sentiment of Republican party throughout the country. It is the fashion of certain newspapers and a few prominent politicians to say that revision is needed, and that we will enter upon it in the next Congress, but wherever the issue has been made, whether in New England or elsewhere, this proposition has gone to the wall. It was tried in Massachusetts and failure is the result.

"In the main, a cry for revision means a new tariff, built on anti-Republican lines. Generally speaking, it is scratch a reviser and find under cloth a free trader.

"Unless the Republican party has lost heart and faith in its fundamental policies there will be no meddling with and no emasculation of the present tariff, whether under the guise of reciprocity or reform, in the long future. If a general revision is demanded, the Republican party will not be afraid to undertake it."

Men of Real Value.

The discovery of a new element of the transitory into the records of the past may be conferring as great a benefit on mankind as the business organizer who has built up a big factory, may, in a less laudable craving for discovery, for progress of every sort. It is as meritorious to devote one's self to reaching the north pole as to spend one's life refining sugar. The existence of art galleries of parks, of universities, of scientific organizations of all sorts is testimony to the fact that the life is more than meat. It is quite possible that a few hundred years hence the name of the discoverer of the north pole may be remembered when that of the organizer of the steel trust is forgotten.

Dairy Products of Canada.

The exports of cheese and butter from Canada this year promises to make a record. When the season closes the value of the products shipped to Scotland and England are already will total $9,000,000. Ten years ago the total was only $10,000,000.

Colonists Lightly Taxed.

The taxpayers of the Quebec King from any 29 children 2 cents a year for each of the population. Lower Canada and army while the most heavily weighted colonist pays no more than 3 shillings 6 pence a year per head of the population for naval and military purposes.

To Keep Memory Green.

Of the old home of Daniel Webster nothing is left but the foundation. Of the elms on his farm there are standing nearly 1,000 trees which he planted with his own hands. No any small man who is possessed of trees is to so much good as Webster.

Cheapest Fuel Yet.

In the center of Paris there have been recently built several single "houses" in which homeless men may for four cents, get a place of bed sing and an attendant over on a bench. They are so crowded that no one can in down.

FRYE OPPOSES REVISION.

Would Spoil Prosperity and Cause General Business Depression.

(Special to New York Times.)

Washington, Nov. 25.—Senator Frye of Maine does not sympathize with the agitation in favor of tariff revision. Speaking of this question today, he said:

"Talk of tariff revision is absurd. The country is in the midst of great prosperity. Why should we spoil it by enacting new legislation which would discourage business relations and certainly cause depression over the country? There is no demand for it in New England. I suppose there may be some in Massachusetts who want some changes, but they always have a few cracks in Massachusetts. The Republicans who ran for Congress on a revision platform was twice defeated in a Republican district.

"It is equally absurd to propose tariff revision as a means of regulating the trusts. Suppose we should attempt to reduce the tariff on articles made by trusts? Smaller concerns engaged in similar business would be affected by the new rates just the same as the trusts themselves. What would be the result? Small concerns would be more severely harassed than some of them would be driven out of business entirely, while the trusts could better stand under the new conditions and would be strengthened rather than ever.

Senator Frye thinks it probable the Senate will reconsider such amendments as the Senate authorized, looking to certain the most commission of the evils connected with the trusts.

"I think the Senate will follow the Pittsburg speech of Attorney-general Knox," said he. "There is no hope of restricting trusts by an amendment to the constitution. It seems to me congressmen should receive the income taxes by the Senate and House, and could never be reached in the states. It would be regarded as the great attempt of the rights of the states."

It Is Democratic Doctrine.

Again we see the Democrats, in the New York Times, trying to make Wm. McKinley responsible for every the protective tariff. They make the attack indirectly by claiming that we are his disciples. The cutting off protection from foreign made goods "Feeding trade poison to cure the trust evil," as Speaker Henderson says. That protection fosters trusts is Democratic doctrine, which is not borne out by the facts, but again, assuming it to be true which is not by certain Republicans, this plays into the hands of the Democrats. The, wish to feed the trusts free trade poison, but the least of the poison would get into the system of American industry and make the American workman sick of his job. The President says we must be careful in how we make protection to the workingman and see that industry receives no sudden jolts, the same is true that constant changes of Democratic changes in tariff schedules will frighten manufacturers and cause them to curtail their product, thus throwing men out of work. Free trade and tariff tinkering is American only doctrine and should be left to the Democrats.—Portland (Ore.) Oregonian.

Ill Omens from Chinese Mind Weather.

Indications are, it seems, that there is to be a second crop of lichens this year, the first in the latter has not been discovered, says the Hong Kong Daily Press. As a consequence many will tower in its circulation and pestilence, rebellion and war are foretold. A parallel is pointed to in the case of the Taiping rebellion, which was preceded by a double crop of lichens. Signs of the times point to a great rebellion in China, and complications between Russia, France, England and Japan are inevitable.

How to Keep Young.

One of the secrets of keeping young, vigorous and supplemented is to continue to practice the activities of youth and to refuse to allow the mind to stiffen the muscles by the suggestion of age limitations. Gladstone, Peter Cooper and William M. Lindsmore, who up to the extreme age of ninety-five retained manhood when far into the eighties, had succumbed at, or to the thought of approaching age, how many of their valuable life-work would have remained without completion.

Wm. Baker of Bastport tells the Central Lake Torch that he is looking up a boat which he expects to put on Torch Lake next summer, to ply between Eastport and Alden.

The Elk Rapids Iron Co. blast furnace went into commission Friday morning after a shut-down of five months for repairs. The stack oven and elevator are entirely new, and is now one of the best plants in the state.

Petoskey Democrat: H. P. Foley, wife and children returned Monday from a Christmas visit to St. Ignace and will make their home at the Imperial hotel for several days prior to leaving for Florida where they will spend the winter.

Cheboygan Democrat: St. Ignace parties sold 200 acres of land between the G. R. & I. railroad and Carp Lake in Emmet county, to Wachtel & Co., of Petoskey, for a summer resort yesterday for $28,000 last week. A year ago this land could have been purchased for $5 per acre.

There is excitement in Traverse City over the coal made by the Grand Rapids school board on the teachers under contract to teach in Traverse City during the present school year. Superintendent Elson offered Miss Cady, one of the leading teachers in Traverse City, a substantial increase in salary, and when the school board refused to release her, she broke her contract and sued upon it. Just how the Grand Rapids school board expect to elevate the morals of their schools by appointing teachers whom others have promised to release contracts with other boards, we cannot see.

Petoskey Democrat: Max M. Savlan has sold his entire stock of dry goods and clothing to Charles Rosenthal, of Traverse City, at 65 cents on the dollar. This was done to close out the stock quickly even at that great sacrifice. In order that Mr. Savlan could dispose his entire time and money to the patent lace rack which he expects to manufacture on a large scale. Mr. Chas. Rosenthal is very fortunate in getting the stock as it is comparatively new, having been purchased by Mr. Savlan a year ago last June. Mr. Rosenthal is proprietor of the Bazar Store in Traverse City, and will close out the stock at retail in his basement department. The stock is in excellent condition.

Central Lake Torch: While O. L. Coulter was in town last week he informed the Torch that he expected to make contracts here for a consider able acreage of cucumbers next season, to be grown for seed for the Jerome & Rice Seed Co. The vines are grown in hills about four feet apart each way as usual and are cultivated like corn or any other crop. The cucumbers are allowed to ripen when they are gathered and the seed is obtained by grinding the cucumbers flat in the field by a machine which the company will furnish and which is capable of grinding from 2 to 3 acres daily. The seed is then placed in barrels and allowed to stand a few days until fermentation begins, when they are washed and dried.

Traverse City Eagle: The long drawn out fight for the position of probate judge of Leelanau county is finished at last and J. R. Hamilton has won. The decision of the circuit court, which affirmed his right to the office, has been affirmed by the supreme court, which definitely decides his rights to the office. It still is necessary, also for Senator H. Hartman, who has held the office conditionally, to pay to Judge Campbell the money that he has received while acting as judge. It will be remembered that on the face of the returns Senator Hartman was declared elected to the office. Judge J. R. Campbell, the then incumbent, demanded a recount which gave him the office. Senator Hartman contested the legality of the recount, and for over two years the fight has been on. The election occurred two years ago last month and the term of office began two years ago last January.

Frankfort, Mich., Jan. 1st 1903.

To you Friends:

The president of the Surfsmen' Mutual Benefit Association has appointed a committee of three for this 12th U. S. District—George Mosmore keeper of the Frankfort Life Saving Station, Harrison Miller keeper of the Point Betsey station and Surfsman Frank Joffe.

It is the duty of the committee to pass on all applications for membership, certify deaths and recommend payments of assessments in the district. Membership blanks, by laws etc can be had by applying to either of the committee, address Frankfort, Mich.

Second Cousin Sarah

BY THE AUTHOR OF "JANE JENNY," "SPINSTER," "LITTLE KATE KIRBY," ETC., ETC.

She left the door ajar, and walked swiftly the more distant with music and colour, conjured a dark cropped head with aspect. The young man rose from his Dick's smiling glance some of old Grab-ville's best blood, and some knew what of their daily bread, and some knew what amount of the profits of their scribbling, and so one cared save the thrown, who looked.

In the midst of the chaos on the dais there lay a little dainty note, stamped and addressed, unopened, which had been placed there by the landlady during his absence from home, and it was in a girl's handwriting, of that Sarah Kenfield was sequitur.

She was not particularly reserved in social evenings; indeed, her highest ideal was to aid and allow time for those her feelings to develop themselves which two years' training had strewn in profuse. She, perhaps, had not been long enough to feel and look up with trust, long enough, and, with her dark eyes closing.

Mary Holland! she exclaimed.

She skimmed the letter attentively. The Holland family were well and character and chase the newspaper on the "Cock" Crow, and Mr. Holland's work was Worcester—there could be no mistake of another.

Why has she written? exclaimed Sarah. Why, indeed, to her "friend?"

At the same moment a hand touched her shoulder, and she turned, and, with a smile, Sarah Kenfield's face was red and pulsate.

Why, Mr. Hunter, quite time with my sister, Miss Kenfield! I should feel sidly on the occasion.

Sarah Kenfield gave a little scream of surprise, and, with a blushing smile, She extended both her hands, outward one and to the other, and, as she had received them in his own, and shook them warmly, she exclaimed, with a laugh taking her better poise and decisively from her.

Herbert, very gaze communicate, started a chair and seated himself, and, in a moment, he, filling the volumes forward in the floor and Sarah, with a little more gravity and less nervousness, leaned back in her chair, and, looking at him, said:

"Now, Mr. Hunter, I shall expect you to be very friendly and have work and sociable, and, as I said, I shall be very glad to see you."

"Thank you," said Herbert, somewhat stiffly, and, as he looked the work, gazed at the glazed ceiling, and smiled to himself, and, with a little laugh, he said, through her hair.

"Come, Mr. Hunter, you spoiling her, you'll be outlawed. I am glad that I have seen Sarah.

Sarah was in the street then, looking up and down. Every I was, and doubtful which way to turn. She was still looking when Mary Jennings came up and called before her.

"Well—what did he say? What time? Has been talking about all this Hunter—Sarah, what ever is the matter? Why, what has you done? Sarah, what is the matter?

"He would not accept Mr. Hunter," she said, and, suddenly, she burst into tears.

"Sarah, what is the matter? Why, what did he say, and what did you say? Did he ask you?

"Not exactly—I think that he was very angry—I think that he was very angry—I think that he was very angry

FIRM ON THE TARIFF.

SPEECHES BY SENATORS HANNA FORAKER AND LODGE.

"Stand Pat!" Says Hanna, while Foraker and Lodge Are Equally Strenuous in Deprecating Any and All Interference with the Dingley Law.

"My friends, I have only a few words to say to you this afternoon, for I have to be elsewhere all the fall. A year ago it was my privilege to attend the opening of the Republican campaign, and after having come to the situation I came to the conclusion that I should give just a piece of advice. That was enough. That was the whole chapter. That was all there was in the campaign. Today I say: 'Stand pat!' You are not on the defensive in this or anywhere else in the United States in the Dingley policies.

"Now we have come to the proposition that there is need for a revision of the tariff. I believe the tariff is good enough as it is.

"If the time shall come when the tariff needs revision, it will be done by the men who made the tariff, and if the men whose mission contributed to its construction see that condition requires a change they will make it. I am asked by a man to change the tariff I always thought of late it is necessary to change it and I do think it is. I ask him why it is necessary, and he can't tell me. Change what shall we begin? There are so many interests involved in changing the tariff.—Senator Hanna at Akron Sept. 27.

Senator Foraker, at Akron, Sept. 28.

"They are not in any proper sense of the word a party question, and they never can be made so. For the reason I would gladly divorce but little time to them. But the retiring Speaker Henderson to be a candidate for renomination because of the attitude toward them of some Republicans in his district has for the whole subject to the end of the American people is, in a way as it made apology for a few plain words necessary.

"In the first place, these questions originate here as a result of the tariff, but in England and European countries where they have free trade and where they hail trusts of every character long before they became common in America, and where to-day they are more numerous than they are in the United States. In the meantime, what today are called trusts popularly and really more than mere corporations, engaged, as a rule, in perfectly legitimate business, and as such they are but a natural evolution of modern industrial conditions. Democrats and Republicans alike promote them, organize them, hold stock in them, conduct them, and share in their benefits and advantages. They are because there is a demand for them; not a political but a business demand.

"They have become a feature of modern business conditions the world over, and in consequence they are a special necessity here in the United States where we are compelled to invade and capture foreign markets or sacrifice the juice at which we are going in the employment of labor and the death penalty of our resources. The Republican party recognizes this fact will correct evils and prevent and prevent abuses, but it will not hamstring the business of the country to please Mr. Bryan or anybody else. Why, he remains a player at the game, on the contrary, to inaugurate and spread policies that will give employment to both labor and capital after remarking that both must flourish or neither can."

Senator Lodge at Boston, Sept. 27.

Senator Lodge's principal speech was that the tariff should not be tampered with at this time. He said that an attempt to revise the tariff now would do injury the business interests of the country to a degree that could not possibly be compensated for. He admitted the Dingley tariff bill was not a perfect law, but said that much of our present prosperity was due to it.

Touching upon the issue on dates in that law, Senator Lodge said that he and his colleague, Senator Hoar, preferred it to be incorporated into the bill only under extreme pressure. The Massachusetts senators were for or the alternative of subjecting hides to a duty of 15 instead of the feat of the whole bill.

They had chosen the tuesday course, understanding perfectly well that their detention adversely affected the shoe manufacturing industry of New England, but in doing that they had secured New England and the country at large in attaching a general prosperity. It was simply a case of the greatest good for the greatest number.

Mr. Lodge was not optimistic regarding the advantages to be gained by this country in reciprocity with Canada. The question resolved itself down mainly to one of coal. Under reciprocity we would send Canada good coal and she would send us poor coal. Aside exclusively would give Canada an added market of 40,000,000 tonnes, while it would give us an additional market of only 7,000,000 tonnes.

He said that the form of reciprocity advocated by Blaine and McKinley of late only has a limited scope. He referred to the Nicaragua treaty which would benefit New England, but which is strenuously opposed by the cattle raisers of the west and the wool growers of Ohio.

A tariff treaty with France would not be accepted by the United States on the basis proposed, for the reason that this country would be giving France preferential rates, while we would not be forced to go into France producer the same as those for 862 other country. France discriminates against the United States, and that fact must be taken into account in any treaty relations between the two countries.

Dealing more specifically with tariff revision, Senator Lodge said that there could be no sentiment legislation, in either house, New England would benefit on tariff revision by its position, and would be the last section to be injured by any revision without sacrificing more than that could possibly be spared.

Senator Lodge ended by saying that the Republican party could be trusted to effect such changes, and that when such time came the last it would not be found on the side of stagnation at home.

BABCOCK AND REVISION.

Triumph of Protection Over the Free Trade Idea.

Representative Babcock's interpretation of the meaning of the result of the recent elections in Illinois, and his conclusion, "If, he says, "the Democrats had won, the house it would have signified that the people want no tariff revision for the next two years, as it would have been impossible to accomplish anything in that direction with a Democratic house and a Republican senate." The impossibility of securing a revision of the tariff with a Democratic House and Republican Senate is not clearly conceded, but nothing more. Had a Democratic house been elected Democrats would not have ventured to ask a revision by Democrats. Republicans could not have rejected it, as it is a measure that it would have been universally regarded as a British discriminator to a free trade agitation. The people in the last session, and latter any out of national policies by voting the majority of those entitled to foothold in this government. They may some day measure up to such tactics, but now their position is clear. It is a straightforward one of voting for those whose policies they approve and against those whose policies they condemn. The issue of the campaign was not a choice between the two houses to protect tariff revision to Democrats, but choice in a contest between the parties. No Republican or Democrat, when appealed to the people to elect a free trade house for the purpose of preventing revision. The Republican, however, did, all of the Republican victories is a triumph of the protection idea over the free trade idea. Tariff revision was the issue, and the Republicans, with Democratic assistance, are with revisionists, or assumed they were with revisionists, but the Democrats were with Republicans. The issue was not a choice between the two parties as of standing out as principles. The Republicans were not on issue of protection, and the Democrats were not on issue of free trade. The people did not vote on these, they never thought of them. They had a chance for an statement in party conventions of party principles, and they did not. The national issue and when the people cast our vote for revision, as Mr. Babcock says they did, surprise the tariff revisionists.—Hamilton Herald.

FIRMIN IS REFUSED

SULTAN WILL NOT ALLOW PROPOSED EXCAVATIONS.

Idea of American Archaeologists Was to Investigate the So-Called Tomb of Abraham Near the Ruins of Babylon—Organizer of Expedition Unpopular.

No surprise was manifested at the information received from Constantinople that the Sultan of Turkey had again refused a "firman" or permission to an American expedition to excavate. The reason, a mountain about nine miles from the northwest of the ruins of Babylon, where a tradition of the country has it that the tomb of Abraham is situated.

There are two of these so-called "Tombs of Abraham" in this region, the one Mr. Banks desired to excavate and the other southeast of Babylon, where tradition says the Tower of Babel was situated. Interest is attached to both places owing to the ruins of buildings of an ancient people and to the traditions invested in them by the Arabs and Turks, but archaeologists do not believe that either is the site of the tomb of Abraham, locating the last resting place of the patriarch of the Children of Israel in the Cave of Machpelah, near Hebron in Palestine, where Abraham buried his wife Sarah.

Two years ago Mr. Banks, who is a graduate from Harvard, made efforts to secure permission from the Sultan of Turkey to excavate the ruins of City of Chaldees on the western bank of the Mesopotamia.

It is said that John H. Rockefeller contributed $15,000 in the fund which Mr. Banks raised to defray the expenses of the expedition he was organizing. He returned to Constantinople and got the representative of several American universities, including Harvard, Yale, Dartmouth, to approach the Porte for permission to excavate.

Refusal was made by the Sultan owing, it is said, to the religious associations of the so-called tomb of Abraham, many of the Mohammedans believing that the mountain, which is the place mentioned as Cutheh in Second Kings in the Bible, is really the site of the burying place of Abraham. In addition to the question of offending the religious beliefs of the natives of the country, it is said that while Mr. Banks was urged at the City of Harrisburg he incurred the displeasure of the Porte.

It was declared at the university that it is problematical whether Banks will ever secure permission to excavate in any part of the Ottoman Empire, although the Sultan has always been cordial toward exploring expeditions, especially those from America, and at present a party of German scientists are at work not far from where Banks desires to excavate.

A hard well works it repeats a day along the clover patch is convenient to the hive, and thus will draw the sugar from 180,000 different flowers in the course of a single day's work.

Cuba Loved by Daniel O'Connell.

The death in Dublin of Miss Rose McDowell in her eighty-first year recalls a link between the present generation and Daniel O'Connell. Miss McDowell in the closing years of Daniel O'Connell's life was a young lady of extraordinary talents and beauty. She captivated O'Connell and had the refusal of his hand and heart. The rejection of his suit could have weighed heavily on O'Connell and to have been one of the proximate causes of the illness to which he succumbed.

CAT LIVES IN ICE HOUSE

And Seems to Enjoy Low Temperature of the Place.

In one of Philadelphia's big cold storage warehouses, says the Record, of that city, is a cat that lives consistently in a temperature of ten degrees above zero, winter and summer. Business not sufficient to fill it, and on the rare occasions when ice is required in the cellar air she enters and establishes an order to get bare walls, then and while now this half little in that temperature, which is the forte of the cat's protection itself. "Do you know the environment that registers 20 degrees continually?" said the manager of the warehouse the other day. "We had been overrun with rodents and we turned the cat loose in an experiment. She proved to be the best and when we moved her to the cooler temperature it had no ill effect upon her. It would be interesting to know at what time how low a temperature a cat could stand."

FAT MAN WAS SLICK

AND THE LITTLE MAN WAS TAKING NO CHANCES

Sleeping-Car Comedy Replete With Humor—Porter Acts Consciousness Hypnotist in a Very Little Game of Confidence Game—A Complete Success.

A man who more than get his money's worth from the wonderful machines walked up one end of the sleeping car the other day. It happened in Chicago, and he joined the car at Kansas City. He was a little man, with a face like a pie, and he was in the smoking compartment when the train pulled out. He was talking to the porter when he came in, and he had a little, bright, twinkling eye, and he was a little, bright, twinkling man. He was a little, bright, twinkling man with a face like a pie, and he was talking to the porter when he came in.

"Where are you going to put me for the night, porter?" he said.

"Upper or lower, sah?" he asked.

"Upper or lower? Why, what difference does it make?" asked the little man.

"The fat man prefers upper berth, sah."

"Why, I told you that!" he said reproachfully. "You remember what happened last time I slept in an upper berth."

"Yes, sah, I do, sah," said the fat little man, man whom I know you sah, lawsy, sah! I remember a lot about that man, sah."

He analyzed their arguments between the entrance of the porter and the appearance of the fat man, looking as if he had just stepped out of the pages of a Dickens novel, so that I've seen my mother bent around for an old towel or a remnant of some worthy colony, sanitary earnest for the dirty work part of the job. And I guess maybe I didn't breathe a vish of deep thankfulness and relief when, after scrubbing the floor of those old-fashioned, lousy-wuzzy, canton flannel rags which passeth for yours sure, I put onto the old feather bed, with the rags to cover it, but outside the window and saw that the yard had had a week's wash in the distance."—Washington Times.

THE OLD-TIME BATH

SATURDAY NIGHT IMMERSION A TIME OF HORROR.

Middle-Aged Business Man Contrasts the Luxury of the Present Day with the Life in Small Western Town Twenty-five Years Ago.

"Last night," said the comfortable-looking man with the silver-white hair, "I stood by, as the saying was, while two lessened a scrubbing, one by Lessened younger. Now, I remember a period that, in those days, it set me to thinking about how much better the kids of today have it than they did when I was a kid myself.

"The highest mighty comfortable time one did and he just lay there in the tub and let his mother wash and manipulate him with all the limpness in life. Then the dressing was sure to stand up and let the light water from the shower run over him, and then he slipped out of the tub into a bath rug, and his mother gave him a rub-down and slipped on a fresh suit.

"I knew, when I was his age, that luxurious night bathing came not at the end of a long day, and I used to sort forward to it with a kind of a thrill of anticipation. But it didn't do the job as long as possible, and I'd have to my mother to appear at the back gate and summon me home when I was having a good time in the water. By that time she'd have the supper dishes all washed up and the sitting-room all ready for us to sit for Sunday, and the old wash tub, with its big wooden handles sticking up above the brim, would be out in the middle of the kitchen floor.

"After the water, now, she'd say to me, and then the job was on. It was a little scrubbing, but it was right in the back yard. That well filled it began to speak.

"Come, now, my garden, sir, said, "that if you prefer a lower berth, I shall be happy to oblige you."

"Tut, tut, tut," broke in the fat man, hastily. "Your offer is very kind, sir, but I really couldn't think of depriving you of your rights, sir! And I am sure the upper will do me right. I'm not in the least afraid, I assure you."

"Ah, but really, now, I insist. I have a number of relations in life, I know I shall rest much better in the upper berth."

The head disappeared and a moment later a weasened little man crawled out to the aisle and stood for a moment in one hand and a pair of shoes in the other.

"I insist, sir. The little man's voice was almost defiant.

"Oh, well, of course, if you insist," smiled the fat man, looking as few as nature would permit him to do.

The porter made no the bedside, and ten minutes later the fat man was snoring peacefully in his berth.

It seemed to the little man as he was lying in upper 15 that he had gotten with. But then, it may have been a flicker of the conscience.

story of Tennyson.

In Charles Brandford's recent lecture of reminiscences appears this special story of Alfred's conception of Amelia: "My father, says Brandford, "was sitting one night at the Oxford and Cambridge club with George Venables, Frank Lushington, Tennyson and two or three others. After dinner the pipe went on, as public life feet or three, and tilting back his chair 'more Agamemnon,' Venables strangers in the room and he was expostulated with by his companions, but he 'sat down your feet!' pleaded his host. Venables was a man of very high stature and very comfortable as I am. Every one is sitting at peace and another bottle of port is opened. They are all listening to Alfred, who, my father, people thinks, prefer Longfellow. Dawn went the fire.

Crinoline and Pomadours.

It is hard to believe that the hooped frameworks of crinoline dress could have been regarded by contemporary observers as well-formed and stable that at the theatre stage in Shaver and Ellsworth's comedy the young women in their expansive petticoats are simply comical, although very positive proved from the point of view of other days. Few persons who sneered, would care to see crinoline come back but there is something to be said of the taste of women a trifle more than forty years ago, it complied favorably with the pale ladies of the Empire and the style of the present day.—Boston Transcript.

NORTHERN MICHIGAN.

Traverse City is after a beet sugar factory, with good prospects of getting it.

Harbor Springs was visited by a disastrous fire last week Saturday morning, a row of buildings owned by W. J. Clarke on Spring street being consumed, entailing a loss of $25,000.

A direct freight carrying road from the Soo to St. Ignace will be at last built in the new electric line which, it is announced will be built early in the spring. The run will be made in an hour, with power from the Michigan Lake Superior Power Co.

Niles Covert received fatal injuries while shopping in Robinson's woods near Hopkins. He had cut down a hardwack and was running to get out of the way when the top, broken off by falling another tree, struck him in the back, fracturing the spine.

The decision of the board of supervisors of Antrim county of Bellaire had was not satisfactory to the people of Mancelona village and Mancelona township in the matter of allowing the smallpox bills. The board lopped off $800 from the village claim and $600 from the township claim.

E. W. Thompson of Boyne Falls paid a farewell visit to his sister, Mrs. Herman Kunert, and his many friends here, the first of the week. He has accepted the fields in and about Duluth for school membership in the expanded order of the Maccabees, and left for his new field of labor on Wednesday.

Boyne lumber jacks' demand for something more led them into trouble at one of the camps. The old rye had a run out. They felt something lacking to be procured to continue their pleasure additions. They raided the camp store and came whooping back with a supply of patent medicines, which they imbibed so freely that their condition is highly critical.

The amount of stone crushed by the Sly stone crusher west of Petoskey has reached such enormous proportions that the Pere Marquette officials are considering the advisability of putting a special freight on the road to handle the output exclusively. The train, if put on, will run between the crusher and Elk Rapids, where the crushed stone is used, making one and possibly two trips a day, and will consist of 500,000 pounds capacity cars.

Another raw mill is now being erected in the vicinity of Boyne Falls. The proprietors are W. Sears and J. Thompson of this place. The mill is going up on the site of Cobb & Mitchell's old camp 22 about four miles from Boyne Falls. The logs are now being put out and the mill will be ready to run sometime this month. The mill will cut out 1,000,000 feet of hemlock belonging to Mr. Sears which is now being lumbered and with other timber in view and, cannon work will be a permanent thing. The mill will employ about 30 men immediately and all products will be marketed through Boyne Falls—Boyne Falls Leader.

A Traverse City special says: What was perhaps the most miraculous escape from death ever known in this section was that of Arthur Gardner and Miss Essie Vinson, of this city, yesterday. They were driving from Williamsburg to this city, and as they were crossing the Pere Marquette track noticed a train bearing down upon them, too late to avoid being struck, Miss Vinson jumped, luckily clearing the track, but Garland was not so fortunate, for he was thrown upon the rails in such a manner that escape seemed impossible, in his struggle to get away the frightened horse kicked the fallen man off the track just in time to save his life. The horse was killed.

Traverse City Eagle: The home of J. G. Ramsdell in Garfield township, a mile and a half from the city was destroyed by fire this afternoon shortly after 3:30. At that time Mrs. Ramsdell was in the house and F. Smith who is employed on the farm and at the time was working near the house, discovered that the attic was on fire about at the same moment. Mrs. Ramsdell immediately turned the alarm to the city fire department and the chemical engine was quickly dispatched but was of little use more than to keep the flames down enough to allow goods to be taken from the house. Judge Ramsdell who has been confined to his home several months with serious heart trouble was first tenderly cared for and taken to the house of Mrs. J. P. Goodish, also the little grandchildren who live at the Ramsdell home. It was feared that the excitement would have a bad effect on the judge but he took it very philosophically and showed his wife to remain behind and superintend the removal of the household goods. The was done with the assistance of a number of teams from the J. R. Overlick factory and from the city and nearly everything was moved in safety to the large granary near the house. The large granary, which is considered one of the finest and most valuable in northern Michigan, was very carefully taken out and now who assisted in the work says that he thinks conservatively a volume will be found to have been injured. The fire caught in the attic from a defective chimney and as the house is a very old one the thoroughly seasoned wood burned almost like kindling and but for the chemical engine everything would have been lost but as it is, the greater loss will be that of the house which was not a costly structure but was prized by Mr and Mrs Ramsdell as the home in which nearly all their married life has been spent.

SCHOOL COM. COLUMN.

A teacher who contracts with a school board for a stipulated wage and then passes in his resignation because some other board offers two or three dollars per month more, has but little care for his honor.

A teacher who wed should be as good as he is bold, if it is not he is not fit to teach school. We can assure our teachers that such work is fatal. It has occurred but one or two times in this county, under our observation and we consider it detrimental to the interests of our schools to overlook such offenses.

We hope the patrons of the schools will pay attention to the legislation, this winter, along school lines.

Several important changes are likely to occur, we are desirous that the patrons become thoroughly conversant with the subject of "centralization of schools" and "transportation of pupils."

Some of the changes that are likely to occur in school affairs will be of great importance to the tax payers of Charlevoix County, we think.

The Traverse City Beet Sugar Meeting.

At a recent mass meeting in Traverse City to hear the sugar factory project, Mr. Saylor, a representative of the Secretary of Agriculture, was present.

"My coming illustrates the interest the secretary of agriculture is taking in the interest of the farmers," said Mr. Saylor in his opening remarks. "I came direct from Omaha.

"Sugar is the largest item of import of the United States," he continued. "The amount imported last year was $100,000,000. We send this money abroad for a product that can be produced in Michigan. Look at the enormous industry that has been built up in this state in five years. The value of sugar made here in 1901 was $6,000,000.

Mr. Saylor gave the average crop of sugar beets in the United States as 9.7-0 tons an acre and the average price $4.50 per ton. This is $12 per acre profits, after allowing the farmer $6 per day for his labor. He spoke of the pulp from sugar beets and said that in nearly all states it was in demand for feeding stock, being valued principally for its sanitary effect, and make fattening fat stock feel on it. The establishing of a beet sugar factory aids creameries, as can be seen by the California sugar beets demand more attention than cash or potatoes. Good farming is necessary.

Mr. Saylor said that $250,000,000 would be required to build factories enough to produce the sugar now imported from foreign countries. It would require 18,000,000 tons of beets annually to supply these factories and the farmers would receive $54,750,000.

Sandy soil if fertile is good for sugar beets. Beets raised in dry seasons have the highest percentage of sugar. The sugar does not come from the earth but from the atmosphere.

CONGREGATIONAL CHURCH.

Rev. James Byslop, Ph.D., Pastor.

The Annual business meeting of the church was held on Tuesday evening and was a most enthusiastic occasion. The attendance was large, nearly 75 being present, notwithstanding the stormy weather.

Reports of all the departments of the church activity were presented, and showed much excellent and progressive work. Thirty-four have been added to the church membership, making an actual gain of twenty-six. The Sunday School, Y. P. S. C. E., Ladies' Aid and Ladies' Missionary Society have all made substantial gain. The financial reports showed large sums of money raised for different purposes. The treasurer's report showed nearly $1000 raised for local church expenses, and $1400 for missions. The Sunday School raised over $70 for its own needs and the Ladies' Aid raised over $200. The Ladies' Missionary Society, Young Peoples' society and Men's Auxiliary all did well financially in their departments, while the choir, through concerts, contributed much to the new organ fund.

Few changes were made in the official board of the church, the chief change being that of treasurer, Mr. A. T. Burnett wishing after several years of duty to be relieved, Mr. F. F. Backus was elected to fill the office.

At the close of the business session a delightfully pleasant social hour was spent in the church parlors, when music was given by the members of the choir and refreshments served. The church has bright prospect of a better year in 1903, though 1902 was every way good. The fellowship, harmony, Christian spirit and zeal are excellent.

DETROIT TRAVELING MAN DIES IN CHICAGO.

Two Jets Open in Room When He Is Found—Whether Suicide or Accident Is Not Known—Chicago Boy May Have Been Poisoned.

St. Joseph, a young man of Detroit, Mich., who was married for the first time in the Hannah Hotel in Chicago, yesterday afternoon, is dead in a room in a rooming house on the Western Boulevard, Albuquerque, which is the home of his father, who is in the Sanatorium for the benefit of his health. Whether he died by his own hand or by accident is not known, the coroner's office has been notified of his death. It was found that the gas jets in the room were open, and the room was filled with gas when the door was opened. Although the police of Chicago claim to have found no evidence to show that the young man committed suicide, it is generally believed that he died by his own hand. Joseph was married to Miss Ethel Gray, daughter of Mrs. Emma Gray, of Detroit, Mich., on Saturday, March 16, at the Hannah Hotel in Chicago. The young man was a traveling salesman for the firm of Parke, Davis & Company, of Detroit, and was well known in Chicago. He

BURIAL OF THE DEAD

OLD GRAVEYARDS A MENACE TO CITIES

Rapid Growth of Centers of Population Makes the Desecration of These Resting Places of the Dead Unavoidable — London's Crowded Cemeteries.

Almost every page of the records of London and Paris contains examples of the desecration of churchyards, graveyards, and there is hardly a city in the civil world that has not given, in at least one of these resting places of the dead, a shocking illustration of the results of rapid growth, contrary of dollar becomes the temple of a Gothamite business man, or site of graveyards in New York and Brooklyn not long a frequent and dense spot, it falls to attract attention.

When the Gallic metropolis of the Seine became overcrowding the living demanded possession of the dead, which, and, simultaneously, chemists and sanitary engineers began to be concerned as regards the effects that would result from the decomposition of the bodies of men by the tens of thousands. Accordingly, in 1786 the Parliament of Paris ordered that the dead should be buried in the Catacombs, which, in certain quarters of Lutetia, extends one hundred or thousand miles, and, in some places, is twenty feet wide. Bodies of the poor were thrown into the Catacombs, as in Paris, and the French in Rome open each other's graves in the sewers, and Chinese sentiment has been in accordance with the Gallic, in the matter of burials. Nowadays, when Canton is decaying, bodies of the poor are thrown into the Pearl River, and, in the villages of Canton, Hindoos and Buddhists, in the parts of Southern India, and also in parts of Second Cousin Sarah

BY THE AUTHOR OF "ANNE JUDGE, SPINSTER" "LITTLE KATE KIRBY," ETC., ETC.

Thomas Rashell was not prepared for his sister's marriage. She was right; she was clumsy. This was not the woman of her young age, who had seen beyond him, and whom he had talked over quite their cases, who had been afraid of him, and had not been altogether wanting in affection for him. She was a wife, also, whom he had carefully selected to find at Sedge Hill.

"You could rule me if you could," said he, at last. "You would stand between me and my choice of the good luck which has come to the old women. You would put on ruffs as a law, and leave me to starve—or shock—in pity to the weaker of the primrose."

"I think that possibly I am in the place properly upon the occasion," replied Mrs. Rashell, with the composure for the first time. "Sarah and your brother are arriving this little house-warming, and I proved sister to Sarah."

"Sarah! Sarah! Sarah! Sarah!" cried Tom's friend rose and stood stiffly out of the room, and through the open door, where he was lost to view.

"Will you tell me who this is?" said Sarah, pointing to the little Scotch woman with Captain Paterson last disappeared.

"A naval officer—merchant service. Tom exclaimed, "an intimate friend of mine—a regular world."

"The best friend I have ever had, it was in Potter's Court," said Sarah Rashell suddenly. "Tom and I met on Nov. 7, at precisely noon of the night and came functions in such circumstances that we will ever be friends of a lower position than himself. He has been with me in another blue packages of bad money. He was a captain, too, but he is now in a good camera."

Thomas Rashell sat back in his chair, and glared at his sister. Sarah looked at him.

"You want money, I suppose?" she said.

"Why, Lucy?" he added, with a short, dry laugh.

"How much will satisfy you, and take you from this house?"

"Grandmother does not want to part with me," said Sarah. "But if you and I are likely to agree, and matters can be arranged, a good round sum—money—payable in advance, and my owner down in the self for a few days."

"That rather be."

"Have you no a large sum now, and have done with me. I'll go abroad—I'll take another name, and I'll be quiet."

"I have enough of my own. I have arrange with some of my friends to put out money. An, Tom," she said, softly, let her hand on his arm, "I don't care for grandmother in my own house, and I'm sure you don't. I'm a good woman to help you a little, but you must not be too experienced. I'm half the money—and down alarm at all hours, and the servants banging shutters and locking doors as if we were in a siege. WAS IT OUR BRADLEY?

William H. Bradley, the Wisconsin Millionaire, None Other Than Wesley J. Bradley.

We take the following from a Milwaukee paper. It describes a romance that began in Charlevoix, more than twenty-five years ago, and closed at a death-bed in upper Wisconsin last month.

William H. Bradley, of Milwaukee and Tomahawk, multimillionaire and benefactor, was married to his stenographer, Miss Marie Hannemyer, while he was on a sick bed in charge of a physician, and trained nurses in his former wife died Nov. 15, at his home here. This ceremony was performed by Judge Halsey in the presence of a few friends and an unusual careful effort was made to keep it secret.

The bride is 32 years old, a native of Wisconsin and she has been with Mr. Bradley for 15 years. During most of that time he has lived at the lumber town of Tomahawk, in the far north, while his wife, whom he seldom accompanied the business here and devoted most of her time to charitable work. Mr. Bradley is one of the wealthiest men in the state, and as eccentric as wealthy. He is about 65 years old and never been sick up to the present time.

The new bride he married has made wonderful strikes. He has built the finest hotel in the north, saw mills and railroads and established Episcopalian missions, endowing them liberally.

About twenty-eight years ago, Wesley J. Bradley, wife and young daughter, came to Charlevoix to live, and for about ten years thereafter made Charlevoix their home. They were poor, and Mrs. Bradley took summer boarders and did sewing. Bradley never did anything, except for a short time he owned a team, and he seldom went with it. He was never a drinker, but all residents will bear witness to the statement that a better man than W. J. Bradley never lived.

For several years he did nothing but hang about town, sitting down dry good boxes and smoking an old pipe. During this time a physician named Preston boarded with the Bradleys. The shiftlessness of Bradley finally led to an estrangement between he and his wife which later culminated in a separation and finally a divorce. Preston soon after left here. Mrs. Bradley following, their marriage occurring in some western locality. Bradley soon after left here, and we have never since heard of him whereabouts.

Was the Wm. H. Bradley, the Wisconsin millionaire, Wesley J. Bradley, the Charlevoix character, one and the same person. The evidence seems to establish that fact. Immediately after his death, Milwaukee papers published his picture, and to the editor of this paper, who knew Wesley J. Bradley well, the resemblance was striking. The more the picture was studied, the more remarkable the resemblance. His age as given in the papers—65—would be about correct.

But the strongest point of evidence yet to come. Two years ago, Mr. E. Brown, of this place, had business in upper Wisconsin, and visited Tomahawk, Bradley's home. While there, Mr. Brown became acquainted with Mr. Bradley. When the latter learned where Mr. Brown lived, he told him he formerly lived in Charlevoix and made inquiry about certain people here, among them the editor of this paper.

While at that time thinking that perhaps the two were the same, Bradley was then alive and at the top of the ladder, and nothing was printed concerning the matter. But the recent death of Bradley, and his second marriage, recalls early Charlevoix history, and freshens the evidence that the two were the same.

His marriage following his departure from Charlevoix may explain the change of name from Wesley J. to Wm. H. But if this article reaches the eye of any person who knew the Tomahawk Bradley personally, we give this text, which will settle the whole matter. Wesley J. Bradley was born with "web-footed" hands in his childhood a surgeon operation had cut the ligaments and separated the fingers; but the deformity was plainly apparent in his hands. Bradley told the writer of this that it was a "curse" in his boyhood days, as for that period, been frightened by a goose.

If no late William H. Bradley, of Tomhawk, Wis., and Wesley J. Bradley, of Charlevoix were one and the same person, of which there seems little doubt, the fact supplies the elements of a romance in real life, that is, to say the least, remarkable. There are many people in Charlevoix who will want to trace the career of Bradley the good for nothing, to Bradley the philanthropist and millionaire.

Under date of Jan. 16th, Geo. F. Brown writes us from Florida stating that he had read of Bradley's death, and made claim that Bradley told him he formerly lived in Charlevoix.

WHAT ATTORNEY GENERAL KNOX RECOMMENDS.

P. C. KNOX.

That all discriminatory practices affecting interstate trade be made offenses to be adjudged and punished.

Such legislation to be directed also against those who give and those who receive illegal advantages and to cover discrimination in prices in special competitions in particular localities resorted to for the purpose of destroying competition.

In order to reach producers guilty of these offenses who are in producers beyond national control a penalty should be imposed upon the interstate and foreign trade population of goods produced by them and federal courts should be given power to restrain such transportation, at the governments suit.

Such legislation is necessary because the existing interstate commerce law does not give an effective remedy in this class of cases against either shipper or carrier.

A continuation or renewal in the proposed Department of Commerce should be created, whose duty it should be to investigate the operations of corporations engaged in interstate or foreign commerce to gather information and to publish such information as the secretary may deem advisable or as may be required to do so by the President. This would be a first step in securing proper publicity in the business of the country, which is the surest remedy for the malpractices of any concern doing an interstate business.

FAITH IS NOT LOST

PROTECTIONIST SENTIMENT IS STRONG WITH THE PEOPLE.

Talk of Tariff Tinkering Originates not with the Rank and File But With Certain Leaders Who Hope Finds to Gain and Ambitions to Serve.

Any tinkering with the tariff at the present time will be a grievous error, the evidence which our economic conditions now offer and concomitants have failed to the continuance of that prosperity, which for the past four years, or since the enactment of the Dingley tariff in 1897, has been growing with every year and which is not a mere spasm, but a decided expansion, is more than a mere suggestion, it is a warning. Let the Republican party alone, and it will do the right thing by the people.

The history of this policy dates back to the enactment of protective tariff laws. The opinion of the people for the years preceding the year 1861 were years of hard times and depression. But in that year Congress passed a protective tariff and until the year 1872 the country enjoyed unprecedented prosperity for a period of four years. Hopes were then dashed and the country was put towards with all the powers of the manufacturing interests and associations to change the existing tariff. There was a time that the effort of free trade was made in the United States under the name of "The American Plan." It is the cream of certain leaders, which matter they need the setting on the fire will never reach a boiling awakening.—Simpsonia (Illinois) Herald.

CHASED DEER ON BICYCLE.

Animal Seemingly Enjoyed His Race With the Machine.

C. H. Brown of Hornellsville, Pa., was making a leisurely trip on his bicycle of the Erie road between Hornellsville and Hunter, when he saw, the New York Sun, a big buck come out of a thicket and into the canal boat alongside.

The buck crossed a mud sill and then a wooden bridge at the place the boat wheel, and then went bounding along, the city boy of the big fork footing it per on all speed, but the lively big buck gained a number of times a mile, being the best animal of life.

Coming to a lock in the canal the buck leaped out of the canal to one side, cleared the towpath at another lock in the Lackawanna river, crossed to the island side, bounded across the track of the Erie railroad, leaped a wire fence, a few yards ahead of an incoming coal train, and disappeared into the woods.

Trusts and Insurance.

The common sense of the American people is asserting itself in the matter of the insurance of life and property. The trusts have been driven out of Illinois and Texas, and the Supreme court of Kansas has ousted the Standard Oil company and the Standard Oil company is now in the state of Kansas, and the Standard Oil company is now in the state of Kansas, and the Standard Oil company is now in the state of Kansas,

Mr. Montague was made chairman of finance, which position he has held for 15 years.

—Superintendent John Wood announces that owing to failing health, he will not be a candidate for re-nomination at the coming spring. And this affords the SENTINEL an opportunity to speak of the public services of Mr. Wood. John Wood came to Charlevoix county in 1869, the year the SENTINEL was founded—thirty four years ago. For 32 of these 34 years he has held office, and has never been defeated. He was successive—Justice, Treasurer, register of deeds four years, county treasurer four years, and sheriff two years. Two years ago he was nominated by the county convention for sheriff, and was defeated by a majority of 1,000 votes. Mr. Wood was one of the most popular men in the county, and he was defeated by the strongest democratic majority ever given in the county. Mr. Wood has been a faithful officer, and has been a good citizen, and a supervisor he has been especially valuable, and it is safe to say that no man knows more about real estate in Charlevoix county than John Wood—not a township in the county but he knows the ins and outs of every piece of property in it. Mr. Wood has been a good public servant, and they should try him again, and they should try him again. The company asks no favor—to contract a large acreage, but does ask that all do a little, and it is certain that with and average year they will be well remunerated. Every farmer in the county can do a little, and the many littles will create a sufficiency.

The obligation to aid the company and to stimulate the acreage work also rests equally upon the business and professional interests of this community. They have received great benefit and they will receive much more. Many communities would have given a site and a large bonus, and many other things, including a heavy quantity of land, to secure the factory—but, not so here. The citizens with hardly a dollar of expense to the municipality or the people. There is a parkable fact that during the long, hard work of creation the Macomb Sugar Company did not receive the encouragement that it was entitled to from from the entirety of this community. In several quarters it met with a captious and hostile spirit that was little less than shameful. It is hoped, now that the full stature of the enterprise is in full view, that active friendship and eagerness to help HIM will be found everywhere, and this is what the company expects. Let every business and professional man in this city say, "As for me, I will do what I can." Let a meeting be called, following the plan elsewhere adopted, and a united and determined effort made by all the people. Then we can not fail to win, and the sugar mill will be a solid and enduring success.

PYTHIAN PLEASURE.

Charlevoix Knights Are Visited by the Grand Chancellor Tuesday Evening.

One of the greatest events in the history of Charlevoix Pythianism occurred at Castle Hall last Tuesday evening, on the occasion of the visit of Grand Chancellor Levi A. Catto, of Grand Rapids, and Grand Master of Arms Palmer, of Manistee.

The visit of Grand Chancellor Catto, being of the nature of an inspection, the rank of Knight was conferred in simplified form on two candidates, the work being a friendly contest between two "teams" commanded by W. L. Hampton and A. L. Fitch, respectively. While the work of both teams was admirably well done, Mr. Fitch carried off the honors with his team.

At the close of the work a banquet was spread by Osterer Dalman, and it was almost three o'clock when the gathering dispersed. There were speeches and a jolly good time generally.

Delegations of Knights from Central Lake, Bellaire and East Jordan were present.

VIEW OF THE SITUATION.

The Duty of the Farmers and Others to the Sugar Company.

[The following from the Mt. Clemens Monitor applies with special force to the situation in Charlevoix.] The development of the sugar industry in Macomb county in one whose large importance is not now underrated by anyone. Particularly is it recognized in Mt. Clemens. Merchants and all others now realize that the business of the City has been greatly stimulated and benefitted by the immense expenditure of money that has taken place here. It has been felt in every avenue of trade. Even the men who held back and would do nothing to help the enterprise now realize to what extent the common good has been augmented by the courage and efforts of their more patriotic fellow citizens. The sugar mill has given remunerative employment to hundreds of men and boys and children. It set all the horses to work, and made a market for hundreds of dollars' worth of machinery. It has increased the value of hundreds of acres of land.

But this is only the time, it is confident that the year of its creation has been one of unparalled embarrassments and great loss to the company. The acreage promised was most difficult, and it was only after frequently repeated calls, that 3,000 acres of beets were secured. This should have produced at least 40,000 tons of beets, which would have yielded approximately, 8,000,000 pounds of sugar and a handsome profit. However, such was the litigation, and conditions, at the moment of trade, unprecedented in 50 years, that from this great acre age less than 16,000 tons of beets were secured. The year was pregnant with incalculable loss to the company, that following the incredible obstruction to morning company, upon the tariff agitation, meant almost ruin.

But the company kept its every promise, it refunded members. It has met every obligation, and its credit stands unassailed by anybody. Considering everything its record has been remarkable.

It is not proposed to stop. It is proposed to go ahead, with a determination to retrieve the losses made and to get in another campaign the great undertaking fairly on its feet. To accomplish this nothing is necessary but to secure a large acreage of beets for a mill that in economy, production and accompliment is surpassed by nothing of its kind in the world. The splendid mill will work for the farmers if only it be given the two product.

Now in this matter of acreage the company wants and appreciates active co-operation of all the people of this city and county. It feels that it merits such co-operation.

The farmers should put their shoulders to the wheel. It is true that in many instances they have not, but they have, with their crops, and in almost every case failure can be charged to the weather conditions and the climate. Many farmers have made money in spite of all, and the achievement is reasonable that the condition of a year unprecedented in industry should not deter the farmers from trying again. They lost three years ago in succession. Not just fail they planted again, in the hope of better things. They planted and they lost. Now they

She had gone deeper than this into Dunsle before her problem had arisen; she had found Dunsle in her hall and had—not quite without a little trouble, but she was a good deal used to managing—had set the young man down to dinner, and had shown him her garden, and had shown him her cows and her poultry, and had shown him her world, and he had seen that she was good and happy and honoured, and he had seen her lovely home, and he had seen her lovely self, and he had—she was sure of it—begun the pangs and pleasures of love.

"Mr. Dunsle," she had said, when he was at last ready to go, "I—I don't know what you have come down for, but I—I hope you will come again."

"Thank you very much," he had said; "I will."

"Of course, I don't know what you have come down for," she had repeated, with a little more emphasis, and a little more hurry, and a little more confusion than she had yet shown; "but I—I hope you will come again."

"Thank you very much," he had said again; "I will."

GRANGE WORK FOR 1903.

National Lecturer Rochester Has Arranged a Fine Programme

National Lecturer N. J. Rochester has sent the following excellent programme of timely and important topics for grange discussion for 1903:

First quarter—Good of Topic, organization, January 1. Why should the organization of Patrons of Husbandry? February. To what extent is the organization of farmers justifiable, and what is our duty in protecting the people from unjust demands of combined capital and organized labor?

Second Quarter—General Topic, Education—April. What influence can be exerted by the grange for the improvement of rural schools? May. What influence can be exerted by the grange that will secure the proper consideration of agricultural matters in agricultural colleges? June. What can be done by the grange to aid and improve the farmers' institutes?

Third Quarter—General Topic, Farm Management. July. What are the advantages from the use of improved farm machinery? August. What of the importance and advantage of rotating and fertilizing manures for crops? September. What farm crops are the most profitable in this locality?

Fourth Quarter—General Topic, Character Building—October. What influence has home life upon the young in the formation of character? November. What influence has the grange in the formation of character? December. What should be the relation of the grange and church?

BETTER BUSINESS METHODS

Saving the Wastes on the Farm an Important Matter

Some one has said that if he could know what we wanted on an average American farm he could live to confound. This, I fear, is only too true in the average farmer. He does not make a study of his business. While thousands of dollars of the best of brain power are lavished on growth of the best farm methods in raising a waste to this or that, no matter one word on it, he is bringing commercial farming at 3.50 to 4.50 per bushel for the land. While farmers have given time and fertile land for other uses on shifting hay and grain in the immediate vicinity of a market does not realize that he is yielding his most of certain wants for sells hay.

There isn't a thousand other wastes on our farms are brought to the farmer's notice by the discussions in the grange and the farmer must be dull indeed who does not reap some benefit from them. A few and just estimates of the commercial value of the fuel, the time of the factory, the mine and the professional man must come about through better business methods. The farmer signed kit with others of his own profession and at least devote as much energy to marketing his crop as to producing it.

There are many causes to remove before agriculture will receive a fair and just return for the capital and labor invested in the industry, but the remedy of these causes lies in the hands of the farmer himself. He must cooperate with others in improving the business methods and must apply the same thought, energy and business ability in applying that we applied to any other industry.—George A. Fuller.

Rural Free Mail Delivery.

At no distant day the rural free mail delivery service will require double carriers. This is a large number. When we consider the brief time this service has been in operation, its success may be considered phenomenal. During the fiscal year over 12,000 petitions have been sent to Washington for rural mail service. This proves that the farmers are waking up to their privileges. All this is gratifying to the members of the Order of Patrons of Husbandry, for there was the first organization that attempted to secure the establishment of the free mail delivery service. Instead it is in the direct reach of their efforts.

Special Grange Work.

The Pomona Grange, meeting at its recent session recommended that a special grange week be set apart in February by the master of the state grange and that every subordinate grange in the state be urged to make special effort during that time to interest its membership. It is a good plan and worthy of general adoption.

The title "farmer" of a grange does not necessarily signify that he must be in best sense. He has other duties of more importance than farming. He owes duties to the literary and educational work of the grange, and his position is as responsible a one as the master's.

The grange is shaping itself together and is moving to the front. It is beginning to appreciate the magnitude of its responsibility, the largeness of its opportunity. It is doing things and getting ready to do even greater things.—American Grange Bulletin.

The three general purposes of the grange are for social elevation, the educational advancement and the moral improvement of the farmer's family.

A live, flourishing subordinate grange will bring to its community in worth $1,000 to any thrifty village.—Governor Bachelder, New Hampshire.

New England granges pay more assessmen to the remaining work of the order than those of other states. So we said also known.

Vermont added 1,000 members the past year, Oregon 1,000, New York 2,000, Michigan 6,000, Massachusetts 1,000 and Maine 5,000. These are the largest in harvest.

The national grange will probably meet in or near the middle of the winter of 1904. In 1903 it will convene in New York state.

Michigan is said to have more grange halls owned by subordinate granges than any other state in the Union.

The claim of the Massachusetts Agricultural college is the largest in existence.

The grange is a strong advocate of the parcels post.

GENESIS OF THE GRANGE.

Its Effect on Industrious on the Farm—Its Work and Its Prospects.

[illegible]

Continued.

[illegible] the grange are on the right line, and if we do our duty in the future as we have done in the past, the future of the grange is assured. Its work is not yet ended, and it is for us to see that it is not. Let us be faithful to our trust, and we will be rewarded by the consciousness of having done our duty.

[illegible] the grange, which was the power of influence in the community.

In this good work the grange should be the leader in the matter of the energy and strength of the master. Inspired by noble thoughts in the form of noble deeds, and that commander who shall stand in the battle of life for the farmer and the world.

The same forces that lead to organization of capital and capital to form trust unions will lead finally to the social business and fraternal cooperation of the farmers.

As the course of this republic depends upon a successful agriculture, and a successful agriculture depends upon a thorough knowledge of the business and an understanding of our relations to each other and to the world, then it is not so much a matter of duty as patriotic impulse that leads us to take up the work of the grange, and as the grange is developed along the lines it has marked out for itself we will there be developed a higher manhood and womanhood. Nobler deeds will be wrought, nobler thoughts will be spoken, nobler lives will be lived, and the enlightenment and general improvement we may see wrought the real and our reward will be sure and certain.—J. Tobin, Secretary New York State Grange.

An Important Decision.

National Master Jones made an important decision at the session of the Maine state grange and settled a point that has been a matter of much discussion. The decision was to repeal on the reading of the recommendation was as follows:

HON. ALBERT SIDNEY JONES OF NORTH BEND, IND., MASTER NATIONAL GRANGE.

"Resolved, that in the meetings of a subordinate grange it be resolved and adopted at the close of the said meeting. At the opening of the following meeting the record should be read for the information of those present. No other action should be taken."

A Popular Adage.

A man said to the editor of the Ag, "I don't believe in the grange, and he evidently was sincere. In a popular adage, "It makes no difference what a man believes so he is sincere." Let us see. I take a team for the north, finally between that to the south or the south. Will I bring up at the south just the same? It makes all the difference in the world whether we believe in anything because we have investigated it or whether our belief is founded on ignorance. Our belief in anything does not make it so if it is not truth.—G. A. F.

A Foundation Principle.

"To develop a better and better manhood and womanhood among ourselves" is one of the foundation principles of the grange. Where we begin to look around us to see how we can fasten the burden on some other shoulders, then is it that we begin the development of a truly higher type of manhood and womanhood within ourselves. If we can put some burden of care off on others we do not do much for them, we may feel that we have not lived in vain.

The Grange Favors Good Roads.

The grange in some sections of New York is the most important factor in the good roads movement. In one county it is said that the supervisors had taken adverse action on the matter and it was the grange that put the matter up and created public sentiment in favor of better roads, with the result that all public results of the issued of supervisors resolutions were passed unanimously in favor of improving the roads asked for by the grange, the efforts of supervisors, the Brigham Young, having had "a peculiar fad."

Wants to Know.

"I want to know" is an expression we hear old women sometimes use. It is the character of one who is ever driven to to find out the truths of life for herself. The man or woman who really "wants to know" will seldom have occasion to go to hypnotic doctors and search for knowledge necessarily begin to the darkness of ignorance.

A company has recently been organized at Boston, O., with a capital stock of $100,000 to make a specialty of growing vegetables for the Cleveland market.

BENEFITS OF CO-OPERATION

Farmers Must Unite For Their Own Protection.

In late years in common cities, when long ago it was only energy in the supervision to every kind of human activity, the elements of are individual to help themselves and unfortunately overlooked. The result has difficulty and to eliminate the efforts of many who would assimilate in the instance change cities, acting individually, the grange by cooperation gave the individual to achieve a success which he would not be able to do acting alone. The interchange of experience and the stimulating influence of associated unit others are interested in our particular work are some of the great benefits of cooperation among those engaged in the same work.

Another result of cooperative effort through the grange has been the ability of the farmer, through this organization, to present a solid front to the enemies of agriculture. When friend and competitor became apparent to the manufacture of spurious dairy products, cooperative effort by the members of the grange checked such enemies and made the discriminative bill to prevent that fraud from the consumer. When it became apparent that farmers were being defrauded by different firms which sold various kinds of cattle food which were adulterated, the unit of effort of the grange brought about the passage of laws which have powerfully aided in stopping that fraud.

While the grange seeks to be the means of benefiting its members, it has not the other class of people, yet the basis it. The law of self-protection compels the farmer to cooperating with other farmers in the buying and selling. In the past the farmer has spent the greater part of his energy in producing his crop, only to see a large part of these crops go to pay the cost of its preparation and handling in other words his profits were absorbed by those engaged in commerce. Only through cooperation will others engaged in agriculture see the farmer correct this state of affairs.—George A. Fuller, Master New York State Grange.

MASSACHUSETTS GRANGES

What the State Grange Is Doing For Farmers in the Bay State.

The annual meeting was held at Worcester Mass. George S. Ladd was re-elected master. There are over 100 granges in the state with about 15,000 members. The state grange favored state legislation to reimburse farmers for cattle killed by the cattle commission in view of the trouble from foot and mouth disease this prevailing. Further extension of rural free mail delivery was urged, and grangers were asked to observe Arbor day by the planting of trees along the highways. Nice equitable taxation was advocated. The grangers also recommended that a bill be introduced into the legislature which will oblige manufacturers of concentrated foodstuffs to put on the outside of the bag the exact formula of the contents. It recommended that some of the agricultural societies of the state be consolidated. The secretary of the Industry and Antiquity Mutual Fire Insurance company, contributed by the state grange, reported that during the year ending Dec. 1 policies were written to the amount of $407,008 and that the total outstanding risks are $705,205. Losses that year were only $750.

The Grange as an Educator.

The yardstick of the department of agriculture speaks of the grange as a factor in agricultural education as follows: The second half of the nineteenth century has witnessed a great awakening of the farmers of this country to their educational needs and opportunities. This has led to the broadening of the work and influence of the general agencies for their education. The state and local societies have been augmented by great national organizations such as the Patrons of Husbandry, which, besides doing a great deal for the promotion of their peculiar welfare, have done much to quicken the desire of multitudes of farmers for definite education in matters relating to their art.

The grange teaches the farmer to think.

We strive to make happy homes.

NEW HAMPSHIRE GRANGES.

Much Interest in Rural Free Mail Delivery and Good Roads.

We quote the following from from the annual address delivered the New Hampshire state grange at Dover, N. J. Barbelow, last master.

The grange has experienced a progressive year in New Hampshire, and the present membership of 22,000 shows a net gain over and losses of 400. The financial [illegible] have been well attended. [illegible] Grange Mutual Fire Insurance company has been fortunate. The journal has been eminently successful and the property upon which policies are now in force amounts to [illegible] dollars. All losses and expenses have been promptly paid, leaving a surplus of over $100,000 over the sum of insurance upon the same property in stock companies. The establishment of rural free mail delivery is one of the grandest achievements of the Order. In New Hampshire ninety-five routes have been established, extended, and to 113 in Maine and 124 in Connecticut. New Hampshire stands second in the number of places of mail handled on its rural routes, giving our state, according to 4,067,652. The free delivery branch of the order is expected to succeed, the grange assume of authority being about one.

Wilmot Cheverill, Grange.

The Worcester (Mass.) Telegram remarks that Wilmot Cheverill, of Concord, N. H., and elsewhere, is so he is finished on the staff of Governor S. J. Ballinger of the Patrons of Husbandry grange, Governor Winston will be opening the grange and instructing on the respective merits of the tariff and the wind bags in a fourth grange preserve. He has shot the bear for a Chelmsford church, and he may have raised a tariff to shot the bear. He has business log of the forest, and he has proclaimed his entrance into the timber patch. He will have to prove that before he will be taken seriously. He [illegible] a strong argument for every grange to equip and build its own hall. Surely the farmers of all states should be incorporated under the laws of the state in order to insure business efficiency. It goes with much favor of grange fire insurance. Grange companies exist in three-quarters of the state, and the aggregate value of risks carried is about $100,000 and the annual cost of insurance has been about $1 per $1,000. He strongly urged that Hollowell, Bartlett and Cheverill be found to use the field a strong and fourthing organization. Twenty-five years Mr. Trimble had been the efficient secretary of the national grange and at its recent session in Lansing, Mich., he was present, enjoying good health, and on his return to his home in Washington he was taken ill, and his advanced years made recovery doubtful from the time. The loss of Mr. Trimble is not a loss without and doubtful. He was one of the most exemplary members and conscious workers.

How the Farmer is Benefited.

The grange is benefited by the farmer because it gives him a respect for his calling and an encouragement to make something of himself, because it helps him to his social and intellectual life, because it inspires a sentiment and encourages a spirit of fraternity which is the greatest assurance of farmers' social. It furnishes a medium through which he can do the work of a social life, others can reciprocate, it directs his efforts to greater usefulness, the grange benefits the farmer just in proportion as he strives through the grange to benefit his neighbor. Where the individual member comes to ask of the grange, "What is there in it for me?" he just asks rather, "What can I put into it?" Then and the grange will be what it was intended to be, a great and powerful factor in the world.—W. S. Giles, Secretary New York State Grange.

What James G. Blaine Said.

James G. Blaine once said, "Farmers of the republic will control its destiny against the attack of popular fury, against frenzied madness that seeks collision with established order, against the spirit of anarchy that would sweep away the landmarks and safeguards of Christian society and republican government, the farmers of the United States will stand as a shield and bulwark. Immovable, the willing subjects of law. To strengthen the bulwark is the work of the grange. If the quoted remarks are true, then the work of the grange appeals to the patriotism of all.

The Soil of the West.

The laws of growth and development require the constant stirring of the soil of the mind, and lately there is a organization capable of doing so much for the future of our state, namely, the numbers as the grange.—Maine Farmer.

In Maine the state grange pays the traveling expenses of one delegate to the state grange meeting from each subordinate or Pomona grange, the other expenses are borne by the grange sending him. Good idea.

More inquiries concerning grange organization have come in in the last month than in any three preceding years. The necessity and advantages of organization can no longer be treated.—Farm and Fireside.

National Master Jones in his annual address took a strong stand for weekly meetings of the grange on the ground that we need all the influence we can get on our side. The literary work should be strengthened.

Hon. N. J. Rochester, lecturer of the national grange, is now governor of the state of New Hampshire. May he make as good a governor as he has been lecturer.

Make your grange meetings interesting, but social and instructive and the question of attendance will take care of itself.

PATRONS OF HUSBANDRY.

The Maine State Grange Reports Eighty Thousand of the Order.

At the annual session of the Maine state grange the master reported the number of members, and that year had been the most prosperous year for the order in that state, it gave its total as 80,000. About thirty-five new granges were organized, with a total of 1,000 members, the total number of members being 81,000, about one in every hundred of the population of the state. The largest one being 507. Resolutions were adopted confirming fealty to the principles of patriotism, pledging to work for constitutional amendments of rural free delivery, providing for the next legislature and giving the right of municipal suffrage well inspiring women of the state.

Wilmot Cheverill, Grange.

The Worcester (Mass.) Telegram remarks that Wilmot Cheverill, of Concord, N. H., and elsewhere, is so he is finished on the staff of Governor S. J. MICHIGAN STATE GRANGE.

The Patrons of Husbandry Strong in the Wolverine State.

The grange in Michigan is getting to be a powerful factor for the farmers' good. At the state grange meeting last month sixty-one counties were represented by over 200 delegates. It was the largest state grange meeting ever held, and much work for the benefit of the order and the farmer generally was accomplished. George B. Horton was elected state master for his sixth con-

In his annual address, among other things, he urged attention to the need of a change in the form of the membership to the form which of the state grange, giving each member for every grange to equip and build its own hall. He also urged that all grange funds should be incorporated under the laws of the state in order to insure business efficiency. He spoke with much favor of grange fire insurance. A Candy manufacturing concern with the capital of $17,000 is seeking embiance into Petoskey. The citizens will engage it is said between 40 and 50 persons.

It is reported that Manistee will test in the courts the right of the board of Supervisors to cut down bills for services after that had been passed on and allowed by the local boards.

Saw Jordan Enterprise, Supervisor Dayton said: Levi Mest have been making a very successful canvass for a rural mail delivery route on the south side of the town. The Boyne and Eveline townships. The proposed route will be about twenty three miles long, and it will supply something near one hundred families.

The big Barker Cedar Co. plant at Harper's Siding, near Lovejoy, is now the property of The Lakewood Lumber Co., the transfer having been made Friday last. For several years the affairs of the Barker company have been in the hands of the receivers, Messr. Gillette and Mabley, of Benton Harbor, who were discharged Friday. In charge of these gentlemen the tangled affairs of the original company were pretty well straightened out.

Petoskey is having all kinds of troubles since the recent revival meetings and now the mayor is charged with neglect of official duty in prohibiting the saloons to violate the law. Mayor Hoze defends himself through the newspapers and declares that the aldermen, the marshal and the people should be interested enough to report illegal conditions with the statutes, but the newspapers claim that under oath of office the mayor is the one official responsible for the conditions.

A company has been formed in Milwaukee with a capital of $1,500,000 to build three three tugs for carrying boats to keep the draft of Mackinaw open for foriage throughout the winter, said the New York Commercial Advertiser. The boats are to be ready by the winter of 1904. Instead of being alive the usual mosts, water is a lost that slides up on the ice and crushes it down with its weight, these boats will be equipped with a rear ram twenty five feet long, which will rip the ice and throw it off on either side. They will cost $400,000 each.

Traverse City Eagle: W. L. Leitch of East Bay township said at yesterday's session of the Farmers' Institute that men from the southern part of the state might get an idea that a real good crop of potatoes could not be grown in Grand Traverse county. To counteract this idea he recounted his experience. "This year", said he, "I raised 200 bushels an acre on 40 acres another year I had the same average from 50 acres. In still another year, I had 287 bushels an acre from 15 acres. On two and one quarter acres of this land, I had 700 bushels. I may add that myself and my blind non dog did pitted that 700 bushels in one day.

Horatio B Lewis of Elk Rapids who recently resigned as general manager of the Elk Rapids Iron Co has received a very fine offer from capitalists in Cuba which he has accepted. The nature of that proposition touching the clearing of several thousand acres of mahogany and other choice woods. Mr Lewis will go to Cuba as soon as the business can be arranged but his family will not accompany him as he wishes to become familiar with the country before having them leave their home here. It is quite probable that Hobart Lewis will go to the land of sunshine about the same time his brother goes.

Bellaire, Independent: Bellaire, a thriving town in Antrim county, in northern Michigan, is quite prominent in Masonic circles for a place not yet attaining the dignity of a city. We have Bellaire lodge, F. and A. M., a very large lodge, and a rapidly growing R. A. chapter. Members of the same lodges are also making their mark in state Masonic circles. At the meeting of the Michigan Grand Lodge, F. & A. M., held at Detroit Tuesday and Wednesday of this week, Fletcher E. Tuttle of Bellaire was elected to the office of Deputy Grand Master of Michigan. Next year the Grand Lodge meeting will be held at Lansing and if Mr. Tuttle lives he will be advanced to the Grand Mastership, the highest F. & A. M. office in the state and a position of great honor.

A short time Cobbs & Mitchell of Cadillac and Boyne Falls received an order from a Washington D. C. contractor to ship a cutload of their best clear maple flooring. A special request was made for it now quickly as it was to be laid in the White House. Prompt shipment was also urged and it speaks well for the high standard of quality maintained by the firm that on the day following the receipt of the order the car of flooring was shipped from their regular stock. This transaction indicates the high grade of flooring manufactured from Boyne Valley maple and the world-wide fame it has earned. The logs from which this flooring was manufactured were cut on the line of the H. P. & N. R. R. near Boyne Falls and shipped to Cadillac, where they were transformed into the finished product in Cobbs & Mitchell's mammoth plant and from there shipped to Washington, D. C.

An epidemic among horses is causing all local owners of horseflesh considerable worry at Traverse City. The epidemic seems to be general and at looks of horses alike. Livery stables and camps are especially being crippled on account of this disease which some prominent men say is lung trouble, but those who are better posted on ailments of horseflesh pronounce it the genuine la grippe. In one lumber camp there are 17 horses and only 2 of the number are able to be worked. Some of the dray horses are also affected, and in a few cases driving horses are on the sick list. When taken they seem unable to stand up for any length of time and spend the most of the time lying down. The general opinion is that it is in the atmosphere. Some of those who were in the habit of feeding their horses in feed barns and irregular places supposed it was some contagious epidemic, but there are several cases where horses are affected that are never fed anywhere except in their own barn and manager.

Bellaire Leader of this date, raved to a somewhat angry pitch, was heard issuing from the home office: "I tell you this city of business has got to stop! Hep Christ, the week and whitehaired member from Antrim county, Tom A. Merrill before entered the gubernatorial office with the bill for which he worked so valiantly giving the Isaac Waltons at this county the right to fish in Clam lake. Under a special act the lake has been closed to the fishermen for so long that the finny inhabitants have waxed so thick and fat that the temptation is more that Antrim spirit can abide. The bill of relief for the anxious fishermen has passed both houses and been ordered to take immediate effect. It was this last provision to which the governor objected. Of course, he sympathized with the Antrim fishermen, but he has been asked of late to sign so many local bills calling for exemptions that the supply has become exhausted. "It's got to stop" declared the governor's voice again. But in spite of this Hop, Gyant a little later bore forth in triumph the fisherman's bill with the coveted signature affixed.

Petoskey Record: Few people seem to realize the fact that there is a village by the name at Horton's Bay. But there is, and a finer location for a resort cannot be found in northern Michigan. The reason it has never been converted into a resort is because the persons who own the land there have refused to improve it. But several resorters from the south have bought lots and intend building cottages next summer, and the prospects are for a large resort in a few years. Horton's Bay is located about twelve miles southwest of Petoskey on the beautiful body of water known as Pine Lake. The country is level and affords many good sites for building. There is a general store and postoffice, a blacksmith shop, school house, and two churches. A stage runs between Boyne and Charlevoix, stopping at Horton's Bay; but the day of the stage is nearly over, for a railroad is proposed and it is a sure thing. The railroad spring is located on the edge of the village, and Hortons Creek, the famous trout stream of northern Michigan, runs a few rods from the village and empties into Pine Lake. Boats run daily in the summer, stopping at Horton's Bay. In fact Horton's Bay is a typical place for a resort, and anyone wishing a pleasant location for a residence should by a lot there.

Notice to Delinquents.

This is the time of year when most country newspapers have to "round up" delinquent subscribers. The SENTINEL is no exception to that rule. We have a large amount outstanding that must be collected at once to meet obligations. Therefore we request all in arrears to call in and "dig down," or remit the amount due, and save us the trouble of doing what your grocer or clothier would do under like circumstances. These accounts must and will be collected, whether it is $1.50 or $50.00. It takes money to run a newspaper, and we must have it. Excuse our frankness, but please "Winack up."

—The big three of Tuesday and Wednesday gives us a foretaste of what Bridge street will be when rail bins next spring. The hummocks and holes, the sand piles and moral holes, are enough to drive a tax paying citizen to the asylum. It presents to the council a problem that they will be compelled to solve soon, and they may as well begin on the job. Some one advocates paving with brick, which an expert has declared will cost $17,000, but probably crushed stone will be the solution of the problem. There is no question about the quality and lasting features of a crushed stone pavement. It has been tried and proven. The village has the stone, the crusher and the road roller, and the council should at once begin operations looking toward the early completion of the work. A finished stone pavement will last for as less than half the expense of brick and can be kept in repair at much less expense than any other material. We hope the present council will begin the work by opening up operations at the quarry.

The Same Old Green Eyed Monster.

Our ancient and excellent friend Capt. Bontecou, editor of the Petoskey Record, in his last issue of his paper, tells about a recent interview with a representative of the Charlevoix Sugar Co., and makes a number of statements that we cannot permit to pass unnoticed.

Charlevoix has a beet factory, Petoskey has none. This couple of facts has, of late, been the text for some very able editorials in the Petoskey papers, on what Charlevoix enterprise has done, and what Petoskey enterprise might have done, but did not. We have read these editorials with a great deal of interest, in view of the fact that Charlevoix has for many years had mud kicked in her face from the hoofs of Petoskey pacers, and always put in a right cheerfulness spirit.

Regarding the above mentioned interview the Record says:

"When we said that if the Sugar Company desired to influence and educate the farmers on the beet raised question, we presumed that all the people in the territory would still prefer at current rates. Mr. Brooks seemed considerably surprised, and replied that he thought quite apropos that a local newspaper men to learn such an interest, for the good of North ern Michigan."

Of course, the factory being in Charlevoix, the Record could not, consistently and the enterprise, Petoskey is already the natural market for much of the northern and eastern portions of Charlevoix county, but the Record has a spasm when farmers in the southern portion of Emmet are asked to co-operate with a Charlevoix enterprise that means as much to them as it does to Charlevoix. And listen to this.

"Also when we asked him how we expected Emmet county farmers to accept the contents of the Sugar Company at face value, when the Company had gone back on their contracts with the Charlevoix county farmers last fall, compelling them to accept less than contract price for their beets, he failed to reply."

No person who is familiar with the facts, and has any desire to be fair, will make such a statement as the above. When unavoidable circumstances made it necessary to cut down on the factory last fall, the Charlevoix Sugar Company entered into an arrangement whereby the farmers should receive a fair price for their beets a price approximately equal to the average of that determined by analysis. The price paid was $5.00 per ton. As a matter of fact that price exceeded the average price paid in Michigan in 1901. The promoters of the Traverse City factory only offer $4.50 "net" (without analysis)—or, at least that was the proposition they started out with.

The editorial, from start to finish, discloses a spirit of envy that we did not think Capt. Bontecou possessed. But the factory will be in operation next fall, and it will grind on a large quantity of Emmet county beets, as Mr Brooks is making contracts in Emmet county every day.

DEATH OF E. M. CHERRIE.

Close of a Life That Once Directed a Great Charlevoix County Industry.

Robert M. Cherrie died at his home in Chicago last Friday morning.

The death of this man awakens memories of the days when the Pine Lake Iron Co. held sway on Pine Lake, and largely controlled affairs in the Pine Lake region. It was in 1881 that a syndicate composed of eastern capitalists, established the furnace at Ironton, with the auxiliary enterprises that attached thereto. On the first day of January of that year the furnace went into blast. It was built under the direction of a man named Robert Jackson, Mr. E. D. Hines, of this place, saw the contract for the construction of the buildings, which embraced the furnace and store. Mr. Jackson, two years before, been in the employ of Mr. Cherrie on bridge work in the construction of the Greyville & Mattoon R. R. in Illinois. Mr. Cherrie was at that time president of the Southern Construction Co., which was building the road.

Jackson was the first superintendent, and he was now the whistle the hour that the machinery started on that first day of 1881. Mr. Spang retired that year, and a man named Folsom succeeded him as superintendent. Within a year Mr. Folsom retired, and John and James Otis bought a $100,000 interest in the plant. Mr. James Otis assuming the superintendency. In the year 1885 superintendent Otis was killed by the furnace elevator. During the prosperous years of the plant the monthly pay roll reached from $8,000 to $9,000. During the operations of the company here R. M. Cherrie was its president, and his nephew, H. C. Dolph, of Chicago, secretary.

In 1892 the company built the furnace at Mancelona, and for three years that plant was a part of the Pine Lake Iron Co's industry, and under Mr. Cherrie's management. In 1895 it was sold. In 1899, financial reverses in the interests of the eastern capitalists caused the former at Ironton, with the auxiliary enterprises that attached thereto. On the first day of January of that year the furnace went into blast. It was built under the direction of a man named Robert Jackson, Mr. E. D. Hines, of this place, saw the contract for the construction of the buildings, which embraced the furnace and store. In 1899, financial reverses in the interests of the eastern capitalists caused the former at Ironton, with the auxiliary interests to a close, the former going out of blast, and gradually going to ruin, the two furnaces of Mr. Cherrie, Miss E. Cherrie and Mrs. S. C. Adams, retaining the store and private residence. They reside at Ironton yet.

It was during Mr. Cherrie's Industrial sway here that the Detroit, Charlevoix & Geneseth R. R. project was conceived. Mr. Cherrie being the president and guiding genius of that unfortunate undertaking. The brief history of that project is still fresh in the memory of the older inhabitants of Charlevoix.

Mr. Cherrie, during the years of his operations here, was a bachelor. After the collapse of the Pine Lake Iron Co. he was married to Chicago. Previous to his Charlevoix venture he had been western manager of the Lehigh Valley Coal Co. and to the sale of coal and iron he has since devoted his time, and, we are informed, has been quite successful.

He has frequently visited Charlevoix and Ironton, and was here the past summer, but was in poor health at that time. He was a type of the shrewd, able Chicago business man, but was a companionable and agreeable gentleman at all times.

NORWOOD NEWS.

There will be a masquerade ball at the Town Hall Friday evening of this week.

Mrs Daniel Stafford has gone to Ironton to visit her daughter Mrs. Annie Carel.

Frank Valentine was kicked by a colt on Tuesday last and two of his ribs were broken.

Her. Aylesworth, of this place has been at Elk Rapids most of the time for the last two weeks helping as revival service being held there.

Moses Hoadley has been awarded the contract for carrying the mail from Norwood to Charlevoix for the 4 years commencing July 1st, 1903, at 464 dollars per annum.

The C. A. S. will give a social at the hall Saturday evening February 21st, and will also have a literary. Entertainment at the same time, with stations appropriate, to Washington and Lincoln's birthdays.

FINDS DEATH IN MIRE

ILLINOIS FARMER PERISHES IN A WHEATFIELD.

Unprecedented Condition of Soil in Cause—Other Accidents and Personal Mishaps Which Have Happened Dead Through a Dam.

William Rosser, a farmer aged 55, was found in a wheatfield near Mattoon to be dead as a result of the direct injury to his person. Rosser left his homesteaded Wednesday, and his footprints in the soft mire of the wheat field were soon found. Sunday, when he did not return to his home, his wife sent to the place. His struggles were evidently of the most desperate character, for he sank in the mire and soft alluvial deposit, and his clothes were torn to shreds. The place is a marshy one, and the soil is of the most alluvial character. Rosser is supposed to have fallen into the mire while attempting to cross the field, and the soil was so soft that he was unable to extricate himself. The place is so soft that it will not bear the weight of a man. The man was found in a stooping position, and the mud was so thick that it was impossible to see his face. The man was a prominent farmer, and was well known in Mattoon. He was about 55 years of age. He was married and has a family.

MUTINY LEADS TO MURDER.

Sailors Against the Orders of Having Black Officers and Forced Skin.

The British steamer Bonmahon, Capt. Ogilvie, from Montevideo, Brazil, via Pimobel, Island of Madeira, arrived at Queenstown and landed five survivors of the British bark Vanessa, Captain Shaw, from Sligo, Ireland, Mon. Oct. 6, for Montevideo, who were picked up at sea in the Bonmahon's lifeboat on Oct. 24. The men reported that the Vanessa was burned on Sep. 29. The police have detained four of them on suspicion of having murdered and mutilated Captain Shaw and seven of the crew of the Vanessa, after a mutiny they allegedly have set fire to the ship. The men were all black except Shaw, who was among those who were missed by the Bonmahon's lifeboat. Captain Ogilvie, the Bonmahon's master, reported that Captain Shaw, a Scotchman, commanded a crew of 15 men, mostly Portuguese, and he had sailed in his bark if he bringing Brazil. Afterwards, some of the men began to mutiny against the orders of Shaw, who was a strict disciplinarian. Shaw had ordered the black officers to do their share of work on the vessel, and the men had refused to do so. Shaw had ordered the men to do the work, and they had refused. Shaw had then ordered the men to do the work, and they had refused. Shaw had then ordered the men to do the work, and they had refused. Shaw had then

BY THE AUTHOR OF "JANE JUDGE, SPINSTER," "LITTLE KATE KIRBY," ETC., ETC.

CHAPTER XX.—(Continued.)

What did it all mean? If Mort Holland were not to be trusted, if this strange girl had the freedom of his, if his mother's warning were after all correct, what was he to do? Was the situation here, since he was in great trouble? The door opened, and Mrs. Holland came into the room.

"You are for pay," she said.

"Yes," he said, his misery and fear for one, his desire for the other, in his face. "I am anxious to ask you many questions."

The old parlor which Sarah Rastell had petitioned some days before for Hamlin spoke, but she took the chair where he said authorized, and which was at a little distance from the couch, and sat down facing him.

"Though we do not seem a great deal of each other, I am your cousin, Mort," he began, quietly and earnestly—"and it is through you that good changes have occurred—that I have—for my father's sake and honor, and humanity—"

"Yes," said Mrs. Holland, "that is true."

"I feel the debt owing to you cannot decline. It was your intention to do for you, so I began to think, in the security of many past months, on my side and my mother's, on mine alone, if I recollect, you are a cousin of all in the house."

"I have done my best to be the friend," she answered.

"Last night, and for the first time in my life, a suspicion settled on me that I have what it is not, also that I have been so far, but that it cannot again happen, struggling to be what I am, and what I am this hence? Are you aware of the position?"

"No, sir; that is was written to me present by Miss Hollister, who—does he refer to me in that?" she cried, with the rose coming into her face for a moment, and then dying away into the old pallor.

"Not by word. He is an elder relative big the place, and I thought now of people who're so nearly related to you, nothing to mention—I mean, if you are aware of the position."

"Do you mean, sir?"

"Mean, sir, that the young man pointed out to me as Thomas Rastell, the young master, or you don't go north, I, I, am nothing to do with the place, and I have wished from—which I shall have, wished from the moment I first saw you know of him, and when you claim him free."

"I cannot," she said in a low voice.

"He is, sir, I know, a very wrong, or, very, he has brought grief to me, he is linked with Thomas Rastell, and the peace of this house, and you will not give up your claim to him?"

"I know his little of him, Hastings," she answered, and then I control dragged now. It is more than my life's worth to attempt it. I have not seen Sarah's brother. I cannot explain to you at this time, but I can say that I am a woman the most misunderstood—"

"Mrs. Holland," said Hastings, "I am sorry, very sorry, to treat you any more in this house.

She did not speak again. She leaned at him steadily for a few moments, and then stood gravely, and in the silence of your room, at the end of the corridor, and it was some time before I ventured again to that house. It was nearly midday when, dressed in my best clothes, I reappeared in the corridor and found Hartley, grim and gloomy, and a sweet flower on guard.

"Are you a cousin, servant, Hartley?" she said, as she advanced, "for you could be extra attentive, extremely polite, and cunning, while I am away."

"Are you a cousin, Miss Mary Holland?" exclaimed Hartley, in surprise.

"Yes—for a little while. I will write to you shortly by the post."

"To Miss Rastell?" exclaimed Hartley.

"Magnanim letter at this house, and I am a cousin, I tell you, Hartley. I am a cousin!—will make you set up that!"

"All is mission in this house, and I am you are a cousin, I tell you, and have secured part of the shadow, that I have, and I am a cousin, and I am a cousin to rightful master here. But leave me, Hartley.

"I do see understand, madam."

"Oh, the letter! I forgot that altogether about it. Is there anything in the letter? Is there anything in the truth from killing the, and honest, and the, and the, and the, and honest, and the, and the, and the

FRAUD IN INSURANCE

WIDESPREAD SWINDLE DISCOVERED IN NEW YORK.

District Attorney's Office Believe at Least One Hundred Dollar Have Been Used as Substitutes—Did Man Cut Off Six Inches of His Leg.

The crimes committed in office in New York, the wonder is, are so numerous that it would be hard to select any one of them as the most remarkable. Perhaps taking official crimes of recent date from the district attorney's office, and considering the importance of the transgressions, it is said that the most note worthy of the crimes committed in that office is the fraud in insurance, which is said to have been practiced by the hundreds in the last three years. The Department of Insurance, Department of Public Works, and the Department of Water are also a large number of minor crimes committed in the name of the law. The crimes in the district attorney's office are of a character which will not be made public for some time to come. It is said that the most note worthy of the crimes committed in the district attorney's office in the last three years are the fraud in insurance, which is said to have been committed to the extent of $1,000,000 in premiums, the Department of Public Works, the Department of Water, and the Department of Insurance, which is

FRIENDS TELL OF NOBLE TRAITS OF THE ex-SPEAKER.

Ex-Justice Cohen of New York Had Long Interview with the Maine Statesman Which He Recalls with Fervor—His Gladness Incomparable.

Owing to the necessity of trying an important case, ex-Justice William D. Cohen of Brooklyn did not arrive in Portland with the other members of the bar of New York, who came to go to Portland to attend the funeral of the late Speaker Reed, however, they had a conference with Mr. Reed and not a few of his matters, though he had only been home a few years, or since Mr. Reed had come to New York to practice law. Ex-Justice Cohen, as counsel for the law firm in which Mr. Reed formerly was a partner, was brought much more much into contact with the ex-Speaker. One of the first cases in which Cohen were personally interested was that of Lucas against the Brooklyn Elevated Railroad. Mr. Cohen went up to Portland and asked him to take the case in this case. Mr. Reed was delighted but refused to do so on the ground that it would not be in the interests of the profession, Mr. Cohen thought, for Mr. Reed to take the case before the court of appeals. Mr. Cohen said he felt that Mr. Reed had given the case his opinion, and he was glad that he had. He felt part in the trial, however.

"That," said Mr. Cohen, "was characteristic of his disinterested behavior. He was the most disinterested man I ever knew in a man, his manhood and honor outweighed and generous pride and work.

During the summer of 1891, when Mr. Reed, with Mark Twain and other friends, was on the steam yacht Priscilla in South Bay, Mr. Reed, Mr. Cohen said, was seized with a violent attack of cholera morbus. The ship was anchored in the vicinity of Newport, Rhode Island, and a doctor was called in from the shore. The ship was anchored in the vicinity of the

BY THE AUTHOR OF "ANNE JUDGE, SPINSTER," "LITTLE RAYE BIRDS," ETC., ETC.

CHAPTER XXII.

It is time that we follow the footsteps of Second-cousin Sarah, when we left with her shabby suitcase in the grounds of Sedge Hill. Taken off her guard by Mrs. Thomas Eastlick's sudden appearance, disturbed by the events of the night, and over conscious of the dirge which the presence of the two intruders in her sister's home inspired, she followed the women in good faith, some distance along the garden paths and in the direction of the high road.

"We will go no further, she said, but you will, I have to bear your long-hated and Christian name, and I will forward you handsomely."

"Listen then as well as you can. I ain't going to speak loud for anybody."

"I am listening."

Sarah Hazelhurst inclined her head meekly to the woman, who began forthwith about her husband to a rambling Ethelbin that was drawn on fellows, as till she were sudden's back three steps, to Sarah's "surprise and alarm" at her boy, or at something near her.

"What is it?" she said, almost "mute."

"There was no necessity to act mute or scared, or to struggle. Two strong arms closed round her, and a hand and clothy arm drawn was pressed to her mouth, and she was borne, or nothing loath, that seemed to snatch her at once from active life to oblivion.

When she came back to consciousness it was to a life apart from Sedge Hill and those who lived there. She was flying on a lank bay horse, with a man behind her, the same man who had stood in the side of the room, with some hands and a mouth of scowl, and who had given her a very candle from burning itself to the wight.

Suddenly Sidney woke up, and gave a nervous jump from the bed, with a scare-cry that touched upon the bed, with her dress dark and rumpled.

"Where have you brought me? Why, we are in a strange place! Where are I to be an easier value?

"Yonder some would have ting" and Sophy. Well, I am glad of that. How if I didn't think then I should be with their kiss what's-a-name, and see you, Sarah of other then, Sarah?"

Sarah Hazelhurst was sitting a little apart of the bed from regarding her child with quiet admiration. She was scarcely back from dressing herself.

"Why have I been brought here?" asked Sidney, pettishly.

"You'll know in good time, my Sidney," the "cousin" for a form, or if you it could. You're safe enough."

Sarah Hazelhurst was standing at the door of the room where she had recovered herself to be brought, on the day and she parted.

"It's no use your thinking of getting out, Sally," said Tom's wife, "don't bind on that, or harm will come to you. That's certain.

"Do you think I am the weak girl whom you remember last?" cried Sarah, sudden and flashing her calmly. "Do you think I am the girl who could be frightened by this? Do you think, if I had not a purpose in my life, I would be here? Do you know what evil you have put yourselves to?

"Oh, yes, we all know. It's all been through—the Sidney Hazelhurst. Sidney of the Dell, care and, and have plowed it, and it's all through her. It's done. Sally."

"Use not the fire of the door, or the will find me the stronger woman of the two," said Sarah.

"Don't speak hold on my wrist like that," cried Sidney, in a fright. "I'll be sorry if I go away, or if any one downstairs comes to see me before I go. I know you are too wilderd for my poor sake. I'm sorry, too, for you, and all your fine flash silk. I have only to shake out and tell them what I know, and how who don't stand someone ash as my Sarah.

Sarah Hazelhurst released her hold. Yes, she was in a position to shake out all these. They who brought her to the den had taught her a great deal of power her, and would risk more rather than lose her to such a. "Sidney, be not dull and on her guard, and defiant and aggressive."

"I ain't get no key, if you must know," said Sally, with a sullen scowl and pout, and set down while in an oven, and were back in half an hour. I'll take charge of you, that's all, my girl, and thing comes of it, I'll be sorry."

"What place is it?" Sarah asked again.

"A place of no business to you, I'll be sure, sudden's back three days, to Sarah's "surprise and alarm" at her boy, or at something near her.

"What is it?" she said, almost "mute."

"There was no necessity to act mute or scared, or to struggle. Two strong arms closed round her, and a hand and clothy arm drawn was pressed to her mouth, and she was borne, or nothing loath, that seemed to snatch her at once from active life to oblivion.

Notes by the Way.

To the Editor:

For the first time in the history of the world a ship crossed the Atlantic which was in constant communication with the world during the entire voyage. This was the Finnish steamship Umbria which sailed from New York for Liverpool Dec. 13th, 1902, and which, like all the Cunard steamers, is fitted with Marconi's wireless telegraph system. This is another distinction for the famous line which proudly claims that since its establishment, sixty years ago, it has never lost a passenger. It was a novel experience to watch Marconi's operator and to observe the unique method of flashing messages from mid Atlantic to Europe or America, and to listen to the chats that pass in the night hundreds of miles away. Some of the passengers who were willing to pay the high rates demanded, were in almost constant communication with their families and their business interests in America.

It is announced that during the summer season a small newspaper will be put on board the ship every day filled with the latest telegraphic intelligence from Europe and America. When all the ships are supplied with Marconi's system, it is thought that the risk of collision will be greatly entirely eliminated.

I noticed on the Narania which I said to be the largest ship that ever entered Boston. It is 700 feet long, 75 wide and 70 in depth. It is a twin screw steamer and is equipped with the latest improvements. Its capacity is 1,500 passengers and 2,000 tons of cargo. It was launched a year ago and is now plying between Boston and Liverpool. Some of England's commercial troubles are due to her shortsightedness in adopting obsolete methods. In London I saw great processions of the unemployed, and like their papers contain many editorial appeals in behalf of the poor. In the streets with our food and fuel are a number of fat there continually. In England a standing army of million paupers entirely supported by the state.

The only time one has made use of my journal is when it leaves serious misgivings and regretting.

The house of Longwood lies in its complete Americanization. Already a million cities are beginning to adopt American street cars, and a thousand American inventions. A Chicago millionaire is with hoping that it may be able to give old London a new lease of life. Yesterday I lady Churchill, the Duchess of Marlborough and a score of others almost equally prominent are the delighted guests of a girl author. American beauty are very popular, and nearly all the leaves between English papers are imported from Chicago.

For School Commissioner.

The republican county Convention made no mistake in re-nominating Fred W. Chew for school commissioner, and their action was an emphatic compliment to Mr. Chew, considering the fact that he had made no effort to secure a re-nomination, but for the past month been confined to his home by chronic rheumatism, a malady from which he is now free. The fact is, he has been successful, and it is due to his carefulness, his eminent qualification, and his industrious application to the work.

While Mr. Chew is amply equipped for general supervision of school work, he is especially useful in the work of rural school development. He is a farmer, and knows what country school district officers and teachers should learn and what they should be taught.

Mr. Chew has become a part of our country school work, he has a right to and its stationing, he is thoroughly familiar with school laws, and keeps abreast of the issues in all that tends to better methods of instruction and government.

The convention made no mistake.

—A delegation of Charlevoix Eastern Star ladies went to Bellaire last night to a northern Michigan gathering of the order.

—Mrs. Porter, patriotic instructor, entertained the W. R. C. ladies at her home Feb. 22d. A very pleasant afternoon was spent by all present.

—Capt. Chas. Keller who has had charge of the government harbor work in this district for some years is to be transferred to a post in the Philippines.

—Dr. Thielen says that school commissioner Chew is rapidly improving in health, and will be out with the robbins. Mr. Chew sends word that he will "make the rounds," the same as ever.

—There is considerable blood or the moon this morning, politically, as a result of last night's caucus, and a probability of a contest between the republicans and the independent element.

—Memorial services by the bar of the Grand Traverse Region will be held in the court house in Traverse City March 17th. Hon. E. H. Green, of this place, is a member of the committee on resolutions.

—There is one significant fact concerning the candidacy of E. W. Coulter for President. He made no personal canvas for the nomination. He would not ask a man to vote for him if he knew that one vote would give him the office.

—A bill has been introduced in the Wisconsin legislature providing a punishment of from one to ten years in prison for any person causing death by a bullet being by shooting while hunting deer. Also a fine of from $1,000 to $10,000 for the offense.

—The latest Dere Marquette rumor is that they will make what is now their main line from Traverse City to Ludington via Grand Rapids a side line and construct a line up the shore of Lake Michigan for their trunk line north with a direct connection of their own to Chicago.

—W. W. Tracy, superintendent of the D. M. Ferry Co. growing department, having resigned, L. D. Coulter, well known here, has been promoted to the vacancy. The superintendent of this department has supervision over all crop matters, and his field is from the Atlantic to the Pacific.

—St. Ven Pattison, of Boyne City, remis is a Los Angeles paper, which tells of the lasting record of the Boyne City gentleman, set in the land of flowers. A recent day out, Mr. and Mrs. Von Pattten and a few friends, resulted in a catch of ten silvers, weighing 297 pounds, and a five foot shark.

—W. W. Thayer, foreman of the Detroit hatchery, is here to set up and put in operation the new hatchery here. The jobs said a fair sample of performances are here, but Mr. Thayer is delayed in his work by the non-arrival of the pumps and tanks. He expects, however to have the plant ready for trout eggs from Northville within a week.

—The Washington dispatches announce that the president has promoted Col. S. M. Mansfield to be brigadier general and retired him. This, again, revives old memories. Thirty-two years ago Major Mansfield was engineer in charge of harbor work in this district, and it was he who made the first survey of Charlevoix harbor—or, rather, the second survey, for the first was against us, the city, on account of its influence in Congress. It was also under Major Mansfield's supervision that the first appropriation was worked out here.

—Harry Nicholls went to Chicago on a business trip today.

—James McGeagh is home from Georgia. He will return south in two weeks.

—The mail came over from St. James on the ice last Friday for the first time this winter.

—A citizens village caucus is called for Friday evening of this week, and a socialist caucus for the same evening.

—Mrs. Wm. Burns has returned to her home in Marion from Grand Rapids, and is very much improved in health.

—The regular term of circuit court for Charlevoix county begins next Monday, March 2d, with but one criminal case on the calendar. Several civil cases, however, are noticed for trial.

—Mrs. Timmer's and Miss Mc. William's Sunday school classes, of the Congregational church, will give a Doll Show in the Martin building Saturday afternoon and evening. Admission 5 cents.

—Has the thought occurred to you that most of this talk about expensive pavement on bridge street comes from those who will not have to help pay for it. It is very easy to build pavements when the other fellow pays for it.

—Deputy U. S. Marshall O'Donnell, of Grand Rapids, was here Friday and served notice of suit on supervisor John Ward, in the case of the schoolcraft Hackley against Charlevoix township. Owners of vessel claim $250 damages.

—Nothing can be said against E. W. Coulter, the republican candidate for president. He is an honest man, a man of good judgment, a clean man, a gentleman, and a man that cannot be led or influenced for wrong by any man or set of men.

—Considerable friction has existed on Clinton street over the recent sewer order of the council—a protest of some strength having gone to the council. It was settled Friday evening in favor of the sewer by the school board voting to sign the petition.

—The Grand Traverse Herald's last record shows that there was no law in the bay in the years 1851, 1861, 1875, 1880, and 1882. In a period of 40 years the bay has frozen fifteen times in January, twenty times in February, five times in March, once time not given, four times not at all. During the same period it has left the bay nine times in March, twenty-seven times in April, and four times in May.

—Of course there are always people who would "do things differently," and there are those who criticize the council in its work of public improvement. It is easy to find fault, but when the work of the council the past year is carefully reviewed, we doubt if criticism can be made to stick in the minds of the people. And we are confident that the future will justify the councils work.

—The Charlevoix band will give a concert Wednesday evening, March 11th, at Lewis opera house, assisted by other local instrumental and vocal talent. The band is making fine progress, and is entitled to encouragement. Therefore, buy a ticket. The entertainment will be well worth attending, aside from the sentiment attached to it, in the way of local interest. Don't fail to go.

—E. W. Coulter represents about as much assessed valuation in the village of Charlevoix as any of his critics, at least. He is interested in keeping down taxes, not only for himself, but for the large interests he represents. And he has no apologies to make for any vote he cast on the council the past year for public improvements. He believes in "doing things," and doing them right, and believes that such a policy is economy in the long run.

—Under the impulse of pre-elective interest, much is being said concerning the present village council that is unfair and, in fact, untrue. We believe that the council has done well by the village interest. It has had to face some quite serious problems during the past year, and it has done what every member has thought was for the best. It may have made some mistakes, but it cannot be said that dishonest or corrupt action has been taken in any case. We must remember that the members of the council are also tax-payers, and have personal interest in economical expenditures. The council has done much hard work, has done it without reward, and in the main has done it well. This talk about "breaking up the ring," can make an intelligent or fair minded citizen sick. It only finds lodgment in the minds of the thoughtless or prejudiced.

—Of course the usual things are said about the republican caucus by those who did not control it. There was never held in Charlevoix a fairer caucus in all respects. Every precaution was taken against anything unfair or unlawful. It was a representative caucus in every regard.

—Service will be held in the Epis copal church on Tuesday evening March 3d by Rev. C. T. Stout. The subject of the sermon will be be "What think Ye of Christ?" A cordial invitation is extended to all. Men are especially invited to consider with the speaker this most momentous question. For on the answer given by each person depends his last welfare here and hereafter.

Death of Henry N. Barth.

Henry N. Barth, of this place, died in Chicago last Thursday evening, after a lingering and painful illness, of rectal cancer. Mr. Barth, at the time of his death, was at the home of his mother, and was accompanied there by his wife.

Deceased had been a resident of Charlevoix about fifteen years. He was the proprietor of the Charlevoix roller mills, the largest establishment of its kind in the Pere Lake region, and one of the best in Northern Michigan. Mr. Barth started here with only his hands. From very small beginning he developed an enterprise that was a great benefit to Charlevoix.

Mr. Barth was a good citizen. He was a hard worker, and his word was always considered good. His integrity was never questioned and his character was above reproach. Charlevoix will miss Henry Barth.

He was a devout member of the Catholic church, and an officer in the C. M. B. A., in which he had $1000 life insurance. He was also insured for $2,000 in the Modern Woodmen.

The funeral and interment occurred in Chicago Monday.

Socialist Party Organized.

The socialist of Charlevoix met at Clark's hall, Tuesday night and effected an organization. It was decided to nominate a full village ticket.

Ira C. Mosher was chairman of the meeting, and Prof. J. M. Tice, secretary.

This is a free country, and every citizen has a right to vote any ticket he likes, without let or hindrance; but it strikes the ordinary observer as strange that Ira M. Mosher should ally himself with the socialists so soon after he was an aggressive candidate for a county office on the republican ticket.

After all, it is not so strange.

SCHOOL NOTES.

Spillman Hige is a delightful entertainer. His voice, even in speaking, is music to the ear of the listener; so sweet, clear and distinct is enunciation it and when applied to the elegant phrasing and poetical imagery of his lecture it is a pleasure in the extreme. A few rem of humor runs through his lecture, and the illustrative sketch of Irish land lords is merriment and applause.—Cannonsburg Pa. Daily News.

The Senior boys challenged the boys of the other three grades to a field meet. The challenge has been accepted and meet will take place as soon as the weather permits.

The Seniors were entertained by Misses Berr and Sanborn on Saturday evening. It was a "Colonial Party" and a very pleasant evening was reported by all.

Mr. Tice has forbidden any dogs coming to school. There was one who was a frequent visitor to the High School but lately he has been entertained a nuisance therefore—"Bring no dogs to school. If anyone is found bringing a dog to school, he shall be compelled to take the dog home."

Mr. P. H. Ries offered a twenty four dollar cyclopedia if one half the eighth grade would pass an examination on sixth and seventh grade arithmetic. The eighth grades did not pass the examination so did not win the prize.

Tuesday Evening Mr. Leonard Warner lectured to the High School. His lecture was very entertaining and instructive.

THE TICKET.

The Republican Village Caucus Passes Good Men for Office.

The Republican village caucus last night was one of the largest political gatherings in the history of Charlevoix and it did its work well.

Lisle Shanahan presided, and F. G. Hines was elected secretary.

The contest for president was between E. W. Coulter and Dr. LeFevre. Mr. Coulter was nominated on the first ballot. W. H. McCartney was re-nominated for clerk by a good majority over L. E. Benton. The contest for Treasurer was between F. E. Wood and A. L. Fitch, Mr. Wood winning out. For trustees, Ralph Washburn, B. W. Miller and O. E. Wilber were selected, the naming of S. E. Wilber being a renomination. J. L. Price was nominated for assessor.

The ticket commends itself to the people. It is in every way a good one. Mr. Coulter has served on the council, and has made an enviable record as a public servant. No citizen ever served the public more faithful, or with greater ability. Mr. McCartney is always there, as we frequently hear said, in reference to the clerk's office. He has given his entire time to his public duties, and the council endorsed him heartily. Mr. Wood is too well known to require any comment here. "Frank" was not a candidate until yesterday morning, and the kindly wish which the people selected him was a decided compliment.

Jay Price, for assessor, is all right. It is the general opinion that Mr. Price has been a model treasurer in all respects, and this nomination, which by common consent is understood to go with supervisor, is practically a promotion. Jay deserves it.

For trustees we have excellent men. Capt. Wilbur, has served for two years on the council, and no man ever performed a duty better. B. W. Miller is a pioneer and a leading business man. His ability and public spirit are too well known to require words of commendation here. R. W. Washburn, H. L. McMillan and A. H. Hoffate, were named as strong men, and strong men they are.

The ticket is all right from top to bottom, and will be elected.

Representative Paddock hands us a copy of House Bill No. 2, which was introduced in the house, and is now in the senate with the probability of prompt passage there. The bill is to amend the present law relative to the preservation of the public health. It provides that:

"Any person coming from outside the county or residing in any township, village or city, who shall be infected or shall lately before have been infected with a dangerous contagious disease, the board of health of the township where such person may be shall make effectual provisions in the manner in which they shall judge best for the safety of the inhabitants, and they may remove such sick or infected person to a place of safety, and care and provide for under this section, and shall render such statement to the board of supervisors of the county by the same with the county clerk; and the said board of supervisors shall at such as may be proposed to audit the said bill, and if found that the expenses were incurred, the services actually and necessarily performed, and the expenses and charges are reasonable, and they are severally just and chargeable against the county, the said board of supervisors must allow the same and provide for their immediate payment by the said county; and the said board of supervisors, in ascertaining, in issue claims to honor money, have the faith and credit of the county to pay all such necessary bills and expenses, and to provide the same in the next appropriation of money to be raised by taxation in said county."

The bill as originally submitted provided for auditing of accounts "if found that the expenses were incurred, etc." and "provided performed." Dr. Paddock is responsible for striking the word "necessarily" before the word "performed" and inserting a very important and material change.

SHIPS ARE DELAYED.

PENALTIES FIXED IN CONTRACTS ARE NOT ENFORCED.

Some War Vessels Ordered in 1898 Are Not Half Completed. Congressional Investigation Is Probable. Pendered Glass Found in Dead Man's Stomach.

Twenty-six United States men-of-war were ordered under contract to be built during the month of June, 1898, on the principle of the Cramp contract. Not a single one of these vessels has been completed and delivered to the navy department, and the Cramps are now in default for the most part of the time specified in their contract. Congressmen are now in search of a reason why the Cramps should be allowed to thus violate their contracts with impunity, and there is a good deal of talk about the matter. The Cramps are not the only people who are in default. Nearly all the contracts for the construction of the new navy have been let to people who are now in default, and the question is being asked why the department does not enforce the penalties for delay which are inserted in every contract

HIGH POKER STAKES

SMALL GAME WHERE JOHN W. GATES SAT IN.

Great Plunger Called Bluff of Eastern Man and Raked in a Small Fortune —Very Heavy Betting Done on Poor Cards.

It was anyone outside last night, and a crowd had gathered in the room of the Colonial hotel. The conversation had drifted to poker, and expert talk was being told. Finally the talk led to the question of betting and high stakes.

"Speaking of limits and high stakes," said a man from New York, as he lighted a cigar and leaned back in his chair, "reminds me of the man who tried to bluff John W. Gates on a pair of aces—and didn't. He was one of your Cleveland men, too. There were some high stakes in that game, I assure you. Why, I would not work a day longer if I had the roll that changed hands at that one setting."

The man blew a ring of smoke into the air. "It was one of those little social gatherings at a New York hotel," he went on, after a moment's pause. "As I remember it, there was a Chicago man, one from Cleveland, a prominent citizen from Youngstown, a stranger and John W. Gates, sitting in the game. It wasn't any penny ante experience. White chips were selling at $1.000 apiece. Maybe John W. Gates didn't enjoy it, but the ante was high enough to make the rest of the people take considerable interest in the game.

"The play went on for some time without anything sensational about it except the amount of money changed. There was another Cleveland man watching the game, apparently interested as could be plainly seen, you so understand he was going to execute his coup he did later on.

"The deal had just been passed, and the players had taken a glance at their hands, when a dull boy came in and said some one wanted the Cleveland man at the long distance 'phone. He turned his hand face down on the table and said to his Cleveland friend, whom he evidently knew:

"'Here, Jim, play this out for me.'

"The Cleveland man took up the hand, held my two cards. Guess did the same. After the draw the man next the dealer bet two white chips, of $1,000. The next man called him with two. The Cleveland man was next, and the company took a long breath as he slowly shoved in eight white chips, making $14,000 on his cards aside from the ante. The rest of the players all gazed out in a hurry—all except John W.

"The man next forward seemed loath to see what he would do. For a moment he studied his hand silently, then cast a sharp glance at the man from Cleveland. The face of the latter never changed a muscle. He might have been the Sphinx so far as any manifestation of interest in the game was concerned. He seemed the least excited of any one given the small fortune on the table—unless it was Gates himself.

"It didn't take Gates half so long to make up his mind as it has taken me to tell this.

"'Call you,' he said shortly, as he added eight whites to the stack. The Cleveland man showed his hand. He had a pair of aces. John W. then laid down his cards and the players saw three jacks."

The narrator arose and knocked the ashes from his cigar. "Seems to be smoking pretty hard minutes," he said as he turned to the indian for his cue.

"That's the biggest stake I have heard of being played for late years, and it's gospel truth. One of the Cleveland men told me the yarn himself—and he was that tired to beat John W., however."—Cleveland Plain Dealer.

SO NEAR AND YET SO FAR.

Lapse of Memory Causes Embarrassment to Toastmaster.

It was recently in a well-known club room and one of those rare occasions of conviviality in which the best of good fellowship prevailed. The party numbered a block of prominent locals, and some much learned facts in state local. A good spirit prevailed, because some but the bear of spirits had been flowing, and the force manifested itself in a brilliancy of speech that bubbled from every one present to such an extent that an impromptu toastmaster was chosen to keep it in curb by having each speak in turn.

So up rose Mr. Toastmaster, and, rapping his spoon upon the board, let it rest upon the man the fountain of whose eloquence was first to be let loose.

"Gentlemen," said the toastmaster, "we honor the occasion I will introduce the editor—an first M'Cappuse.

"Gentlemen, I take pleasure in introducing to you one whose name is a household word in Dublin—(cheers and enthusiasm).

"Gentlemen, it affords me great pleasure to introduce a man whose name stands for civic pride and all that is high in this community—(cheers and enthusiasm).

"Gentlemen, the man I am about to call upon first is known to me for the past twenty years, and to some of you perhaps longer. I will not tell how long, lest he be found out. You all know him famous. You all know to whom I refer. The man whose name reaches to all our hearts long passed. I refer to the third gentleman to my right," and as the toastmaster set down, amid an uproar he sent to his neighbor, "I'll be hanged but his name wouldn't come."—Dublin Evening Tiles.

LOCATION OF HADES

DRUMMER CONFIDENT THAT HE KNOWS THE SPOT.

From His Experiences He Avers That It is in Canada, on the Line of the Intercontinental Railroad—Why He Thinks So.

The turning of a mail car on the New York Central one afternoon recalled a man who had of it of the burning of a sleeping car, and that set up to another entry rendition of the sensational incident. It will be remembered that the car of a snowfall late in the run, for St. John, N. B., he said. There was only one sleeping car on the train. The route was the old international railroad, which I believe, was built primarily for military purposes, but the time I speak of the narrow lad had been nationally improved.

I turned into the land early in the night to keep from freezing. Everything I heard said that the train creeping along as if the engineer had lost his way.

About 2 o'clock in the morning the porter hammered on the door of my stateroom and gave me the information that the car was on fire and we would have to turn out. None of the passengers seemed alarmed or pressed to assist. We got up together.

"As soon as we got our traps together we joined the throng in the passageway. Our sleeper, the train was composed of two cars and one car empty, watched the porter third sleeper, was burning with excited interest from the frame and close up from behind and.

"There was no season of hesitation. We knew the car must be evacuated at the time of which I speak, except by a good deal. All but one who the porter and the passengers hustled and shouted and drove the laggards out of the sleeper. Then we ran back trying to look through a frosted pane.

"The engineer came on either to pacify us or to get rid of us, and we saw from him that we had been down for about 10 minutes in the morning, four hours late. The sleep was cut the front had given up in and gone to sea.

"We joined him on and he gave us what he had discovered. It was frozen, everything was frozen, the ice outside, and the British Sunday laws were in force and there we could get nothing to warm us up. The sleeper who fan the engine, I was sold he had to have what he could get—powder water.

"We reached the long siding three miles ahead of us. We planned to run up to give us water, but the wreck crew in it was doubtful if we could do it. We finally sold on a place just outside of town where one of the countrymen ventured to violate the law.

"I hired a sleigh and drove about five miles, according to the directions, but I don't think he had any more conception of distance than he had of the cause of Mike. When I got to the sleigh on the outskirts of the town I found a crowd of people. The proprietor informed that every drop of liquor in his place was frozen solid.

"In a fit of disappointment I cried out.

"'This is hell!'

"The old proprietor replied: 'Young man, you are right. I'm all of cold, air, has as numerous spots all my religious belief about hell and I did not succeed in doing. From my youth up I have been taught to believe in a hot hell, but you are right, sir. This is a place where they freeze the life out.'

"I was in no mood to appreciate his wit.

"'Hell!' said I, 'is Canada, on the intercontinental railroad, sir! In St. John.'

"He looked at me as kindly as he was capable of looking and replied:

"'We differ again critically, but we are agreed on the main issue. hell wherever the whisky freezes.'

"Like the little outlaw girl of Wordsworth, he would have his way, and I left him so."

BEAVER ISLAND NEWS.

Fishing through the ice is the popular pastime around the harbor now.

More business on Beaver Island this winter than for many years previous.

Dominick G. Gallagher who has charge of the "Hand" light this winter was in town over last Sunday.

The Bonaparte Sisters have changed their residence from the Harbor to the new Sister's home near the church.

Preparations are rapidly being made to harvest the ice crop. Mike McCann is getting a foundation laid to move his red ice house from where it now stands to a more convenient location over the water near the dock.

The Island has not been burdened with snow so far this year, scarcely enough to the woods to haul timber on, and as for the north end of the island we have yet to get enough snow to have a good sleigh ride all around the harbor. Since the harbor froze over when any one wanted good sleighing they have had to take the ice for it.

Logging operations are being carried on in the woods near the "Head" this winter by several parties who are running camps. Formerly a good number of men employed being the Morrow Bros. of Central Lake, Malloy Bros. of the Island, Gill & Green, Thomas & Hines and Bajon Bros. all of the Island are also busily engaged getting out the various products of the forests.

The Beaver Island Lumber Co. are making rapid strides toward the completion of their lumber and shingle plant. The four large boilers are all in position, and nearly all the brick work completed. The engine and other heavy machinery is all in place. The shingle mill is nearly ready for its machinery. A crew of fifteen men and three teams are at work on the grade of the right-of way and all the cuts on the road will be made be I felt slow goes off. By the middle of May the road will be in running order so says manager Stevens.

Father Dugeldre has recently moved into the new store house which has just been completed. This compact residence which is by far the finest dwelling on the Island is a credit to the Island and especially to the Parish and friends who built it. The congregation here are greatly indebted to their faithful pastor Father Dugeldre who made it possible for the Parish to own such a handsome church home. The location of it could not have been better. The view from the highest point on the house where Father Dugeldre has cleverly planned an observatory is magnificent, for one can see not only the whole north end of the Island with Pent Lake so daintily nestled among the trees, but the north channel, the Harbor and point, all the neighboring islands in their picturesque beauty, and on a comparatively clear day, the North shore and the main land to the eastward.

Monday, February 9th 1903.

Nd mail since January 21, but all is calm and serene in Beaver Island, the garden island Indians and white men were over on the Isle Saturday, John Bonner, who is working in the Island, reached Beaver Island the day before. Nothing heard from High Island yet.

SUGAR BEET SEED.

Results of Experiments Made by Hon. W. Wood Last Summer.

From the Kalamazoo Gazette.

The following is a report of the result of my experiment in raising sugar beets the past year on the Dalton Feeder 25 acre field just east of the depot at Lake City.

About ten acres of this field was mowed and put into millet and rye last year. The balance of the field was sod and a good deal of June grass, so that.

It was rather late in the season to sow beets. I commenced plowing the morning of May 12th. We found that the field had been plowed shallow, and in order to get anything of a seed bed we had to plow deep or three inches deeper than the field had been plowed before, carrying up not to sow so that we generally hand rod clay as most of the field was heavy soil. On account of plowing deep and not always getting the sod turned over, we thought best to roll the ground as soon as the field was plowed. Then we harrow with spike tooth harrows. A part of the field we found was so hard that we put on a three horse five harrow tier, followed up with the spike tooth harrow. The last thing before seeding we went over the ground again with the roller. It cost considerable more to fit the ground for seeding than it would had we plowed the field in the fall, and I think it would have given better results. The ground is in better condition now than last year, and a better crop can be raised next year. We sowed very carefully keep an account of the expense of raising this crop, charging every item for work, and tools such as plow, spring cultivator, horse harrow, hoes, knives in topping, etc., (Divided blacksmith work and in fact every expense of raising the beet crop was charged to it. I presume there is not one farmer in a hundred who keeps an account of the expense of raising crops on his different fields and doesn't realize how much his crops do cost. The work of carrying on this beet crop was low in use and the hired help, most of the boys who helped thin out the beets were not acquainted with the work and did not do as well as they would another year, and the same is true of the loading and finishing stuff with the trucker, it was new work to us all, and of course it costs something to learn any business, and the raising of sugar beets is no exception. It cost us at least one third more for harvesting the crop than the Kalamazoo Co. claimed it would. The season was an exceptionally poor one, being so cold and wet in the latter part of the season that the beets did not come up even, and were very slow in getting a start and in consequence did not reach the size they might have under more favorable conditions.

We have a chance to experiment with several kinds of soil in this field and we found light, loamy soil to be the best. I would say that poor sandy soil would not be a success, heavy clay is equally as poor, not any soil that will raise good potatoes will raise sugar beets.

EXPENSE.

Plowing, dragging and rolling	4 00
Plowing, harrowing and rolling	3 00
Harrowing and dragging on sod	1 50
Total	$8 50

The net receipts for the beets gave the $600.17, making a net cash over and above expenses, $100.36 besides $25 worth of tools left.

Was taking the furthermost of a railroad scheme. Yet, a few evenings since, at a council meeting, the city dads refused to give the Hannah & Lay Mercantile Co. a contract for 5,000 barrels of cement, simply because that firm was the only bidder.

End of Bitter Fights.

"Two physicians had a long and stubborn fight with my disease to my right lung" writes J. F. Hughes of Hugoton, Ga. "and gave me up. Everybody thought my time has come. As a last resort I tried Dr. King's New Discovery for Consumption. The benefit I received was striking and I was on my feet in a few days. Now I'm entirely regained my health." For all diseases of Throat, Chest and Throat and Lung troubles, unexcelled by F. G. Hines & Co. Drug Store. Price 50c. and $1.00. Trial bottles free.

Second Cousin Sarah

BY THE AUTHOR OF "ANNE JUDGE, SPINSTER," "LITTLE KATE KIRBY," ETC., ETC.

The great conspiracy was at an end, and Sarah felt "as if I had won the sapphires. All that had been planned by Captain Paterson, and that Sarah's wit alone frustrated, had rendered no assistance, or, at most, very indirect, to their success had given the end which was so certain with Sarah's cleverness, had enlisted all the sympathies of the Scottish lass in her behalf, and had made her eager to be of service to her in every way in her power.

"Dinna ye worrie, Miss Sarah, ye'll be safe enough. Ye'll be safe as long as ye like, and ye'll be safe when ye like to go. Ye'll be safe with Mr. Hedley, and he will be safe with you, and ye'll be safe with your mother, and ye'll be safe with your father, and ye'll be safe with the whole family of the Mr. Hedleys, and ye'll be safe with the whole family of Mrs. Hedley."

"But, Janet, what do you think we have been working?" Sarah cried in astonishment.

"Weel, I guess it was something about lovering in her direction."

"Nonsense! Janet! Janet! I was thinking of Mr. Hedley's sister, Mrs. Hedley, who is a widow, and who is very fond of me, and who is very fond of her brother, and who would be very fond of me if I married her brother."

"Ye'll be married, then, Miss Sarah?"

"Why, Janet, what do you think we have been working?" Sarah cried in astonishment.

"Weel, I guess it was something about lovering in her direction."

"Nonsense! Janet! Janet! I was thinking of Mr. Hedley's sister, Mrs. Hedley, who is a widow, and who is very fond of me, and who is very fond of her brother, and who would be very fond of me if I married her brother."

"Ye'll be married, then, Miss Sarah?"

"Then we shall be sisters-in-law, and we shall be very happy together, and I shall be very happy in having such a sister-in-law as Mrs. Hedley, and I shall be very happy in having such a brother-in-law as Mr. Hedley, and I shall be very happy in having such a husband as Mr. Hedley."

"Weel, I guess ye'll be happy enough, Miss Sarah, if ye marry the man ye love."

"Then, Janet, did you find out?" Sarah cried at last.

"Ye don'a know, Janet?"

"Ye don'a know, Janet?"

"Ye don'a know, Janet?"

THOUGHT LITTLE OF LOVE

Disraeli's Views on Marriage Somewhat Unconventional.

Disraeli afterward, Lord Beaconsfield, wrote to his sister when he was a young man: "By the ty, would you like Lady Z — for a sister-in-law — very clever, $25,000, and domestic? As for love, all my friends who married for love and beauty either beat their wives or live apart from them. This is literally the case. I may commit many follies in life, but I never intend to marry for 'love,' which I am sure is a guaranty of infelicity." Still, in four years Disraeli had married, not Lady Z——, but the rich widow of Wyndham Lewis, of whom he had written on meeting her for the third time: "A pretty little woman, a flirt and a vulture, indeed, gifted with a vivacity I should think unequaled and of which I can answer on then, she told me that she liked silent, melancholy men." I answered that I had no doubt of it."

THE GIRL WAS HORRIFIED.

Embarrassed by the Peddler's Some what Ambiguous Request.

A young woman and her mother live all by themselves in a fashionable Chicago flat. The young woman has pronounced aversion to all things masculine and even blushed and looked embarrassed when she told the story.

A man came to the door and seemed to be offering to sell some very choice pieces of glassware.

"Did I do, then, I was to say anything of that sort," insisted the young woman.

"I don't sell them," explained the man. "I am giving them away just to introduce them."

"Then what do you get out of it?" asked the shrewd maiden.

"Oh, you might give me an old pair of pants."

"Pants?" shrieked the horrified girl. Then she slammed the door in his face and went and told her mother.

SECOND THOUGHTS IN LOVE.

Not Always Advisable to Marry the First Heart's Choice.

People who marry while very young are apt to find out when it is too late that they have made the greatest mistake in their lives, and that, though it is soon very easy, and, so many think, very cheap, to get married, this same "first love" is the very last person in the world that they ought to have married. Hence, indeed, may adviee couples to marry before they are out of their teens and settle down before the distractions of the world can attempt to shake their allegiance to each other; but this setting down too often proves to be a mere temporary phase, and is followed by an unsettled condition that lasts for the rest of their unhappy lives. Second thoughts are often best in love.

THAT MILLION-DOLLAR BABY.

Competition Induced by Senator Clark's Wife (Twins).

It is not unlikely that the offer of $1,000,000 for a male grandchild in the indirect cause of the death of Senator William A. Clark's daughter-in-law. Three eminent daughters and their husbands and one son and his wife—were led by this extraordinary price offer into an unwise and unseemly rivalry. The mother of Miss Chandler is bitter. When his daughter became the wife of United States Senator Warner Miller, the father of the celebrated "bicycle-letter" agreed to give her a pension of $25,000 for each child with which she and her husband should be blessed, an arrangement that proved highly profitable to the newly married couple. The plan is called an sort of competition, or contest, no society on the part of Mrs. Miller, who is now one of the happiest of mothers.—New York Press.

How Gilbert Crushed a Visitor.

W. S. Gilbert, who wrote the ridiculously humorous libretto for Arthur Sullivan's opera, abominates interviews. One of the numerous gentlemen visited him at his country place, but could not get him to talk. Finally the newspaper man, hoping to cover the crusty poet into saying something that might be worthy of an article, said to the librettist: "You have a lovely view here, Mr. Gilbert." "Yes, I know," was the answer. "I built the house here because of the view, but the view's getting on my nerves now, for the first thing every fool who comes down here says is, 'What a lovely view you've got, Mr. Gilbert!' I'm tired of the view. I'm sick of the view. Confound the view. Good day to you, sir."

Journalist Wants Damages.

In a suit for damages for slander now on in Australia brought by Francis Fox, a journalist, against Sir Arthur Trevorth, a politician, the plaintiff swears that in a public speech the defendant speaking of the plaintiff, said among other things: "He is a bilious, dyspeptic looking fellow, with a face like dirty fat, and a bald head, and a bald head with an honest shine, like some of you gentlemen have on it, but a scrubby looking bald head, like that of a mangy dog." The damages asked for is $500.

Good Story on "Bill" Nye.

Nye Salisbury and "Bill" Nye were great friends. When the latter first entered it newspaper world in this city, and took a house on Staten Island, the whole town went to dinner with him. Nye exploded some new stories and humorously turning to his host's little girl, said:

"Very clever papa you've got, my dear."

"Yes," responded the demure little miss, "when there's company."

Sailors and Tailors Coats.

"A sailor" is the style in which the common sailors is spoken of in public, in the Service Herald. "Sailor" is an old English synonym for heavy and "Seamen woolen." "Move and than tailor to tear." A "sailor" was a heavy coat, and tear was applied to the tailors now in common domestic use. The tailor's "goose" was so called because the handle bears a marked resemblance to the neck of a goose. In the sailor's "goose" the

THE CHANGES OF LONDON.

A Short Time Suffices to Wipe Out Old Landmarks.

Who of the present generation remembers the Pelican's village, through which Victoria street forty years ago plowed its lone furrow? London is still changing, and the local genius, this will probably read with no great surprise of some of the odd-world corners of the age which are now threatened.

The Pelican's village, as a writer in Westminster by London has informed us, was one of the most remarkable spots even found within a city. Here, surrounded by crooked streets and courts and narrow, dark lanes, and situated right in the midst of the parish, was a little rural community living a life to itself.

It had a village green and an old-fashioned wayside inn. The village shop is replaced by that conglomerate of business under one roof known as the army and navy stores.—London Express.

HUMOR IN HOUSE OF BISHOPS.

Grave and Dignified Churchmen Can Enjoy a Joke.

Sessions of the House of Bishops have not altogether the austere character the reverend nature of that body would indicate. At a recent meeting a difference of opinion developed into a rather lively contention, and one member after another, trying to relieve the situation, succeeded only in making the tense worse. At last the venerable Benjamin Clark, bishop of Rhode Island, arose in an attempt to pour oil on the troubled waters that only served to make a greater mountain before.

Simultaneously with the Bishop's sitting down the following quotation was started on a quiet but appreciative passage through the meeting.

And laughing it was the three times that of the others."—New York Times.

Afraid of the Auburn Hair.

The belief that Mary Jane Corcoran of Ashby, Md., had fiery and hair would not be very peculiar were it not for the fact that Mary Jane herself is as black and shiny as the ace of spades. Her hair, though red, is as kinky as it would be if it were black. Mary Jane was born with red hair, and it has been a misfortune to her, for as a child she had to stand the jibes of all her neighbors, black and white, and now as a young woman she has no steady company. One man, when asked why he did not court so honest and industrious a girl, said:

"Boss, I kah allus heard dat red-headed wahm folks am de debbil, but a red-headed niggah—lawd! She am de debbil sutten."

Interviewing an Emperor.

In one way Francis Joseph, the Austrian emperor, fulfills the old fairy-book ideal of a sovereign—he is always ready to see and help his subjects in person. Their letters addressed to him are opened by the emperor's private secretary. Inquiries are made as to the truth of their contents, and if it satisfactory, the writer, of whatever rank he may happen to be, is granted an interview with his sovereign alone. Nothing is done more to endear the emperor to his subjects than these informal audiences, through which all manner of wrongs have been quickly redressed.

Ethics of Snam Battles.

A Canadian paper tells this story: It was during a snam fight between two volunteer corps. One of the opposing forces was retreating before the other. Sergeant-major (to captain)—"We are going too far away from the railway station, sir—if we retreat any more we'll never get back in time to catch the train. Captain—"Blow ahead of the colonel to drive us so far! Quick, run over to the other in charge of the enemy and ask him, with my compliments, if he will please retreat toward the railway station."

Shakespeare and London.

That Shakespeare was a Londoner is a fact that has been two much proved. It was hard to find in his literary life and gained the sillyclin in an article, says the London City Press. Once upon are years have passed away should he returned to old his days in his midland birthplace, but during the whole of that long period London has never thought of honoring his memory by any adequate commemoration, for the erection of a public statue, except, of course, that in Westminster Abbey and the poor effigy in Leicester Square.

Best Them With Kindness.

Better than arbitration—wise and necessary as that may be at times—better than arbitration, especially than enforced arbitration, is mutual acquaintance, respect, confidence, and love of neighbor, and these cannot be obtained when there is hostility shown, on either side a speck of human sympathy. The other day we asked a highly successful manufacturer how it was that he had got along so well for so many years with his great crowd of employes and their idiosyncrasies. "We beat them," he said, "with kindness."—The January Century (editorial).

Stones for Bread.

According to the British vice-consul at Nikolaief, Russia, cereals are now adulterated by the addition of small stones and gravel, and this is especially in the case with wheat, as its color and shape, he says, are easily imitated. The mixture does not sound appetizing, and the idea of the fact that a loaf of bread received 25 per cent of wheat from Nicolaief, the British consumer may well feel a little suspicious of mixing flour.—London Mail.

A Russian Bargain.

To receive a letter addressed instead of one of the leading families received recently a letter through the post addressed to her husband in a woman's handwriting. As she opened it a piece of paper fell out with the words, "Think of me," with no signature. The last moment she took possible to the ground. Her little 7-year-old boy picked up the envelope and the first who overpowered with the perfume which the letter was perfumed. Indignantly he tore and which was found some time afterward in a chamber.

LaGrippe Caused Heart Trouble, Nervous Prostration and Dyspepsia.

My Friends Know Heart Cure Cured Me.

Mrs. C. O. Hurd, 108 W. Third St., Muncie, Ind., and Home, Brought her mother of Iowa as an infirm invalid. In the M. E. church, the latter "Lagrippe" for with a severe case of nervous dyspepsia and nervous dropsy, which was affected my heart. I suffered from sleeplessness, headache, extreme nervousness and twitching of the muscles. The slightest exertion would cause palpitation of the heart. My mother-in-law had been a great sufferer from heart trouble and nervous prostration. I gave her a few doses of Dr. Miles' Heart Cure and Nervine with the Nerve and Liver Pills and she is in good health. I will tell you what I am constantly telling my friends—that Dr. Miles' Heart Cure cured me at that all these disagreeable symptoms left me. I may call that for seven years, I have never found anything to equal Dr. Miles' Anti-Pain Pills for headache, and Dr. Miles' Pills are a wonderful stomach remedy.

"Our son was stricken down with heart trouble in his fourteenth year. For four months we did all we can with him at night, and we concluded to use Dr. Miles' Heart Cure and Nervine with the Nerve and Liver Pills and today he is sound and well. We feel that we owe a physical examination since we have taken Dr. Miles' Remedies, and we have found a perfect health. Dr. Miles' Anti-Pain Pills have certainly been a boon to me. I recommend your remedies to my friends and neighbors and I have never had anything that would relieve me so quickly and leave no feeling as well. Gratefully yours, Mrs. C. O. Hurd."

REVENGE WAS WELL PLANNED

How Disgruntled Employes Got Even with Their Employer.

A firm of London engineers recently had a contract to put a heating plant in a country church. The work was let out to plumber who covered the contract. The London firm employed the local plumber on the job. When the apparatus was completed it did not warm the church. Careful search disclosed a bundle of straw in a clay pipe. The local plumber had had his revenge. The same does not go to a cheap heating apparatus in a big London store. These operations cost, of course, thousands of fully 100 times the shop. All, it was thought, were provided for with tips. But when the fire was lighted the place was not warmed. A manager and a whole staff of workmen were sent for. Ventilation and late at night a coal was found covered with lime and carbolic. It belonged to a man who had been overlooked in the distribution of tips.

HUSBAND IS TOO MODEST.

Mr. De Bathe Said to Be "Afraid of American Newspapers."

Mrs. Langtry's husband has not accompanied his beautiful and accomplished wife to America. He is a shy and and timorous gentleman, inclined to confine to his more aggressive better half in "afraid of the American newspapers." Mr. De Bathe's modesty is not so much the fault of the newspapers as of the fierce light that beats about the throne. It would be impossible to call an illustrious lady such as Mrs. Langtry without sharing in her adventurous successes and if it is a pity that Mrs. Langtry's husband does not appreciate the glamour which has his being educated at Blundell's school and Christ's college, Oxford, and he will become accustomed to these little journalistic attentions and more than a little when they are not furthcoming.—Chicago Evening Post.

A Bad Arrangement.

When it is proposed to cut a duty on hosiery, gloves, knit goods and the like for France and Germany is a factor where the Chain fabric, the home industries engaged in these industries can raise their production in large quantities as to interfere with home production, while we get no real advantage in return, that is not reciprocity. It is giving away a good thing for nothing. We will get no reciprocity in the Dingley schedules.—Indianapolis Journal.

Who Is Superior?

Gov. Cummins seems to tell us why he was in sulkiness or revolt in that land of sunlight has to be kept up perpetually.—Cedar Rapids Republican.

WOOL AND TARIFF.

Higher Prices and Increased Production Under the Dingley Law.

"The wool manufacturing industry in the United States is in a highly flourishing condition." This is the situation as described in the annual wool review of the National Association of Wool Manufacturers published in the current quarterly bulletin of the association. We are now living under the Dingley tariff act, which accorded special protective attention to the wool growing and wool manufacturing industries, and credit must undoubtedly be given to that tariff for the present state of the manufacturing industry."

The above conversation from the Springfield Republican is welcome indeed, but still that paper is not happy, for it continues:

"What of the business of wool growing under this tariff law? What is it to be conceded that the grower enjoys higher prices for his product. Ohio XX washed wool now sells at twenty-eight and a half cents a pound against twenty-six and a half cents in 1901, twenty-eight and a half cents in 1900, thirty-one and a half cents in 1899 and twenty-nine and a half cents in 1898, but against nineteen cents during the three years in which the Wilson tariff act (free wool) was operative. This rise in price should have stimulated wool production—and it has been so in only small extents, and the domestic output of wool still falls short of what it was ten years ago when the McKinley tariff act, and bids fair not again for the present to reach the former figures. The product of the current year is given at 244,241,000 pounds, against 258,152,351 in 1897, at the end of the free wool period, but against 242,536,124 in 1892, the maximum production recorded under the McKinley act."

An average of twenty-nine cents a pound during the Dingley tariff, as against nineteen cents a pound under the Gorman-Wilson tariff, and a production of 246,000,000 pounds, against 259,000,000 pounds, would seem to answer the Republican's question: "What of the business of wool growing under this tariff law?" But still the editor is unsatisfied because we have not yet recovered all that we had. Its Palmyra idea of it is easier to tear down than to build up, and that it may still be several years before we fully recover from that disastrous wool period. If, in certain sections wool growing has been so up extent abandoned it is because of more profitable industries. There as Secretary North of the Wool Manufacturer's Association says, the high price of meat has offered the farmers an inducement to kill both lamb and mutton so that the supply has rapidly decreased per capita instead of increased. But we do not agree with Secretary North that we are not down to a domestic supply equal to domestic requirements, conditions are not yet normal. But we are glad to see that even the idea of the insurrection in the Philippines the Springfield Republican is studying economic questions with no little intelligence.

Monument to R. D. Blackmore.

The R. D. Blackmore memorial committee has decided on the forms of the monument to be erected in Exeter cathedral. The design accepted is of the classical order and embodies a striking portrait of the author, with expressive his global quantities. The inscription is to be simply the date of his being educated at Blundell's school and Exeter college, Oxford, and to end with a quotation from Mr. Blackmore's own writings and from Mr. Blackmore's own work. It is hoped that the monument may be in position by about Easter and shortly after that date the unveiling ceremony will take place.

He Knew His Daughter.

The death of Mrs. Jessie Benton Fremont recalls the story of how her father, Senator Benton of Missouri, violently opposed her union to Lieutenant, afterward general, John C. Fremont. After her marriage the senator went to a newspaper office and handed in a long announcement of the wedding of "Jessie Benton to John C. Fremont." The editor suggested that the groom's name was usually put first, whereupon Benton said explosively: "It will go in that way or not at all. Fremont did not marry my daughter, she married him."

English Statesman-Athlete.

Robert Laurie Morant, M. P., who is credited with having drafted the education bill now before parliament, is a man of splendid athletic frame, 6 feet 4 inches tall, a born fighter and of iron will. In speaking of Mr. Morant a London writer says that Mr. Blackmore said when he looked at this burly form of Dwight L. Moody the American revivalist: "Mr. Moody, I wish I had your shoulders." To which the preacher retorted: "Mr. Clark, I wish I had your head." The London writer adds: "When I saw Mr. Morant I envied both his shoulders and his head."

SAY THEY WILL KILL.

ROBBERS TERRORIZE FARMERS BY THREATS OF MURDER.

Lubin, Mo., Bank Bandits, Captured Near Shakopee, Ills., Escape Again—Score Posses in Large Tract of Farming Land in Colorado.

Hal Rudolph and Frank Lewis, the Union (Mo.) bank robbers, who were found in a cabin near Shakopee, Ill., have escaped again. According to reports from communities through which the robbers have passed, they have adopted new methods in obtaining money and threatening to kill any one who by remote chance may get their trail. Twice only with women and children, from whom they demanded information concerning the whereabouts of a posse, have they been thwarted. In the case of the women they simply disappeared into the woods. They will approach a farm house and, if they see a dog or dogs, will make sure of it. If it is, they will keep on until they come to a place where they can get a dog. If it is not, they will go to the house and demand food, or money to buy food, and, if they can, will take one or two of the women with them. They have been in Illinois, Missouri, Iowa, Nebraska and Colorado. Like Tracy, they disguise themselves as far as possible by changing their clothes, and, if they are seen, they have changed their appearance so that they are not recognized. In the case of the women, they either had to be left behind or the sheriff would be informed of their whereabouts. Tracy, who was captured in Mexico, with grand and pinch lines, has been in Illinois, Iowa, Nebraska and Colorado, and, if he is with them, he has changed his appearance so that he is not recognized. Tracy is a dangerous, cool man and, if he is with them, he will not hesitate to shoot if he thinks it will help him to escape. Lewis, if he is with them, is a desperate character, who will not hesitate to shoot if he thinks it will help him to escape. Rudolph, who is a young man, is not considered dangerous. The posse, which was composed of about 100 men, has been disbanded. The men have returned to their homes, but are ready to be called into service again at a moment's notice. The posse, which was composed of men from Illinois and Missouri, was hot on the trail of the robbers. The sheriff will be three miles in front of the posse, when he discovered the trail of the robbers. He then returned to the city, even from a stage of water rising in the creek and disappeared toward the Iowa shore.

The report shows that the harbor is one of the finest in the world, and that it is the most active port in the Atlantic ocean, ranking next to New York in the northeast of the Atlantic coast.

FIRE AT SPRINGFIELD, OHIO.

Nine Y. M. C. A. Buildings and a Large Theater Are Destroyed.

Fire destroyed the new building of the Young Men's Christian Association, the Fountain Square Theater and several adjacent buildings at Springfield, Ohio, causing a loss of $250,000, with insurance two-thirds of that sum. The alarm came from a box in front of the Fountain Square Theater, formerly known as Hardy's Opera House. There was a great delay in getting water, and soon the theater and the Young Men's Christian Association building were in flames. The fire spread to a wall of the theater crumbled the heavily stone of Mechanical and gave way in the upper floor, three men had been killed. Mr. Mulford was known. Others entered the theater before the walls fell, and it was known that two men were in the upper floors when the last gave way. Firemen were in the act of trying to get to the third floor when the walls fell. They were expected, having been sheltered by the wall. Six men are reported, but if men have been killed, the number will be much greater. The Y. M. C. A. building was occupied by the Young Men's Christian Association, the Knights of Pythias, the Knights of Columbus, the Knights of Honor, and most of the social and literary societies in the city. The building was entirely lost. The theater was a large one, and the Young Men's Christian Association building was a large one. The walls were left standing, and the fire spread to the Mulholland, who had been given up as lost. He was painfully injured, but probably will recover.

ALL ESCAPE FROM FIRE.

All the people living in the five story building at Riverview, Chicago, occupied Clark street, Chicago, escaped death at 4 a. m. in a fire which started in the basement and spread to the fourth floor of the building, which was built in 1893 and is occupied by Albert Fairchild, were asleep in the upper floors when the fire started. The flames were discovered. Through Helen Dunlap, who was in the hall, the alarm was given to the janitor, who ran down to the basement and found the boiler room in flames. Mrs. Dunlap ran down the stairs to the floor with a pail of water in her hand. The janitor was in the basement when the fire started. He was in the boiler room when the fire started. The Case of Navin of Michigan.

From The Rocky Mountain news.

In the NEWS of Sunday, reference is made to the appointment of Thomas J. Navin as one of the commissioners of state prison at Jackson, Mich., and the action of Governor Hims in commuted an "erring, or rather, wickedness." In the course of the article you say: The young man commenced and growing disregard of good character on every side. They see the apologist for crime while wanting the law breaker and indorsing him for posts of great responsibility. * * * People of reputable character everywhere commend the action of the clergymen of the state, valn as it proved to be, in their opposition to the political corruption which was succeeding in putting an ex-criminal into office."

Being familiar with the circumstances attending the case of Navin, this editorial has no doubt appealed to me more strongly than it would otherwise. But I desire to take issue with the deduction drawn on general principles.

Eighteen years ago young Navin lost the way. He was a man of strong personality, big of heart and brain. He had been elected mayor of the city. One day came the startling information that he had forged bonds of the city to the amount of a hundred thousand dollars, and although he realized nothing on the mad venture, an inquiry as to the validity of these bonds, led to his ruin. For three years he was a fugitive from justice. Driven from place to place by the pursuit of the officers of the law and by needing people whom he had known at the old home, he roamed the West like a hunted beast. His fellowmen were hungry for a victim. From Michigan to Texas, to Fort Townsend, the "pumping off place" of this country, to southern California, to New Orleans, he fled, always pursued. What he finally imagined a big country, he found after all to be pen-like. Always the fear, always the pursuit, always the conscience which he was never able to lose on boundless prairie or crowded mart. Finally, he wired the sheriff, was brought back, arraigned, pleaded guilty and was sentenced to ten years, at hard labor in state prison.

His story of the three years' experience, scorn than imprisonment, a shaft from his own pipe.

He served his term—paid in full whatever debts he owed society, cancelled the obligation and no doubt vainly dreamed that the moral note had been destroyed. He was allowed the full time for good behavior and a month or so before he would have been liberated by law, in order of seeing his civil rights and in consideration of his exemplary conduct for more than five years, he was pardoned by the governor of the state. He had thousands of friends and well-wishers in Michigan, red no act of the then governor, Cyrus G. Luce, gave more general satisfaction than the pardon of young Navin, though it meant liberation covering only a few weeks.

A man of a weaker character would have gone to another country to begin life anew. Not so with young Navin. As a criminal, he had lost. As a free man, with his debt to his fellow man paid in full, he stayed to fight the battle of his life in the open. He began again the pathway of his reputation. Soon he forged toward the front. Step by step for more than a dozen years he has gradually advanced until he has a prominent place at the Detroit bar. The minister has a week to prepare his sermon, with no one on the other side. Being compelled to offer some definition and meet an adversary in each argument, perhaps one more brilliant than himself, it is not surprising that a lawyer of Harry's force and intellect should sell sermons.

Now what is the sum and substance of Navin's standing and of his life? Having served for five years of long days and dreadfully long nights in the prison of this state, he took honest fame and to prove guilty, should have, by a fiance, sent back to prison, or at commencement of the footlights.

Who he was charged to be imprisoned for this position? There was no question as to that. Was he not a man of brains and force of character? Had he not shown that by rising and making a winning fight? Was he not an active and intelligent adherent of the party in power? As chairman of the central committee of his party had he not given his time and his talents to that political organization?

All true. But the good man, the moral teachers protest. They show how active they can be when a great moral principle is a stake. Navin must not be appointed, because forsooth, he was an inmate of that same prison. They would have pointed in great letters above the door of this "reform" institution, "He Who Enters Here Leaves All Hope Behind."

The past, the past, the past. Nothing of the present. There is no future—Not for him who has missed his footing.

Is this the gospel of the living Christ?

Some cynic might inquire as to what business these well-groomed ministers of grace have to protest in regard to a matter of this kind and for the reason given.

For myself, I think the ministers of Michigan, who have joined in this nonsense, have shown themselves to be a very cheap lot. I think they have done a very small and a very mean thing. They should go to their closets, down upon their knees, let their prayers and thoughts fly upwards and beseech Almighty God to help them fathom the spirit of the gentle Nazarene who walked in sorrow beneath the palms of Galilee. They should humbly ask for light and wisdom to understand the sermon on the mount, which has never been accomplished, and even if they be a Michigan minister. They are not preaching a gospel of justice, charity and brotherhood. Theirs is a religion of hate, of bigotry and cant.

BEAVER ISLAND NEWS.

Prospects point to an early opening of navigation.

Three or four loads of tourists leaving people were on to attend the funeral of Jas. Gibson.

The public schools were closed Thursday afternoon on account of the funeral of Director Gibson.

Mrs. Annie E. Gallagher is very low with heart disease—little hope being entertained for her recovery.

The ice is all out of the mouth of the harbor, and McCann's dock at the point can be easily reached by boat.

The many friends of Miss Nellie Gibson will be glad to learn that she is rapidly convalescing from her severe illness.

Mrs. W. B. Johnson received the sad intelligence of the death of her father, E. T. Inane, of Northport, Feb. 11. On account of the delay of communication with the main land the word did not reach here until Feb. 21.

Mrs. Jas. Donlerry gave a very pleasant evening at cards to about fifty friends among the matured people of the harbor a few evenings since. The guests were served with appetizing refreshments and all returned to their homes feeling that Mr. and Mrs. Donlerry are royal entertainers. A collection was taken for the benefit of the Ladies Sodality, which organization is buying the curtains and linen for the Parish Houses on the hill.

On Tuesday evening, Feb. 24, Jas. Gibson, one of the oldest settlers and most respected citizens of Beaver Island passed away after an illness of nearly four months. Mr. Gibson was born on Beaver Island in 1830. His parents, who moved to the Island the previous year being among the first settlers after the expulsion of the Mormons. In 1859 he was married to Miss Mary McGrath, who with four children, Mrs. Margaret, Julia and Mary still survive him. He also leaves his mother, Mrs. Julia Gibson, three sisters and one brother—Mrs. Sarah Bailey, of Mackinac Island, Mrs. W. F. Gill and Miss Ida Gibson of the Island and Mr. William Gibson of Petoskey. For many years he has held the position of pier master, tax gaser at town treasurer, and for a long time a valued member of the school board, vice president of the C. M. B. A., and a faithful communicant of Holy Cross Catholic church. In 1902 he went to the University Hospital at Ann Arbor for the treatment of a serious malady of the throat, and after a six weeks stay there, returning to the island with no hopes of being cured. He was quite resigned to his fate and was never heard to complain of his lot though hard it seemed to be. He was in the one savage mere mention about his dear ones than for him. Although a great sufferer during most of his sickness he just moaned, he was peaceful and without pain. He was a good son, a kind brother, and a loving and affectionate husband and father. The funeral occurred Thursday morning at ten o'clock and was largely attended. The deceased was buried at the Holy Cross Cemetery.

CONGREGATIONAL CHURCH.

Rev. James Hyslop, Ph.D., Pastor.

The reception at Mrs. Nichols's a week ago was a delightful affair and well attended despite the many hindering circumstances.

There was a good attendance at the Communion services Sunday morning. Three new members were received, one of whom received the ordinance of Baptism.

The Doll show given by Mrs. Timmer's and Miss McMillan's Sunday School classes last Saturday was a great success notwithstanding the stormy weather. Hundreds of dolls were on exhibition and arranged in a variety of pleasing ways. As for instance the doll hospital. There were dolls of all countries and some very old ones. The young people had a fine time.

The church was nearly full in the evening to hear the illustrated lecture of John Bunyan. Mr. Hyslop will begin a series of 4 sermons on Bunyan's great Allegory "The Pilgrim's Progress" next Sunday night, the subject being "The City of Destruction and Interpreters House" with thoughts on "The Slough of Despond," "The Straight Gate," "Evangelist" and "Interpreter." From 10 to 15 illustrative views will be shown each evening. The musical part of the service will be a special feature.

MARINE NEWS.

Have we forgotten that there is a line in the lower channel that will seriously handicap navigation this spring? Has anything been done to get a dredging job before the rush comes? This is a matter that should be looked up at once.

From present appearances the opening of Navigation need not be looked for much before April first, although there are those who predict the passage of vessels from this port as early as the 25th of this month. Ice is firm in the big lake, but a black streak of water could be seen yesterday about five miles out.

Capt. L. R. Boynton of the Ice cruiser St. Marie, which operates the whole year between St. Ignace and Mackinaw City, was in Detroit yesterday and said indications in the Straits of Mackinac were for an early opening and that the ice would not be long now in starting to run.

Capt. Peter Barry of the Barry Transportation Co. announces that the steamer City of Grand Rapids will be added to the fleet of boats on the west shore route the coming season and will alternate with the steamer Badger State and Empire State in making trips to Manistique and Marinette.

—Mrs. Geo. Harrison, of Traverse City, has been the guest of Mr. and Mrs. Grant Harrison, the past week.

—The band concert last night was well attended, and everybody who attended speaks well of the entertainment.

—E. H. Weston and Wife left Wednesday via Petoskey for a visit with relatives and friends at Allen, Elsie, Owosso and other points.

—H. M. Ross received a telegram from Lansing this morning announcing the death of his mother at that place. Mr. Ross left at once for Lansing.

—Regular meeting of the Charlevoix Helebah Lodge, No. 260, I. O. O. F., Tuesday evening, March 17th, at 7:30 o'clock. A good attendance is desired.

—Last Thursday Mrs. Cole and her brother, Mr. Peck were called to Walloon Lake to attend the funeral of their brother-in-law, Mr. Frank Davis. He was killed instantly while moving a building.

—Well, yes. Bridge street does look as if it had been turned over for spring crops; but, after all, it does not look much worse than it has previous springs, when the snow and ice melted away. When we consider how the feelings have been harrowed up since last fall, it is no wonder it is not worse.

—The celebrated Silvers Vaudeville Company will appear at Lewis opera house Saturday evening of this week. The Silvers have established an enviable reputation as entertainers. They never disappoint. The illustrated song feature was original with the Silvers, and they made a great hit in it.

—Service will be held in the Episcopal church on Tuesday evening, March 17th, by Rev. C. T. Stout. Subject of sermon, "Some Sent Triumphes of the Kingdom of Heaven." The Holy Communion will be administered at 10 o'clock on Wednesday morning. The public is cordially invited to these services.

—Out at Atwood last Saturday night about 40 laughers gathered at the home of Mr. and Mrs. Chester Blanchard, on the occasion of their departure from that neighborhood. Supper was served, and the evening spent in social enjoyment. Mr. and Mrs. Blanchard leave Atwood this week, but we are not advised as to where they go.

—Will Gagnon was here Tuesday and Wednesday. Since January 1st he has been keeping books at Drummond. He is now on his way to Oregon, where he has secured a position in a drug store. The statement recently published that he failed in his Agricultural College examinations is not true. He will study medicine and may take the Ann Arbor University course.

—The who merchant always complains the advertising appropriation as a part of his fixed expenses—as much so, almost, as rent, clerk hire and light, and he naturally reduces it from the gross receipts. It should not, too, for it is frequent that the advertising expenditure is directly responsible in reducing the percentage of other total expenses. Rightly done, as is evidenced every day, advertising always increases receipts in far greater proportion than is noted in increased expenses for the greater volume of business transacted. There is no such loving, though, who can say just what percentage of the gross receipts should be devoted to the advertising appropriation. No hard and fast rule can be laid down that will infallibly work in any one or any one particular business in the amount of money which should be spent on publicity. Competition is the prime or controlling factor. These vary in different localities and at different seasons, and in most the advertiser appropriates them.

—L. P. Adams was called to Van Dettouth yesterday by the unexpected death of his mother.

—Jas. Coulter, the well known of Traverse City, was here yesterday and today, visiting his brothers.

—E. L. Johnson is putting a gasoline engine and other machinery for the manufacture of ice cream in the building near the Hotel Hartlett.

—Dr. Stevens, who recently located here for the practice of medicine, has secured office rooms over Crane's store. He has a professional card in this issue.

—It is stated on good authority that the authorities are soon to color out six nickle-in-the-slot machines in Charlevoix, which, of course, includes the lim.

—The editor was out of town when the SENTINEL went to press last week, and in the communication from Dr. Kanagy there were some glaring errors of typography that were entirely the fault of the office, and not of the writer. These are the things that turn an editor's hair grey.

—There seems to be trouble ahead for the Pere Marquette R. R. Co. The operators on the entire system have demanded an increase of wages and other benefits. If the demands are not complied with the boys will walk out next Monday. The engineers and conductors say they will not receive train orders from "scabs" and the strike may extend to them.

—Dr. Armstrong, assisted by other surgeons, on Wednesday amputated, at the forearm, the right hand of Mrs. Jessie, wife of A. L. Coulter. Mrs. Coulter rallied well from the shock, and at this writing is doing well at her rooms in the Elston Hotel. She has for the past year or more been suffering from a diseased bone in her wrist. Every effort has been made to cure the difficulty, but without avail.

—Charlevoix township is the smallest in the county, only containing 46 acres while Wilson holds the banner for the largest, 12,108 acres, Boyne Valley comes fifth with 6,923 acres. The county of Charlevoix contains 35,032 acres of improved farm land and 9,850 acres of unimproved, making a total of 75,482 acres of farm lands devided up in 987 farms with an average of 80 to a farm. During the past year the county raised 2,000 horses, 4,000 head of cattle, 1,500 hogs, and 2,000 sheep which produced 16,850 pounds of wool.

—Some time ago the Secretary of "The Congregational Summer Bible College" was here to look over our town and surroundings and was well pleased. A letter just received now ever states that the committee considered that this point is too far away from the centers of Congregational. It has been decided to go to New Buffalo for this year, the Secretary says "there may be reason why we should reverse our decision when we meet this summer." This, we judge is more than probable, whether they should ever locate in Charlevoix or not.

—Within a year it is expected the Mormon church of Jesus Christ of Latter Day Saints will be established in Michigan with either Detroit, Battle Creek or Grand Rapids as its location, probably Grand Rapids. For several months 11 missionaries, under direction of Elder L. A. Neeley, have been working in the state, and they claim to have won enough converts to warrant affecting a state or organization. Elder Neeley frankly expresses belief in polygamy as a divine institution, but says not above two per cent ever practiced it because they could not afford it. He says there are more polygamists in Detroit and Grand Rapids today than in the entire state of Utah.

—Conceding that in politics, as in business, "opposition is the life of trade," and that those having in charge the recent citizen's movement were prompted by honest motives, we believe the vitality is apparent. The republicans of Charlevoix have never had a better organization than now; and if morals count for anything in government, it will be in better shape than ever for the National and State contest of 1904. And in this work we have no doubt that many of those who were arrayed against us last Monday will join. Therefore let there be a republican club organized for steady work from now up to the next general election. Every member of the new council is a republican, and we are confident that they will give the village a practical business administration, and be governed by rules and conservative policy.

THE ELECTION.

The Republican Village Ticket Elected by Large Majorities.

At the village election Monday there were 547 votes cast, the republican ticket winning by majorities as follows:

E. W. Coulter, pres., 94; W. H. McCarthy, clerk, 107; J. L. Dixon, assessor 81; F. E. Wood, treas., 111; O. E. Wilbur, trustee, 116; B. W. Miller, trustee, 91; N. B. Washburn, trustee, 60.

The socialist ticket polled 17 votes.

The council will stand as follows: President, E. W. Coulter; Trustees H. I. McMillan, Andrew Rose, O. E. Wilbur, B. W. Miller and N. B. Washburn, leaving one vacancy to be filled by reason by the election of trustee Coulter to the presidency.

The result of the election is an emphatic endorsement of the work of the old council.

From George H. VanPelt.

Chicago, Ill., March 6th, 1903.

MY DEAR SENTINEL:

Though not an actual resident of Charlevoix, I am greatly interested in everything for its improvement, for which the most important at the present time seems to be the paving of Bridge street, and I would like permission to give you my opinion on same based on present observation.

As I understand the question the discussion seems to lie between vitrified brick or Macadam. On my daily route to business I have an experience with both, and I am greatly in favor of the brick pavement, because it is very durable and is so easily kept perfectly clean, and allows cleanly crossing at the street at any point.

The street on which I lived, and which is also a boulevard and is kept in as good order as a Macadam road can be, is either dusty or muddy. In the summer time being sprinkled, it is almost always muddy, and in the fall and winter when the "wind blows everything is covered with a fine dust, the greater portion of which is powdered stone. Although no heavy traffic tenses are allowed on boulevards, there are many little hollow places in it, and it has only been laid two years and as we all know by experience in our own dirt roads every wheel that passes through one of these depressions, takes a little more earth from it and the hole grows deeper and larger.

Asphalt pavements are easily kept clean, but from recent observation, a pavement laid a little time ago has a great many breaks in it, which every passing team makes worse. In my opinion a brick pavement will add very much more to the beauty of Charlevoix and to the value of property then anything else that can be done for the amount of money spent.

Charlevoix is sure to grow, and is sure to have several new lines of transportation in addition to the electric road from Traverse City. I predict either lines on both the north and south shores of the lake. Where you see a more beautiful body of water than this lake, and it is only a question of time when its shores will be dotted with little settlements of resorters all the way to East Jordan as well as Boyne City.

Of course Charlevoix will be the central point, and would today support two more big hotels that would accommodate 1000 guests each if they could get accommodations, I believe that there would be 1000 people from St. Louis alone.

Do not forget to mention that the Farmers' Friendly Association meets in Norwood the last Thursday in August 1903.

Wishing Charlevoix great prosperity I remain.

Yours very truly,
GEORGE H. VANPELT.

SCHOOL NOTES.

Lyceum will be held Friday evening.

The Seniors commence advanced rhetoric this week.

Keep watch for the warm Maple Sugar Social to be given by the Senior sophomore in the near future.

Prof. Tree was given a very pleasant surprise last Friday evening by the Charlevoix teachers and was presented with a silver shaving mug.

Prof. Tree wishes it to be announced that tickets for the lecture course will be sold at fifty cents for the remainder of the season if purchased on or before March 20th, later than that date the regular price will be charged.

The Wesleyan Male Quartette give the next entertainment on the lecture course, March, 27th. Do not fail to hear for the number of music they give.

Charlevoix is sure to grow, and is sure to have several new lines of transportation in addition to the electric road from Traverse City. I predict either lines on both the north and south shores of the lake. Where you see a more beautiful body of water than this lake, and it is only a question of time when its shores will be dotted with little settlements of resorters all the way to East Jordan as well as Boyne City.

Of course Charlevoix will be the central point, and would today support two more big hotels that would accommodate 1000 guests each if they could get accommodations, I believe that there would be 1000 people from St. Louis alone.

Do not forget to mention that the Farmers' Friendly Association meets in Norwood the last Thursday in August 1903.

Wishing Charlevoix great prosperity I remain.

Yours very truly,
GEORGE H. VANPELT.

Farmer's Institute.

A Farmer's Institute for Charlevoix county will be held at the court house in this village morning and afternoon of Wednesday, March 18th.

The institute will be devoted exclusively to good roads discussion. Senator Earl of Detroit, a member of the state road roads Commission will be present and deliver one or more addresses.

It is hoped that farmers generally will attend, but more especially is it desired that all road officers, commissioners and overseers of highways will be present as possible.

Everybody is invited.

Hostetter's Arnica Salve.

Has world-wide fame for marvelous cures. It surpasses any other application, ointment or balm for Cuts, Corns, Burns, Boils, Sores, Ulcers, Tetter, Salt Rheum, Fever Sores, Chapped Hands, Skin Eruptions, Sacchlike Piles. Only 25c at all druggists. Only 25c at F. G. Hines & Co. Drug.

NORWOOD NEWS.

Marlena Valentine who has been visiting friends at Thompson U. P. returned last Thursday.

Mrs. Della Cameron, who has been in Detroit the last six weeks returned on Friday last.

Mrs. Aylesworth has been visiting friends in Grand Rapids the past week.

There is very little ice in sight at this point and nothing to prevent navigation.

It has only been below zero once this winter and the lowest 3 degrees below.

Rev. Aylesworth, commenced a series of revival meetings at Atwood Sunday.

Teachers' Examination.

The regular teachers' examination for Charlevoix County will be held at the Municipal School building high school, Charlevoix on March 26th and 27th. Examinations will commence at 7:00 a. m. Standard time, and embrace all grades of certificates.

YIELDS HIMSELF UP.

CHICAGO YOUNG MAN CONFESSES SEVERAL FORGERIES.

In Trouble Many Times and Says There Is No Punishment to Equal a Guilty Conscience—Nebraska Farmers Form Great Combine.

Fennie S. Lyle, son-in-law, Herman Tyle, confesses to forgeries under your Chicago, walked into the Central police station in Chicago, identified himself and confessed that he had been a fugitive. Mr. Lyle said he had come to Chicago from the awful punishment the conscience is meting out to him of the crime of which he is guilty. He has lived in a state of fear ever since he left Chicago. He said he had forged notes and checks and he had to pay the money back. He said he had forged the signature of Mr. Lyle, his father-in-law, and also forged the signature of Mr. Lyle, his father-in-law, and also forged the signature of Mr. Lyle, his father-in-law, and also Singer Has Great Future.

Evelyn Innes, the famous lake harbor of New York, is a young Welsh man, who has already made a great name for himself. He was discovered, it is said, some years ago, working in one of the iron factories of Pittsburg, where by chance he was heard singing several people became interested in him and he was taken to New York and placed under some of the best teachers. His voice has developed into a rich bass baritone with a range that is said to be very remarkable, taking tenor notes with wonderful purity, clearness and sweetness. He is very small in stature, but very broad and muscular, with splendid chest development.

Their Slight Request.

In Haverhill, Mass., the home town of Secretary Moody of the navy, there is an informal association of gentlemen which for the present purposes may remain nameless, but whose object is the very definite persuasion of any old scheme which involves a good deal.

When the press dispatches announced Mr. Moody's appointment the members of the association drew up a telegram as follows:

"Dear Bill: We're glad you've got the job. Please send up the Dolphin; the gang wants to go fishing."—Chicago Tribune.

Hoosiers and the Indians.

There is in the Royal museum at The Hague, Holland, a curious old document describing the adventures of Henry Hudson, a navigator in the service of the Dutch East India company. He it was who discovered the river to which he gave his name. A passage of the document reads as follows: "The natives, or Indians, on his first coming here, regarded the ship with mighty wonder, and looked upon it as a sea monster and declared that such a sale or people had never been there before."—New York Tribune.

Living Up to Principles.

Once when inviting a court to Lambeth palace lir. Temple, the late archbishop of Canterbury, is said to have told him: "You know my principles; you will find nothing but water on my dinner table; but my servants have orders to see that wine is placed in your bedroom." In due course the visit was returned and the host said to Dr. Temple: "I know your principles. My servants have orders to offer you no wine at dinner, but you will find plenty of water in your bedroom."

Taken at His Word.

When dealing with black servants it is necessary to be very careful in the wording of one's instructions, for they are sometimes taken very literally. A missionary the other day, voyaging on a river boat with primitive accommodation, was compelled to use a bucket as a wash bowl. One morning his boy servant was bringing the bucket to his master, when he spilled some of it over his master's feet. "Why don's you throw it all over me?" said the missionary, irritably. "Aha!" exclaimed the boy, and promptly did so.

"Look Tae the Fush"

A certain Scotch laird recently invited an English friend to stay with him for some fishing. One day the Englishman, who was a novice at the sport, hooked a fine salmon, and, in his excitement, slipped and fell into the river. The keeper, seeing that he was no swimmer, hooked on to him with the gaff and was about to drag him ashore, when the hard relief cried out, "What are ye about, laddie? Ye land of the fish and leave the fish a friend! Ye can lose a wee, but the fush winna!"—Forest and Stream.

Arctic House.

Capt. Francis Tuttle of the revenue cutter Bear, during her recent trip to the Arctic seas, found a house built by Greenlanders probably thousands of years ago. It was partially imbedded in a cliff fronting on the ocean fifteen miles northeast of Point Barrow. The cliff rose sheer seventy ft. it from the ocean. Fifty feet above the tide water and thirty feet from the top of the cliff one end of the house was exposed. The ribs of an enormous whale were used for a framework, and over these skins had evidently been stretched.

Resented by Army Officers.

In the course of a violent sermon at Zaragoza, a Jesuit declared that the loss of the Spanish colonies was due to the want of faith in the army, which had not had one glorious day. This remark gave umbrage to a number of officers, who rushed upon the priest, dragged him from the pulpit, mercilessly lacerated him with the flat of their swords, and finally rushed from the church shouting, "Long live the army!" leaving the priest on the floor almost dead with fear and bruises.

Like His Famous Father.

Gen. Fred Grant's resemblance to his father is startling. The Philippines and Texas have rendered the once stalwart young man of twenty rugged, as a soldier should be. His beard and hair, formerly of the reddish hue, are darker, with hues and there a streak of gray, and, as they are worn exactly like his father's, you can see old Uncoolidiness, Surrender approaching as he comes up Broadway. The general is bound taller than the great American soldier.

Now to Decipher Them.

Twenty-five thousand tablets covered with hieroglyphics have been brought from Nippur, in Mesopotamia, by Prof. Hilprecht.

The President's Apology.

One of Detroit's best known lawyers was fond to read an essay before the Napier mission conference in the Franklin house one day recently, and when the moment arrived at which he was to begin, he rose and said:

"Brethren, before I say anything, I shall say something."

Then he explained the charges were politically subjected to listen to explanation with straight faces against evening news.

Inevitable Proof.

Gold bricks are frequent and uncertain, but when Senator Mark Hanna undertook to deal with Senator J. C. Beckitt, of Kentucky, he found it necessary to give a bond. Senator Beckitt is pretty well known in Kentucky, and the bond was given without hesitation. Senator Hanna, however, is a stranger in Kentucky, and he had to give a bond to show that he was what he claimed to be.

Fired at Trusts, His Industry.

Treat It in a Business Way.

There can be no doubt that many articles the duty upon which was properly regulated by the Dingley bill have now grown out of adjustment. The opponents of the tariff always take advantage of such inequalities and point out to the people the hardships they create. A list of exorbitant tariff schedules reason by a change of conditions is paraded before the people until an antitariff party comes into power. The result has always been disastrous, the people becoming dissatisfied and the Republicans regaining power. They adjust the tariff and bring about prosperity, which continues until conditions in the cost of production are again changed. Then comes the agitation, the fear and the ruin. The Democrats do not want ruin any more than the Republicans do, but it is very natural that they should call attention to the necessity of readjusting the tariff in order to have a political issue when opportunity gives occasion. It seems to us that the business sense of both parties ought to treat the tariff in a business way, and not use it to wreck the prosperity of the country.—Senator Stewart of Nevada.

Could Believe Some of Them.

An amusing story is told of a New England minister who often speaks in behalf of a certain society in which he is greatly interested. He has a fine voice and a graphic way of telling incidents both humorous and pathetic, so that his hearers are often moved to tears or to laughter.

At the close of one meeting, at which he had spoken with great effect, and a large sum for the charity had been the direct result, a little old lady approached the minister.

"Oh, she said, earnestly, "I've been so interested in hearing about these poor, dear children! And I suppose a great many of those stories you tell are really true, aren't they?"—Youth's Companion.

Gen. Stuart Made Impression.

At a meeting of the Gen. J. E. B. Stuart Monument association in Richmond, Va., the other day Maj. A. R. Venable recited the following lardon: "One act of Gen. Stuart's made a great impression upon me. When he was severely wounded by an Indian chief in one of the Western campaigns of 1857 we bandaged his wounds and started to put him to bed. Although suffering intensely, he refused to lie down until he had knelt at his bedside and prayed. It was such an unusual thing for the army officers in the West at that time to pray that Gen. Stuart's act made a lasting impression upon his associates."

Senator Pettus' Eyeglasses.

Senator Pettus of Alabama, who is in his 81st year, is wearing one of two pairs of eyeglasses he bought in 1862. He lost the other and shortly after he received them, and has thus for thirty years never been wearing the same glasses. They have worn out several gold frames and have, of course, been but a number of times. The senator says it is all "humbug" for people to change their glasses so often. There are few men in the Senate better read than Senator Pettus. Much of his reading has been done at night, and, as he says, he has almost lost sight though evidently they are of a kind when can stand abuse.

Why Texas Declined Offer.

Capt. Bob Rogers of Texas, who had a commission in Roosevelt's regiment of rough riders, has been visiting the president in Washington. Mr. Roosevelt wanted to know why Texas never had contributed to the regiment as Oklahoma and Arizona had contributed. "Why," said Rogers, "we didn't have no money to pay our fares to Washington."

Famous Fogs in England.

The lowest temperature recorded in London during the past forty years was in January, 1867, when the thermometer fell to 5.7, or nearly 26 degrees of cold, but this unfavorable record was almost equaled during the famous long frost of 1895, when for one whole day in February the mercury never rose above eight degrees. The coldest December was in 1879, the coldest February in 1895, and the coldest March in 1883. The warmest December occurred in 1868, the warmest January in 1916, the warmest February in 1903 and the warmest March in 1910.

In a Tight Fix.

Clarence Oldham, familiarly known to his countrymen in New York society as "Paddy the Pig," was locked up in the station house in the Tenderloin district a few days ago for some little indiscretion. His normal weight is 400 pounds, and he could barely squeeze through the door of the cell. Since then he has gained twenty pounds and neither a suit of labeas corpus nor a force and tackle can get him loosened. The old man, Capt. Walsh, is greatly perplexed by the situation, and is about ordering the services of a wrecking company to provide a way out.

Worse Than Bigamy.

Judge Charles Tuttle has filling him for the holiday season a remarkable female receiver from one in Goldsboro, says the New York Times. The other receiver he preserved: "Do you know that Commissioner-elect Bond Cannon, the famous sports, is going to be married?" "Bigamy!" exclaimed the court, with a sigh of regretfulness at regret."

Second Cousin Sarah

BY THE AUTHOR OF "ANNE JUDGE, SPINSTER," "LITTLE SAINT KIRBY," ETC., ETC.

CHAPTER XXVI. (Continued.)

This night Sarah should be laid down at her father's house, who had lodged with them at the beginning, and of whom she had formed a disagreeable acquaintance at Bridge Hill. Mrs. Bentham had written home to the same effect, and Mrs. Hodgson had written to the stepmother, who had immediately replied that Sarah was to be left in London, and that she would be ready to receive her home on her return, and to embrace her in a motherly manner.

"Do give a poor woman, and clung round her neck.

"Sarah, you know I can not. But, dear, I have promised to come with Thomas Eastfield, and I must keep to my word. Mr. Bentham and Mr. Hodgson are coming, and I must be ready to go with them."

"Oh! dear, dear! I can not part with you, dear! I have lost my little child, and you are all I have left. Do, Sarah, do! I will be good to you, and I will compose my mind to your marriage with Thomas Eastfield, if you will only promise to be with me."

"Hush! hush! Do not talk so, Mrs. Hodgson. Remember, I am not your child, and you must not call me so. Remember, I am your husband's daughter, and Mary, with strange eyes, looked at her.

PROTECTION'S UTILITY.

To Help Home Labor and Produce Treasury Revenues.

It appears very "ridiculous" to the Harbor Springs "to have an argument in favor of a protective tariff on the presumption that it protects prosperity." Has Harbor Springs no taxes for Illinois merchants? Is there no sentiment in Harbor Springs based on the presumption that the prosperity of the city is promoted by buying at home? Is the artisans and laborers of Harbor Springs satisfied that it is all the same to them whether they do the work of Harbor Springs or whether the orders are placed in Chicago or St. Louis?

Frequently even for the few cannot long continue without employment for the many in productive industry. It is safe to say that Harbor Springs people of the laboring class who are not working have good credit at the stores. If conditions are such as to inform traders the line of credit is expanded, and the loss of credit brings want, distress, business failures and panic. If things stop congealing follows, prices stop, money is locked up and the business of everybody is to make the worst of the situation.

The thing to do, if possible, is to keep the machinery going and the markets open. If there is plenty of work at a fair price prosperity is in the air. With opportunity to work abundant it is ridiculous to make arguments against prosperity. Now if labor can be well employed if left to pursue its skills and earn its livelihood there must be work to do and remunerative wages. The presumption is that Harbor Springs does not need to import labor for its steady jobs, and no more does the United States.

The protective policy is based on the presumption that it is wise to do as much of our own work as we can. Therefore in the business of raising revenue from imports the protective policy aims to give the advantage to home producers, to the end that our home labor may be prosperous. Protection promotes prosperity.—Sioux City Journal.

ARTIFICIAL RUBIES NOW MADE.

Process Turns Out Stones as Beautiful as the Real Ones.

The manufacture of artificial rubies which in appearance are as good as the natural stones, is now an accomplished fact. A demonstration of this achievement was given to the members of academy one science center day afternoon.

Some years ago artificial rubies were placed on the market, but a microscopical examination revealed the fact that the crystals were imperfect. The rubies manufactured by Mr. Verneuil, however, are of a superb red color, and of a purity and sparkle equal to the genuine article. The cost of producing these is not a heavy one, so that there is every reason to anticipate that the new discovery will lead to a sensible check on the price of the formerly precious stones.

The rubies are obtained by a new process, in which the blowpipe plays an important part, and the stones are both beautiful and of a goodly size. The specimen shown at the meeting of the academy was much admired by the savants.—London Leader.

RICHES DISCLOSED BY DOGS.

Two Instances In Which They Unearthed Much Wealth.

In the latest Australian mining news, says the London Daily Chronicle, there is an account of the discovery of a valuable golden reef in a curious fashion. A dog on walkies with his master, a farmer, chased and caught a kangaroo. In the struggle the ground gave way, and when the farmer arrived on the scene his eye detected some specimens of rich golden quartz. Further search revealed a rich reef, and the farmer's fortune was made. Land values increased by the dog's fight with the kangaroo. Thirty years ago a blind productive Australian gold field was discovered through a sheepdog getting caught in the nearest stone and throwing it at his dog. Returning food for evil, the dog brought the stone back to his master in its mouth. The man looking at it saw the glint of gold, closely studded with gold.

The Language of Diplomacy.

France is susceptible about the universality of French as the language of diplomacy. Shortly after 1870, Bismarck in the pride of conquest, wrote a dispatch to Russia in German, but Prince Gortschakoff consented in French and the peril was averted. It is now noted by the Gaulois that at the state banquet King Alfonso addressed the foreign envoys in Spanish. This thus the Duke of Cornelaqui expressed the "insurrection" by replying in English.

Ten Thousands of Lantern.

One of the contractors at work on the subway estimates that at least 4,000 lanterns are hung out in this city every night to prevent people from falling into the excavations. Lanterns are hung out every day in the streets at intervals along the strip where the subway is being built, and are attended by watchmen who work in three shifts. Those who come on in the afternoon fill and clean and light them, and set them from the mains on the fences that have been built along the holes in the streets. One watchman has a district, which he polices and washes as carefully as a gardener does his beat.—New York Times.

Not Entirely Complete.

An English genius has invented a metal box with compartments for pins, beans, thimble and grain, and, on top, room for shoes, and a cover for generally useful. All the farmer has to do is to sit on the cover and count 2 to 10. The farmer's wife will never forgive the inventor for letting the potatoes keep ahead of washing the dishes, cooking the meals, making the beds, sweeping, dusting and washing.

MARINE NEWS.

The engineers of the steamer Pine Lake are expected here this week to fit out.

Capt. A. H. Dahlmer leaves this week for Erie, Pa., to commie Lake Erie fishing with the tug John Smith, which wintered there.

The fishing tug Wheeler arrived here from Frankfort Wednesday, having very little difficulty in getting through the ice on this port.

The tug Golden went out through the floating ice and set nets near Beaver Island Monday. This looks as if navigation was practically open at this port.

Work of fitting out the steamer Beaver has been commenced, and Capt. Campbell will probably make his first trip to the island some time next week.

Capt. Finnegan of the Illinois has lost his mate. Mr. Alexander was notified Saturday that he had been appointed master of the steamer Mary, running between Michigan City and Chicago. The Mary is 150 feet long, and is a fine little steamer and is be a fast runner. Congratulations to Capt. Algie Alexander. Just who will take his place as chief mate of the Illinois Capt. Finnegan does not yet know.

John O. Nissen & Co. have completed arrangements to secure the services of Amos Hewenschlight, the jugglING and Contortionist, to run between Manistee, Ludington and Milwaukee. Alterations will be made in the boats for better passenger accommodation, and they will be ready to put on the run inside of a month. Consideration not named. The deal with the Pere Marquette for steamers 2 and 4 is off, the Pere Marquette people offered to sell, but has strings to their offer, which made the proposition objectionable, they desiring to control the boats while in the hands of the new owners.

Capt. Charles McGarte of the Lloyd grand president of the Licensed Tugmen's Protective Association, has sent out an order to all the members of the association requesting them not to report for duty until further notice in case a settlement has been made with the Great Lake Towing Company for the season. The order went out some two weeks ago, but it was not made known to outsiders until early this week, when some of the men at the different ports were asked to start to work fitting out their boats.

After a session lasting over two days the members of the executive committee of the Lake Carriers' Association came to an agreement with the Lake Seamen's Union and entered into a contract governing conditions of labor and wages which are to be in effect during the season of navigation of 1906. The seamen were granted an advance in wages over last year, deckhands will hereafter be known as seamen, firemen and lookouts will be given 25 cents an hour extra compensation for all work done loading or unloading in port during their watch below, and only union men are to be employed when they can be secured. The wage scale will be $45 beginning at the opening of navigation, until October 1, and after that date until the close $40 per month. Both sides claimed some several points in order to make the contract, which, after it was signed, both sides expressed the opinion that it was perfectly satisfactory and would be lived up to to the letter.

All the Services last Sunday were well attended—morning worship, Sunday School, Christian Endeavor, Bible Class and evening service.

The subject next Sunday morning will be "Casting Bread upon the Water," Ecclesiastes XI.1. This text has been subject of much and varied criticism and many views have been taken of it. These will be considered carefully and lessons drawn from the imagery of the text. In the V. P. S. C. E. bible class the books of Ezra and Nehemiah will be studied.

The sermon on Hannah's Pilgrimage will treat particularly of The Lord of the Hill and the Chamber of Peace. A number of views will be shown.

What is Life?

In the last analysis nobody knows, but we do know that it is under strict law. Abuse that law even slightly, pain results. CHAPTER XXVIII.

"I was the old portion—and the fifth a great deal too much for me. I had visions of argument cropping up either in Sarah Hutchins' or in Reuben Osborne's, or both, or even in Mary Hallock herself, which, I confess, I did not at all relish. Mary, however, was quite reasonable, and Sarah was wedded.

"The round dog-cart was ordered and, remote that weight upon her life that she was just the person which she had always thought she was when her time was not weighing on her, and which she had feared her she had lost—all—she felt no fear, even in those strange sensations of hers. Jemmings—but they were right—and I, for one, was glad of it. Jemmings will add to the happiness of Reuben Osborne's life, she would—and I hope to the happiness of Mary Hallock's, if she is the wife for him—she is a very different creature, and refused to stir my scone with hope or pleasure, or even curiosity.

"When they were in the York road Mrs. Hutchins said:

"She is not in good spirits, but she has been so ever since she found that we have been away.

"Yes," said Mary Hodson, "she was very low in spirits."

"The poor fellow, I am sure, will explain to herself."

"Mary" echoed Sarah Hutchins.

"They seem opposites into the front seat, the four first—and as I by the side of the young woman whom we have left behind, and for the last time, I hope, in my life, I thought, in which no second month's Devilrion will ever find her. Mary Hodson was in her box left with which I was—and I—I—I—

"ALWAYS A GRANGER"

The True Purpose of the Grange Should Be Made Known.

A few days ago, in conversation with the master of a grange we had just organized, says a writer in Farm and Fireside, he said, "Why, I've always been a grange, but didn't know it." What one pointed remark aptly answers the question so often asked by grange workers—why men and women whose sympathies are in full with ours do not unite with us. This man was progressive, anxious to secure for his family and friends the very best advantages possible, but felt powerless alone. In the grange he found others desired the same things he did and discovered the chain of sympathy that binds men together the world over.

Had I have explained the objects of the grange many times, "the scales would have fallen from his eyes." Instead I find myself indulging in stock phrases and stereotyped expressions that cover but little to my hearers. I just find the audition of the one pin seek to convince, and if the grange will add him also him so is being be will appreciable. The hearts of the best people on our farms are with us, did they but know the true meaning of the grange, and we owe it to them and to ourselves to secure their acquaintance. There are thousands of excellent men and women who have "always been grangers" who are out of the order because they have no accurate knowledge of what its true purposes are.

HON. E. B. NORRIS.

Master New York State Grange and Chairman National Executive Committee.

The chairman of the executive committee of the national grange and a member of the legislative committee of the same body must be a man of force and ability. Such a position is held by such a man in the person of E. B. Norris of Bedias, N. Y., who is also master of the New York state grange, a body representing 35,000 members.

Brother Norris was a charter member of Bedias grange, No. 73, having thus a connection with the Order of about thirty years. He was master of Bedias grange about fourteen years, also master of the old Wayne county colonel two years, was elected master of the New York state grange in 1898 and is now serving his third term. He is also chairman of the legislative committee of New York state grange and serves the third term as such. He was elected to the executive committee of the national grange in 1899 and to the chairmanship a year later. For three years past he has been on the national grange legislative committee. He is always found advocating the advancement of the order of Patrons of Husbandry and the enlargement of the accredited class to a higher conception of their calling and a larger sphere of usefulness, which represents utilities as American citizens.

ORIGIN OF THE GRANGE.

Some Historical Facts Concerning the Organization of the Order.

From the Michigan Patron we take the following historical facts relating to the institution of the order of Patrons of Husbandry:

The first grange was organized in Washington county, Pa., on the day of January, 1867, by a committee of which William M. Ireland was chairman.

The first grange in Michigan was granted at Hartsburg, Pa., on the day of April, 1868, but the first organization of a state grange in whom a charter was issued was Pomona grange, No. 1, of N. Y., on the day of April, 1868.

The first state grange, that of Minnesota, was formed on the day of January, 1869. The same year three granges were formed in the state, making the total number of granges in Minnesota for that year and the following year, two hundred.

The first meeting of a national grange as a congress body was held on the day of January, 1870, at which time with six of the members of the Order who had taken the degrees in the three lower stages, for the purpose of the creation of state granges, but the remaining members of state granges had the remainder of the degrees conferred.

At the last session of the national grange twenty-seven state granges were represented by regularly appointed delegates, and the total membership is now about 800,000.

What the Grange Stands For.

The grange is the strongest and most enduring farmers' society in this country. If not in the world. Other farm organizations have sprung up, and died behind for a time, only to wither or die. After a brief career in each case the growth of the grange goes on, and it becomes stronger and more firmly rooted in the affections of the farmers. It is making a good work in fact as it is for any other business. Our farmers in the old days being business on common principles will only use result could follow.

The Subordinate Grange.

The subordinate grange is the place where farmers come together to meet, among hundreds of thousands of the men and women of the farm, on a common body and to solved obligation to put hands every effort to raise the standard of intelligence among the farmers of the country and secure a fair distribution of the burdens of government as was one of the fruits of our labor.—O. Dullard.

Co-operation in New Jersey.

The Patrons of New Jersey operate warehouses as follows: Bushels of fertilizer, 20,000; potatoes, 40,000; apples, 25,000; grain, 40,000; coal, 55,000; in all for one grange. There are many other branches doing as much more, business from that state.

GRANGE FIRE INSURANCE.

Some Statistics Relative to This Feature of Grange Work.

While there are financial benefits accruing to members of the grange, these are not set forth as inducements to secure membership. However, some facts concerning grange fire insurance are worthy of consideration. In Michigan thirty counties of the state are organized under county and district plans and also a company covering all territory not otherwise organized. The aggregate value of farm properties carried by these companies is about $18,000,000. The average annual cost of insurance upon each $1,000 is not far from $1. Pennsylvania has eight grange mutual fire insurance companies carrying risks amounting over $10,000,000. Some of these companies have been doing business more than a quarter of a century. The aggregate cost has been about one half of what the same class of risks cost in other companies in States with almost $100,000,000 in risks, the fire losses of 1902 in the Andersonville Patrons' company amounted to only $9,000, and the average assessment on $1,000 for seven years, ending June 30, 1902, was only $2. The Harford County (Md.) Patrons' insurance company carries $1,574,328 at an average cost per year for twenty-six years of $2.00 per $1,000.

In New York state the risks carried by grange insurance companies is, for 1901, last report published, $58,225,000. Losses were $108,000, or $1.90 per $1,000, and expenses, $24,000, or 40 cents per $1,000. Cost of insurance per $1,000 was $2.20. There were twenty-three companies reporting. In the Jefferson and Lewis county Patrons Fire Relief association New York state risks amount to $10,000,000, and with losses for the past month above the average the cost of insurance was only $1.81 on each $1,000. In Herkimer county the grange insurance is force Jan. 1, 1903 was $2,000,000. In Steuben and Livingston counties association policies in force Jan. 1 amounted to $2,750,000 and cost to the insured for three years cost less than only 50c cents per $1,000. The Chautauqua and Jamestown association carries $3,145,000 in risks, of which amount $1,000,000 was written in 1902, and the total cost to the insured for the year was $1.84 per $1,000, or about 46 cents per year per $1,000. The Cattaraugus county association carries $20,000,000 insurance in 1902 and less over $1,000,000 in force.

The 19th Grangers' Mutual Insurance company has been in operation twenty-three years. There are now 3,296 policies in force, the amount of the insurance being $5,000,000. There have been twenty-one assessments for 180 losses during the twenty-three years, and the average cost of insurance per year has been $1.43 per $1,000.

In Massachusetts the grange company carries $87,000 insurance in 1902, and total risks are $720,000. Receipts for premiums were $2,220, while the losses were only $130. This is a commendable showing for while good fortune has certainly attended the company it is also evidence of careful selected risks.

Illinois has one of the chief reasons for the excellent showing made by grange insurance companies—care in selection of risks, then economy of administration and careful supervision.

GRANGE CONFERENCES.

Michigan Taking the Lead in a Most Valuable Line of Work.

Michigan state grange, under the careful direction of its worthy master, George B. Horton, is stepping into the front rank as an efficient farmers' organization. Most new granges were organized in that state last year than in any other. It has made grange halls the rendezvous of the farmers' class of vast importance to the farmers in matters of legislation, and has helped little as American citizens.

ORGANIZING A GRANGE.

Look Well to the Charter Membership Roll.

Hon. Aaron Jones, master of the national grange, writes wisely when he says:

Care should be used in getting good charter members. They are the foundation of the grange. Without them the grange will rest. With good representative the grange will grow in number, in influence and in influence and in great benefit to the Order at large and of great advantage to the community. Let us go on organizing a grange of the best material in the locality, and see that it is found to be organized for and organize a grange at all.

Every grange deputy should consult with the master of the grange, and be guided. This rule carefully observed would save trouble later on. Lay work your foundations in establishing a grange. Your best citizens are those to good. Organize well or not at all.

Men and women and women can be kept out after the organization is formed, but it is often a difficult matter to prevent their joining as charter members. The last at this point. The deputy's responsibility just here is great, but he should meet it unflinchingly.

EMPIRE STATE PATRONS.

The Grange a Growing Power in New York.

The yearly meeting of the New York state grange in Syracuse made a very pleasant and impressive revelation of the growth of the Patrons of Husbandry in the Empire State. The reports generally showed the Order to be a growing power in the state. It is not easy to understand why farmers in all the states do not realize the value of the grange to the prosperous and profitable of the interests of farmers, but it is reassuring to note that intelligent farmers are coming into the Order in greater numbers than ever before. The "community Club" idea in a grange is always a community in which intelligent farmers, in which refined society rules, in which education is valued, in which scientific agriculture is the rule and in which the real talk are seen at their best. New York leads most of the states in advanced county life, and it is proper that the grange should be a conspicuous factor of social life in the state. Members of the Order everywhere will be pleased to note the growth of the grange in New York.—New York Farmer.

"Watch the Plates."

Carriage is the "Marvel of Customers" since up the conditions of success for the farmer as well as the business man. He says: "The man who fails in the man who achieves his capital, which means that he has also mastered his brains. He has investments in this, that and the other thing. Don't put all your eggs in one basket is all wrong. I tell you, put all your eggs in one basket and then watch the basket."

There is great educational benefit in pondering the degrees well.

GRANGE PRINCIPLES.

Dignity of Labor, Fair Dealing and Good Citizenship.

We have nowhere seen a better presentation of the principles and purposes of the grange than the following in the American Agriculturist by Mr. J. A. Herr:

The character of the grange membership and their faith in the Order are such as to warrant prediction in the creation. The effect of united grange effort is sure to be felt in the future in the direction of the interest of the farmer. Along all lines of work. The dairyman, the fruit grower, the horticulturist, the poultryman have all been benefited through the influence of the grange, greater dignity of occupation is manifest, better relations between the farmer, merchants and other business and professional institutions of today. Butterfly among farmers has been done, and a fair basis for doing business is encouraged. Fair dealing is the rule.

The grange organization stands entirely for good citizenship. It is a school for farmer boys and girls in all courses, civic, social, throughout, practical citizenship, charity and sympathy are factor. Can there be nobler principles than these?

The grange encourages closeness, advocates self denial, teaches us that only the right is expedient, and that only the right is right. It exists to build up a class of citizens, refinement and social standing. Social standing are serious points with the rank. Its teachings are of the purest and highest character, like that of family refinement and intellectually. If the grange is what it claims to be, its principles and precepts of the Order are not fulfilled.

The benefit of a quick active working grange are evidenced by an increased interest in the farm, an increased degree of social culture and enjoyment, an advance along the line of intellectual culture, a better appreciation of the dignity of farmer. Grange Order appeals to all men interested in agriculture, in all its varied branches, in all its relations and consequences, and is advancing its objects as well as to attain its benefits.

FLIMSY SHED COLLAPSES AND TWO PERSONS ARE KILLED.

Many Persons, Watching Big Fire in Westfield, Failed to Insure Safety and Are Hurt in Crash that Follows. Part of Prohibition Law Knocked Out.

The Berkshire and Ontario Navigation Company's steamer steamer Montreal, in course of construction, was burned to the water's edge at Montreal. A huge crowd was attracted by the flames and several hundred persons found their way on the roof of an Allan line shed, which, despite its stout the weight collapsed and people going down on a crash in the shed. LOSS TITLE TO BIG TRACTS.

Holders of Kentucky Lands Affected by Federal Court Ruling.

Judge Jackson, in the United States court, Frankfort, rendered a decision in the case of Lockard vs. The Adkins Lumber Company of Duke county, that involves the human interest ranging as far back as 1870 in the Big Sandy Harlan County. Judge Jackson holds that the statute of limitations in Kentucky provides three years for a larger time than ten years. The ruling is in effect and invalidates the Lockard patents, which are owned by the company. The decision is extensive and affects not one patent, but hundreds, 200 cases heard since 1902. It will have a sweeping effect in causing the adjustment where extensive patents are held by many companies in the mountains from the 1862 statute. The Northern court of appeals will be asked to reverse the ruling. The plaintiffs reside in Indianapolis.

BLOW TO A PROHIBITION LAW.

The clause is question made place where liquor is made or sold a common nuisance. The decision was by the unanimous Kansas City, Kan., "joint" lawyers, who twice argued the injunction and unanimously in the State.

Crying for Failure to Hangout.

While the Alaska Yukon Pacific was entained in the hanging of Homer Bird of Nome, his divorced wife, Ethel, daughter, Bessie, and three other children and their mother, Mrs. Bird, were praying that some unfortunate jockey might save the mother from the ignominy of being branded the common over and would save the children from the shame that her husband might be spared, a prominent Nome lawyer.

Two of them were injured, one of them, a child, was thrown to the floor. The child was thrown from a chair on the floor, and escaped with a shifting cupboard covering the longest one slip down. The house is the W. Owen Wood claim, but there is not close to the Carnegie home. The alarm was sounded in a rapid speed, jumped the track and crashed through the side of the house. Only although the kitchen and dining room were wrecked the parlor, the kitchen, and two of six sleeping rooms were left in the house, and Mrs. Owen, who had lifted her 18-month-old baby from the chair in the kitchen and was just entering the parlor when the car came bounding in. The force of the concussion was so great that Mrs. Carnegie was knocked down, but escaped injury. Mrs. Owen gained her children and he wife and rushed out of the front door. The house is a total wreck.

COSTLY FIRE IN LA CROSSE.

Wisconsin City Suffers Loss Exceeding $50,000.

Fire which started in a barn at Onalaska, Wis., a suburb of La Crosse, Wis., in which three men were returning from church, wiped out a large portion of the business section of La Crosse, Wis., in which three men were returning from church, which entailed damage upward of $50,000. For a time the entire business section of La Crosse was threatened with destruction. The fire engine of the city was called out and the work of the entire fire department was directed to the protection of the Gilman Lumber Company, consisting thousand of dollars' worth of lumber, and the stock of Stevens & Hulling, dealers, was totally destroyed. The Gilman lumber retained its big

WHAT CONGRESS DID.

WORK OF THE FIFTY-SEVENTH BODY OF LAWMAKERS

What Has Been Accomplished in the Way of Legislation—Opinions Differ as to Most Important Acts Since Consider Body Too Conservative.

Washington correspondence:

NOT that the Fifty-seventh Congress is a thing of the past, it takes on a glamour of perspective that it could not have had when it was a hard-working, live, active, overworked bunch in session. It is regarded by the majority of people as being in quite a conservative and salutary.

Uncle Joe Cannon, the most important figure in the Fifty-seventh Congress, the man around whom the legislation hinged, is the first place. As far as structural measures are concerned, Speaker Cannon has matched. First came the bird trust legislation, then the bearing measure, forced sharp public opinion, and then the interstate commerce bill, which, against the trusts, came the civil strife, which, perhaps, more than anything else called attention to the vast power of the big corporations.

Congress Asks.

Congress asks for the free importation of lumber and lumber was not established, and a bill was passed providing for a tariff of publicity on the business of the trusts. Congress also asks on the making public of the business of the corporations.

Legal authorities have held that Speaker Cannon has done did so on the ground that it was the wish of the Fifty-seventh Congress from a majority of the House. Speaker Cannon was called upon, jumped the rock and crashed through the side of the house. Only although the kitchen and dining room were wrecked the parlor, the kitchen, and two of six sleeping rooms were left in the house, and Mrs. Owen, who had lifted her 18-month-old baby from the chair in the kitchen and was just entering the parlor when the car came bounding in. The force of the concussion was so great that Mrs. Carnegie was knocked down, but escaped injury. Mrs. Owen gained her children and he wife and rushed out of the front door. DAVID B. HENDERSON.

his instructions, came into the hall with his arm around Mr. Dalzell. Just as Speaker Henderson, whose long service in Congress was soon to end, ascended the rostrum, the Speaker was calling for the yeas and nays on the Pearson resolution. Speaker Henderson, with his arm around his friend, gave the decision.

As the roll call was concluded a remarkable scene occurred. Speaker Henderson pitched the gavel to Mr. Cannon, who accepted it and pitched it back to Mr. Henderson. As the latter took the chair the members broke into a prolonged cheer. As the cheering ceased, it was quite as much a compliment to Speaker Henderson as to Speaker Cannon. The Speaker retired to his seat and the roll was called.

Amid intense silence Mr. Payne, the leader of the majority, rose and read the following resolution of thanks to the retiring Speaker:

"Resolved, That the thanks of this House are presented to Hon. David B. Henderson, Speaker of the House of Representatives, for the able, impartial and dignified manner in which he presided over the House and for the performed the arduous and important duties of the chair during the present term of Congress."

MARINE NEWS.

The steamers Crescent and Cummings will be fitted out next week.

The Beaver will probably make her first trip to the Island Monday next.

Chas. Noyes goes as chief engineer of the steamer Alice M. Gill again this season.

Local Inspector Hunter & Hooker were here today and inspected the tug Violet.

J. P. Partridge, will go as chief mate in the Steamer Mary, with Capt. Alexander.

Wm. Graff has gone to Dunkirk, N. Y. to resume his position as engineer of the tug John Smith.

Last week the Holmes sold the schooner Maine to Eastern parties who will remain in the Lake Ontario trade.

Captain Webb, of the steamer Columbia and Capt. Johnson, of the Crescent, have been here a week fitting out the Columbia.

John Martin, brother of the lighter Island Martins, and formerly captain of a Hart boat, will go as chief mate of the Illinois this season.

The schooner Luling is still at Detroit with her last fall cargo of coal aboard. There is a probability that the Luling will be sold this spring.

The steamers Oyster and Gordon are being fitted out as this port. At present weather conditions continue up hill navigation will open next week.

Capt. Geo. Weaver left Monday for Manitowoc to fit out the steamer Welcome. Mike Green went as chief engineer Joe. Hyland as second, and Art Eagleton as wheelsman.

The ice left this shore Tuesday night and none is in sight at this writing. The ice in Pine Lake is still intact, but the rains of the past few days has vastly weakened it. From present indications it cannot last a week long.

The fish tug Minnie Warren, out after nets, was unable to get into port on account of ice Sunday, Monday and Tuesday. Coal was taken to her from the south point by pound boats. She arrived in Wednesday morning.

The John Spry, Wm. H. White & Cole steamer will have a new master this season. During the winter, at Manitowoc the Spry has been bonded, increasing her carrying capacity one-third. An electric light plant is also being installed.

The big passenger steamers Northwest and Northland will open the season about June 14th. One of the boats will trade to Duluth and will stop at the Soo, Marquette and Hancock. The other steamer will be placed on the Chicago route, stopping at Mackinaw.

Capt. Thompson, of the Rhoades, is prepared to install a brand new boiler, as soon as received from Detroit, and will otherwise equip his boat to hold his own in the race for patronage this summer. He informs us there is talk of another boat on his route this summer, but that it will take in Petoskey as well as Charlevoix in its trips.

The Traverse Bay Line people are talking seriously of running the Cummings from Northport to Boyne City this season. Heretofore the Northern terminus has been Traverse, but the "dummy" competition makes the steamboat run unprofitable from this port. Capt. Webb will go to Boyne City next week to arrange for docking facilities, etc. Should the scheme work, they will make Boyne City an excursion point during the summer months.

NEW SUPERINTENDENT

Prof. Frank W. Howe, of Manistique Elected to the School Superintendency.

At a meeting of the school board last Friday evening, Frank W. Howe, A.B., superintendent of the Manistique schools, was elected to the position of superintendent of the Charlevoix schools for the next school year.

Considering the fact that the board had over 100 applications for the position, the selection of Prof. Howe is a decided compliment to him. The board's decision was the result of an established reputation as an educator, fortified by a large number of testimonials, including one from President Snyder, of the Agricultural College, and Prof. A. H. Pattengill, of the U. of M. faculty, who is well known in Charlevoix.

Prof. Howe is a classical graduate of the University of Michigan, and is the possessor of a life certificate. He previously graduated in a college scientific course. He was president of Healdsburg College, in California for three years, and has had three years experience in school journalism. He lectured in summer institutes for three years in Minnesota, and represented public school work in 1896 as president of the Texas State Teachers' Association.

Prof. Howe's class records are greatly being used in the Charlevoix schools, and his "Multisyllabic Manual" in the Lyceum.

Prof. Howe is the author of three educational works—"Blackboard Participantry Usage," "Self-Averaging Class Register," and "A straight Line Diagrammatic System."

He comes highly recommended by all who have had dealings with him, and will be a valuable acquisition to our city. We predict a bright future for our new superintendent.

—H. F. Foley arrived in town Saturday, and has set things in motion up at the Belvedere, in the way of getting ready for summer.

—Rev. Jas. Hyslop, of the Congregational church finishes the third year of his pastorate here next Sabbath. It is not necessary for us to say that he has done good work here, for every one knows it. People of all denominations, and people of no denomination, respect Dr. Hyslop, and that he is "solid" with his own people goes without saying. Here's hoping that when his hair is whitened by the frosts of many winters, he will yet be in Charlevoix.

The Paving Problem.

Hardisonville as it seems, and as it undoubtedly will be, following sewer experiments; the council is facing a problem, in the Hardisonville matter, that will probably be solved by the building of brick pavement. This right-hander, following, as it does a good swift left punch, shortens the wind of property holders on the street. Pavement and sewerage, both at once is not unlike the advent of a pair of twins in the house—expensive, but interesting.

The street last fall was fairly good, and would have answered for several years. But the sewerage problem arose, and it was decided that and properly solved by the council. No one will deny that sewer construction could not longer be deferred. The work was well done, but the excavations have left the street in horrible condition, either wet or dry.

And in deciding the question, the council is up against the adoption, of one of two plans—permanent paving, which will cost $10,000 or $15,000, or leveling up the street and leaving it for an indefinite period. This thing the council is settled upon—and the public is of the same mind

—It will be a waste of money to continue the use of dirt in the improvement, of the street.

Therefore, the matter of "long run" economy is what will govern the council in this action. The sewer assessments run through a period of five years. The council hopes to double that period in pavement assessments, through the aid of a legislative enabling act, which Mr. Paddock will introduce through one of the "skeleton" bills. If this can be accomplished it will act as bad as it seems now.

But this consolation we have: Once the street is paved, it is an end of expense, for street repair so far as our business avenue is concerned, and we will enjoy it as well as we would a fine new house, after having borrowed money to build it.

We may safely trust the council in the matter. It will do what is best, and ten years hence, if paving goes, we shall be glad it was done so. Then.

MARINE NEWS.

Jos. Prevost is the new engineer of the steamer Pine Lake.

H. J. Gerlica has shipped as mate of the steamboarge Welcome.

The tugs Wheeler and Taylor will do harbor towing this season.

Capt. John Gemmt will, on April 4th, launch his new naphtha fishing boat. She will be 40 feet in length, and 10 feet beam.

The steamer Beaver made her first trip to the Island Wednesday, with a good load and passenger list and a fine haul of mail.

The U. S. local inspectors at Chicago having been discharged, there is a great bustle among the Chicago captains and engineers to get the jobs. Among the aspirants for the inspectorship of Chicago is Capt. M. L. Edwards, well known here.

Down at Cadillac they have a good Marine reporter. In speaking of a new boat now being built for that lake he says "She will be thirty-five feet long and will be equipped with an eight foot beam. An eight foot beam is a good thing to have aboard.

Milwaukee Wisconsin: The steamer John Spry of the W. H. White Lumber Company of Boyne City, Mich., has had her name changed to the "Boyne Woolsey," in honor of one of the members of the company. The government dredge, special issues of more than one word, but made no objection to the change. The steamer has been given large repairs at this port this winter and will next take a cargo of the company's lumber to Chicago and then expects that the tug will be out of the way so that the second cargo can be loaded for Tonawanda, the company's place of business being located there.

A rate of $2.50 has been made on hardwood lumber to Buffalo and Tonawanda. We the Free rate has not been long, although it will no doubt be $2 from Lake Michigan.

CHAPTER I.

It was in the evening of a lovely spring day, and a beautiful girl was entering Hanover square from swallow-of the large palace of Sir Ferdinand Fitz Vaughan. A lovely garden behind with its sweet-scented, its graceful shrubs and fragrances, its green paths, its marble fountains, its quiet nooks, its cool, fresh, fairy-like grottoes, which, in the first moment of the enchanted spectator, seemed to be the magic work of some fairy queen of the Vaughan family, or some Titania, or Oberon, or Puck, or Ariel, or, in fact, anything but the work of human hands. However, I digress, and I will not attempt to describe the garden, which, in the opinion of my friends, I have described to death. Suffice it to say that the garden was very beautiful, and that the lovely girl who was entering it was in keeping with it, and that the combination was one that would well repay any person who was fond of the beautiful.

The young girl was a tall, slender, graceful girl, with a face and figure that would attract attention anywhere, and which would be remembered by those who once looked upon it. Her face was not, strictly speaking, a beautiful one, but it was a very lovely one, and it was one that would be remembered by those who looked upon it. Her hair was a rich, dark brown, and her eyes were of a deep violet, and very, very, very, beautiful eyes they were.

The young girl was alone, and she was in a very pensive mood, and she was thinking of a very, very, sad, sad, sad, thing, and, as she walked slowly through the garden, and, at last, seated herself on a marble bench, and, with her face turned toward the setting sun, she thought and thought, and, as she thought, the tears gathered in her eyes, and, at last, two of them, the saddest, sadest, tears that ever fell from human eyes, rolled down her cheeks.

Not a tear had ever relieved herself from the intense anguish, and kept coming in the intense agony, and, at last, she leaned her head on a single round rose tree, and, as the tears fell, one after another, on which, she can attach no real cause, she sobbed, as if her heart would break, and, at last, she fell into a sweet sleep, and, as she slept, a gentleman came through the garden, and, as he saw the sleeping girl, he paused, and, as he saw the tears on her face, he said, "Poor child, what can be the matter?" and, as he said it, he took a rose from the tree, and, as he did so, the sleeper awoke, and, as she saw the gentleman, she thought, at first, that it was her father, and, as she thought that, she said, "Papa, I—" but, as she saw that it was not her father, she stopped, and, as she looked at the gentleman, she said, "Sir, I—I—I—

SOME COMPARISONS

AMERICAN PROSPERITY AND EUROPEAN HARD TIMES.

Industrial Conditions at Home and Abroad Good Proof That Our People Made No Mistake When They Voted for Republicanism and Prosperity.

Advices from abroad show a sad state of affairs in the countries that are the principal commercial competitors of the United States. While this country brought up a successful conclusion its war with Spain there was a notable expansion of industrial and commercial activity such as was witnessed in Germany after her successful war with France in 1870, and such as usually follows a victorious military campaign. But in Great Britain, notwithstanding that the result of her conflict in South Africa was the venomed word of the Boers, there is no sign of a revival of prosperity in trade. The number of persons unable to obtain work within the limits of the kingdom is contemporary computed at half a million, and the report comes from London that it has been found necessary to place police guards at the gates of the dock yards to prevent violence among the crowds assembling there to struggle for the chance of getting a day's wages. The London County Council is considering plans for relieving the unemployed distress, and newspapers have started subscription lists for the same purpose. There are hard times in England.

Germany is faring even worse. What is the condition of the German masses is a matter of conjecture, but it is so powerful that the leading journalistic organ of the movement is publishing the Emperor' Socialism to Germany, as was Napoleon III. to the United States, is largely a product of the desperation induced by hard times. It is not long since Germany responded to the cracks of toppling thrones, but she has gone through financial throes almost equal to those which shook the United States in 1892. She is now in a political and economic crisis not far different from that which in this country led to the nomination of Bryan for the presidency in 1896.

During the recent political campaign in the United States Democratic newspapers and orators blatantly asserted that American prosperity was not the result of American tariff policies, but is a thing that came of itself. Business in this country was prosperous, they said, because business everywhere was prosperous. The same cavalier assertion was made by Democrats who were embroiled at Washington that the panic and the depression which followed the panic were caused not by Democratic folly, but by wide-spread natural laws affecting business in general, though at the very time when Coxey's army and Kelly's army of unemployed men were rampaging in Ohio and Iowa, factories in Great Britain and Germany were advertising for help.

The fact is that the Republican legislation enacted under the administration of President McKinley produced conditions which opened avenues to employment for all the men in the United States willing to work. The fact is that the American protective tariff is doing for us what it has been expected to do—keeping American workingmen at work at good wages, at a time when workingmen in competing countries are walking the streets looking for jobs. The fact is that Democratic free trade newspapers are blind leaders, who would mislead the American people to their ruining.

Happily the American people are intelligent and cannot be easily misled. The contrast between industrial conditions abroad and industrial conditions here is a demonstration that when the American people vote for a Republican Congress they made no mistake.—Milwaukee Wisconsin.

THE BURGLAR AND THE DOG.

Lay of Montclair and a Doctor's Well Guarded Office.

O, the building's in the rear and the burglar is the hall; as the burglar spies the doctor's tools the building rings and rings.

O, the burglar relpts the instruments and the building's in his fist, and the burglar feels the building's fresh soap in his tousled mat.

O, the building's at the "parts," and boy get a rare good grip and the burglar swears beneath his breath as he feels the pneumat rip.

O, the burglar pulls like stir, but the building stands his ground till the burglar's nitros trousers and come off with an awful sound.

O, the burglar's over the fence, and the building's at the door, but the doctor's finest instruments are gone forevermore.

O, the building's "lost" Montclair's, and they will live at Montclair, but he knows what the burglar is that bit his "parts" that night.—New York World.

Hairs of the Human Head.

A scientist with a vast amount of patience has counted the hairs of the human head in last, not content with counting one head of hair, he undertook several. The results of his investigations are curious. Blondes, for instance, have the greatest number and those with red hair the smallest. In no case is there much variation between some when the color is the same. Black-haired people have 140,000 hairs, and 16,000 have brunettes a couple only about 109,000 hairs, and blond people do not have much more than 100,000. The unique result of the investigation was that red hair is coarser than other shades, but it has the advantage of lasting longer.

For Seeing Under the Sea.

Signor Pino, an Italian engineer, has invented an apparatus called a hydrospec, which he claims, enables a person to see the bottom of the sea at a depth of 250 to 300 yards with a range of twelve several thousand square yards. The inventor asserts that the equipment is adapted to be used on land and will enable the captain to see passenger trains and roofs from the kaiser's decks. The value of the apparatus if the claim is well based, can very readily be understood.

TARIFFS AND PRICES

ARE MEAT AND FUEL AFFECTED BY IMPORT DUTIES?

Insufficient Supply Being Responsible for the Heavy Advance, the Repeal of Tariff on Meat and Coal Would Not Reduce Current Prices.

A tariff measure most vigilantly in the House of Representatives, it must be reported by the Committee on Ways and Means, in order to be considered. It must have the support of the Speaker. The Speaker is against the taxing of the tariff, the Ways and Means Committee is against it, the House of Representatives is against it. Any one of the three can veto it, single, and the three are not stronger than any one alone. Why are they against tinkering the tariff? Because a bill to reduce the duty on some one item, although fairly carried the House in an commendable form, becomes subject to been amendments in the Senate and remakes the whole question of the tariff, from the beginning and down to the last article on the free list. No member of the majority party in Congress desires that.

A discussion of the tariff by the Senate usually occupies from two to three months on the debate would be not only most tedious but futile. In this manner history nothing is impossible, but there are few political parties who would care to run the risk of unnecessarily as a result of new wrangle on the phase of the tariff question during the second session of the Fifty-seventh Congress.

And why should the question of the wool and hide duties be raised? The Farmers' Bulletin said that these duties raised meat prices. Dressed beef is at the highest figure, and the cheapest cut is the rump, which is now sold at 12 cents per pound, and the cheapest cut of pork, the ham, is now 12 cents per pound. The price of beef is not less than it was a year ago, and the price of pork is 2 cents per pound higher than it was a year ago. The price of mutton is 2 cents per pound higher than it was a year ago. The price of poultry is 2 cents per pound higher than it was a year ago. The price of eggs is 2 cents per dozen higher than it was a year ago. The price of copper is 2 cents per pound higher than it was a year ago. The price of lead is 2 cents per pound higher than it was a year ago. The price of zinc is 2 cents per pound higher than it was a year ago. The price of tin is 2 cents per pound higher than it was a year ago. TARIFF LEAGUES

Report for 1902 Shows a Year of Exceptionally Effective Work.

The eighteenth annual meeting of the American Protective Tariff League was held Jan. 15, 1903, at the league headquarters, No. 135 West Twenty-ninth street.

The annual report and general operations of the Tariff league for the year just closed were embraced in the annual report of the treasurer and general secretary, Mr. W. P. Wakeman. The annual report showed that for the year ending Jan. 15, 1903, the receipts were $20,588.91, leaving a cash balance on hand of $2,083.35, as compared with the previous year—namely, 1901—when the receipts were $21,259.29, and the disbursements were $22,612.65. It was recommended that the minimum contribution for the year 1903 be placed at $50 for members and contributors.

The election of general officers and executive committee to serve one year resulted as follows:

Charles A. Moore, president.

Augustus B. Fuller, first vice president.

Joseph E. Thropp, second vice president.

Wilbur J. Wakeman, treasurer and general secretary.

Executive committee—William Barbour, chairman, New Jersey; Frank W. Cheney, Connecticut; Franklin Murphy, New Jersey; David L. Einstein, New York; W. P. Draper, Massachusetts.

On the question of tariff reciprocity the following resolution was unanimously adopted:

"Resolved, That reciprocity in commodities products by treaty is unsound in principle, pernicious in practice and condemned by all experience. It is contrary alike to the principle of protection, to the fair treatment of domestic producers, and to friendly relations with foreign countries. It is neither ethical nor economic, since it seeks to benefit some industries by the sacrifice of others, which is the essence of injustice. As at present advocated, reciprocity is a policy of favoritism. It would tend to arrange industry against industry and section against section at home and foreign industrial retaliation and political antagonism abroad. Such a policy would give the door to the greatest favoritism in legislation, intensify the growth of a corrupting lobby and increase the power of changing tariffs. Such a policy has no justification in economics, statesmanship, ethics or good politics. True American policy is protection of all the opportunities and industries of the American market for American enterprises and fair and equal treatment for all other countries—namely, the equal right to compete for American business in the American market by the payment of the full equivalent of American wages. This alone is honest protection, good Republicanism, and the true American policy."

Regarding the above resolution Mr. Andrew Carnegie said:

"I think the resolution is admirable. We will make several converts for every one we lose. The policy of the fathers is the true Republican policy. The friend of all nations—the only one, equal justice to all, favoritism to none."

ALMOST KNOCKED OUT TILLMAN.

South Carolina Senator Badly Staggered for a Moment.

Senator Tillman was once sent by the Democratic Congressional Committee out to Kentucky to stump for the tickets. The first speech he made there up to a certain point was a great success. He spoke of the necessity of electing Democratic men to Congress, "such as the Democracy of this district has chosen to represent the people at Washington." Just at this moment some one in the crowd interrupted with: "Would Mr. Clabberly sell out?" What's that?" asked Tillman, somewhat tired at our break in his train of thought. "Would Mr. Clabberly sell out?" repeated the questioner. "And who the blazes is Mr. Clabberly?" asked Tillman. "He's the man you're asking us to vote for!" came the prompt response. The Senator was stunned, and could only blurt out, "I never heard of him before."

MEXICAN PROGRESS.

What American Railroad Building Has Done for Our Sister Republic.

Nearly all daily newspapers have printed a Washington dispatch giving with some other figures the following table showing the commerce of the United States with Mexico at decennial periods from 1850 to 1900, also for the fiscal year 1902:

Years	Imports from Mexico.	Exports to Mexico.
1850	$370,236	$2,011,837
1860	1,302,421	5,254,212
1870	2,716,665	5,839,700
1880	7,399,782	7,556,423
1890	22,020,915	12,595,297
1900	27,618,068	24,972,961
1902	40,282,596	29,872,696

It is commerced building railroads in Mexico in 1880. Before that the stagnant back on both the Gulf and Pacific coasts were built in the United States and owned by a citizen or citizens thereof. But when we commenced railroad building from one to the larger part of the Mexican trade finished when having about 10 per cent more than we. Now we have doubtedly more than half of Mexico's trade, the jump in our trade with Mexico between 1890 and 1900 was due in part to our having better means of communication in our own hands, and in part to the reduction in the cost of transportation, leaving the Mexican more money with which to buy goods.

It is proposed by that class of our economists and statesmen that set their names the need in print that we should build no railroads in the Philippines for fear "some American would get rich" and head over our carrying trade to and abroad those islands to our German and English cousins who may look they are willing to give to either the inhabitants of the United States or to the Filipino or Chinese cheap labor and labor education.

To Die of Paralysis Like Father.

Helpless Invalid For Three Years.

Dr. Miles' Nervine Made My Nerves Strong.

"For many years I suffered from terrible headaches and pains at the base of the brain, and finally got so bad that I was nervous with excessive prostration. I had frequent dizzy spells and was so weak and nervous that I could take but little exercise, and I was fearful that I should go as my father died, a helpless invalid for three years, when I heard of Miles' Restorative Nervine and began using it. That winter I felt better than I had for years in every way, and this year I feel good by Miles' Restorative Nervine. My appetite is good and my nerves are good, and I owe my life to Dr. Miles' Nervine.—Mrs. Mary Mayo, Minneapolis, Minn.

"For more than a year I had nervous prostration and had to give up my work. My nerves were so weak that I could not lay for sleeping and medicine. I was sent to Chicago and treated by specialists but received no benefit. I read the testimonials of Dr. Miles' Nervine and thought I was surprised that it helped me so quickly, and great was my joy to find that I could sleep soundly. Why, I had been convinced my nerves were so weak that I could not sleep.—Mrs. Mary Mayo, Minneapolis, Minn.

The Progress of Japan.

There are in Japan twenty-eight teachers of the science of law who were students at the University of Pennsylvania and several of them have recently died in Tokio and formed their alumni association. One of these writes: "The same is rather odd to you. We call it in Japanese 'The Name Without Reality of the University of Pennsylvania.' That means we have since studied by the same window. Then we have a great deal of the society, we are too democratic, too free—too good, too generous, too fair. But the umpires are too slow to quell it. Here I serve the society as the secretary and treasurer and everything." He signs himself "Sada Hagiwara."

Men Who Govern Britain.

At the present rate the British government, there will cease to be British. It will be composed of Scotsmen and Irishmen. The present prime minister is a Scot, so is the leader of the opposition, the chancellor of the exchequer, the attorney general and the secretary for India. The viceroy of Ireland is a Scot, the lord lieutenant and the chief secretary for Ireland are Irishmen.

Regarding the above resolution Mr. Andrew Carnegie said:

"I think the resolution is admirable. We will make several converts for every one we lose. The policy of the fathers is the true Republican policy. The friend of all nations—the only one, equal justice to all, favoritism to none."

BIG BOILER BLOWS UP.

EXPLOSION WRECKS AN IRON AND STEEL MILL.

One Man is Killed and Two Injured—Cause of Trouble Unexplained—Construction Jobless Bell Bulletin for Morning of Grace.

To a little over an hour which resulted in larger portion of the Sharon Steel Company, of the Sharpsville Iron and Steel Company, and to a lesser extent the Carnegie Company, all one family that was once the Joel Jones Engineering Company, Sharpsville, Pa., was reduced to a mass of twisted and broken iron and steel, and the man who was at the helm of the boiler, Thomas Hoffman, of Sharpsville, was blown into the air and his body was found in the yard of the Sharon Steel Company, a mass of bruises and burns. The explosion occurred at 10 o'clock Friday morning, and the whole plant was shaken to its foundations. The explosion was heard for miles around, and the shock was felt for miles around. The force of the explosion was so great that it tore the boiler from its foundations and hurled it through the air, a distance of 300 feet, where it fell in the middle of the Sharon Steel Company's property, crushing a large fifty ton crane to pieces, and then it sank into the ground more than ten feet, leaving a gaping hole. The force of the explosion was felt in the Carnegie Company's plant, which is about a mile and a half from the place where the boiler was located, and it was felt in the Sharon Steel Company's plant, which is about a mile and a half in the other direction. THE SUGAR FACTORY.

Work On the Buildings Resumed Last Week—Supt. Hoag Starts in Charge Again.

A force of men under the direction of Superintendent Hartig is at work at the sugar factory. The ground has been leveled for the foundations of the beet sheds, and these structures will be erected soon. Several carloads of cement are expected daily, and then work will be resumed on the walls of the main building.

Mr. Hartig confirms the news, which, however, we already knew, that the project has been successfully financed, and that work will be energetically prosecuted to the finish. The factory will be completed, and the machinery installed for the working up of the present year's crop of beets, notwithstanding that the company has met with discouragements, not the least of which has been the jealous and spiteful attitude of neighboring towns, as this expression through its newspapers.

In some of these papers, the dissatisfaction of a few farmers with last year's crop arrangement, has been magnified into a general revolt among producers of the root. These reports have been distributed broadcast, and have had the effect of discouraging investors. It has taken time and hard work to counteract the injurious effect of these misstatements, but it has been done, and the enterprise is now on a sound basis.

The main building is already 75 per cent complete. A fine lot of beet acreage is secured, and contracts are still coming in at the rate of from 40 to 50 acres per day. Indeed the[illegible] may be already secured more acreage than they had last year at this time, which emphatically disproves the reports that have been industriously circulated by enemies of the enterprise, at home and abroad.

The territory embraced in the operations of the company with farmers takes in Charlevoix, Cheboygan, Emmet, Antrim, Grand Traverse and Kalkaska counties, and the spirit of the company report a good feeling among the farmers generally toward the enterprise.

President Dane, of the Construction company, is expected here this week or next.

HAZINGS FROM HAYES.

Mrs. Hannah Marie Hair, known to her friends by the familiar name "Holly" wife of Henry Hair and oldest daughter of W. S. Baker died Sunday morning last at her home in Hayes after a long illness. The funeral occured Tuesday, from Bear Lake school house, attended by a very large concourse of people. Mrs. Hair was loved by a large circle of friends. She leaves a sorrowing husband and three children to mourn yet not as those who have no hope.

One of the largest caucuses ever held in Hayes came off Tuesday afternoon, over one hundred electors participating. The question at stake being whether we would get a town board that would accept bonds for a saloon or they would not. Some people seem to think that any kind of a blother can come along with straw bonds and the town board must sit with their mouths shut and accept them. The law is some what different, it makes the Town board the acting party. The town board can put the bonds at $9000 if they wish to and not less than $2000, at the least.

The sentiment was against straw bondsm and live in the township. They must justify to the amount they sign for, and the law of the county and by in their possession over and above all liabilities in school, exemption lists, and amounts liable for by other bonds. (And we are glad that the legislature is passing a law that makes bondsmen liable for perjury if they make any mistake in swearing to their property.) They must be actual owners of property. Further, if the town board consider the person an unfit person to conduct a saloon, the law says they shall not accept the bonds. The supreme court has decided that mandamus will not hold to compel a town board to accept bonds after they have acted in the case and decided 'adversely. The blother cannot open a saloon until he has paid the county Treasurer the $500 tax and the treasurer will not accept the tax until the bonds are approved. It looks very much like the Gaylord tax say 500 bucks, will keep saloons and not saloon-keepers out of the town board.

We hope for the many a long day before the good people of Hayes will be compelled to see one of these home breeders in their midst. A saloon in the country is not using running into a saloon in a village or city and[illegible] runs into a drunkards grave.

WILL PAVE.

The Council Takes Action Looking Toward Paving Bridge Street.

Engineer Geo. S. Pierson, of Kalamazoo, met the village council Monday night, by special appointment, for a consultation regarding the proposed paving of Bridge street.

The result of the meeting was that Mr. Pierson was engaged to make plans and estimates covering different kinds of permanent pavement including brick. The opinion of the council, which was fortified by that of the engineer, was that brick should be adopted.

This will probably be the outcome. Mr. Pierson returned to Kalamazoo, but an assistant arrived Tuesday night, and if once precinded will the work provided for by the council.

BEAVER ISLAND NEWS.

The entrance to Beaver harbor is entirely free from ice.

McCann's red ice house has been moved from its old stand onto a crib over the water alongside their dock.

Gordon A Dahmer has a dock built on their water front north of Homer's dock.

Messrs. Jos. Left, Clarence Gilmsell and Jos. Brown have quit fishing through the ice and now have their nets set in open water at the mouth of the harbor.

McCann's fishing crew began work this week Monday—their tug Margaret McCann is fitted out ready to fish as soon as they can break through to their store dock for coal. She tried to get through the ice on Thursday but found it too thick in the more sheltered portion of the harbor. The mouth of the harbor and for quite a distance is in all open.

Martin Hess, are at work overhauling their nets, and have their tug Elliot fitted up for spring fishing.

The men from the lumber camps of the Morrow river are in the harbor waiting to get away on the first boat.

The Beaver Island Lumber Co. have bought the timber gotten out by Gill & Green's camp.

Capt. Bonner has a large amount of cedar on the banks of Hog and High islands ready for the first schooner.

March 15 Peter D. Gallagher and wife were made happy by the advent of a son.

Capt. Johnson did four days plowing last week.

Mrs. Annie E. Gallagher died at her home on March 17 from Chronic tubular disease of the heart. She was born in Toronto in 1856 and was brought by her parents to Beaver Island in 1860. She was married in 1879 and bore six children, since 1890 when her husband died she has managed the farm and raised her family, but, over-worked herself so that for more than a year she has been in very poor health. The death of her oldest son who was killed last December by a log rolling on him while in the woods alone, contributed largely to hasten her own demise. All who knew her gave her great credit for the heroic manner with which she battled against adverse circumstances in raising her large family. Those of her children who survive her are Misses Mary and Bridget who are ladies grown and the two younger ones Annie and Willie. She was a member of the L. O. T. M. of Lenora tent and one of the Ladies Sodality of the Catholic church of Beaver Island. Funeral occurred March 20.

Since Mr. A. Malloy has remodelled the fruit building for a meat market Beaver Island has at last a place for the storage and sale of meats as any one could ask for and just as neat a town to attend to their meats in that line. He handles all kinds of fresh, salt, smoked and canned meats, in the satisfactory manner.

Thirty Four Years.

With this number the SENTINEL begins the thirty-fifth year of its life. Thirty-four years is a good while, it is a long time for a newspaper to be sent out by one publisher continuously. Yet such is the fact. The present publisher begins his work here but a few months after he attained his majority; today he is on the shady side of life, but with a fair prospect of rounding out a half century of work with the SENTINEL.

It is not out of place to here record a fact: The present editor of the SENTINEL has been the longest in service on one paper of any now in service north of Big Rapids, in either peninsula, and there is but one editor north of Grand Rapids, in either peninsula, who has been so long in continuous editorial work, and that is Mr. Gray, of the Big Rapids Pioneer. To state it up, the publisher of the SENTINEL is the dean of the newspaper fraternity in the territory above described.

When the SENTINEL was founded, the nearest railroad was at Grand Rapids, and travel was entirely by stage. The mail came to Charlevoix on the back of a one-armed Indian once a week. What is now Bridge street was thickly dotted with stumps. Only small sail boats could enter Round Lake, and the country about the Lake was densely wooded, with only here and there a small clearing. Streets in Charlevoix existed only on the plat. There was but one store in the settlement, and that was a cheap building on the sandy bluff on the north side, near the outside wood dock. Half could buy be secured from the steamers which wooded here. At the elections the Indian vote was the "balance of power."

These were the conditions which existed when the SENTINEL was founded. That the existence of our little paper was a struggle for life, in those days, will be granted without argument. But it lived. And from those pioneer days to this day the SENTINEL has been the earnest advocate of the interests of Charlevoix and Charlevoix county. It was uncompromisingly republican in the days when the business affairs of the settlement were controlled by Democrats, and many times the life of the paper was threatened by those unusual conditions. In all these thirty four years it has never wavered in its allegiance to republican principles.

Considering these facts, has not the SENTINEL earned the right to live? Indeed, has it not earned the right to more than live?

The present publisher will not always be here; but the SENTINEL will be here a hundred years hence. It has a record of which it is at least, not ashamed. It will continue to prosecute the work it began more than a third of a century ago, and it asks the support and encouragement of the people.

AN Industry In Embryo.

The Board of Directors of the "American Automatic Vending Machine Manufacturing Co., of Charlevoix, Mich," held its regular meeting at the law office of Dale Shanahan, on Monday and formulated plans for the manufacture of the Sears patent cigar not machine, and putting it on the market.

One of the machines is on exhibition at Sears' clothing store. It is a triumph of human ingenuity, and cannot fail to secure a ready sale. The mechanism is enclosed in a handsome and nicely ornamented wood case. By the insertion of a nickle and the usual manipulation of a push button a cigar, encased in a transparent glycene covering, falls into an outside receptacle, you do the rest. A unique feature of the machine is an electric magnet that intercepts any metal slug that may be inserted, drawing it into a sort of side compartment before it reaches the business part of the machine.

The officers of the company are as follows:

President—F. M. Sears.

Vice-President, and Gen. manager, A. G. Chaloupka.

Treasurer,—Dr. E. H. Wirks.

Secretary—Dale Shanahan.

Directors—Dr. E. H. Armstrong, Geo. F. Brown, O. E. Wilbur, F. D. Campbell, Leo Howard, H. Caldwell, Dr. J. A. Kraft, Chas Chaloupka.

General manager Chaloupka goes to Chicago this week to arrange for the manufacture there of a bunch of machines, but the company intends that this shall be but a temporary arrangement. It is proposed, ultimately to establish a factory here.

The machine is certainly a winner, it never fails to work, and cannot fail to be easy of introduction wherever sinful and self-indulgent man wants a cheap and good smoke without the necessity of being walled upon.

The American Association of Masters and Pilots, an organization with membership of between 50 and 60 per cent of the masters and pilots on the leading government licenses on the lakes has made demands for higher wages and the correction of certain irregularities to which it is alleged, the Lake Carriers' Association has turned a deaf ear. Many of the Masters are under contract with vessel owners, and it will be difficult to ignore these obligations, while, on the other hand, if captains cast off the line of union, they will be unable to find a mate who will ship with them. Captains, all of whom are members of the Ship-masters' Association, have been warned that unless they join the masters and pilots they will find trouble in getting crews. Captain Davis, of the opinion that the trouble will not be allowed to go very far, and that the carriers will be obliged to grant at least some of the demands.

The burglar was shot through the lungs. Mr. Shelton says: "My wife was very sick with Lung Trouble and coughed incessantly. We had tried many remedies without avail. Her cough was so bad we had little hope for her recovery. One dose of Dr. King's New Discovery for Consumption, Coughs and Colds, relieved her at once and a few bottles cured her. CHAPTER II.—(Continued.)

Mr. Lancaster was not a man to be bored one minute longer than he was obliged to, and he soon had his fortune-telling friend rightly and good on the subject of the young lady whom he was bound to meet. He also had learned that Miss Gertrude Lancaster was a young woman who grew much with her years, but was scarcely more than a child when she offered the little duke hand and heart upon their brief acquaintance in Italy. It was an old story to him from that time—that is, as far as it had been from the beginning—that Gertrude was a child in her heart, and wondered.

"Wonderful boy!" he laughed to the one confidant worthy of such a confidence.

The boy, meanwhile, was enjoying his first experience of the silence of complete, and, as he thought, well-merited disgrace. He had spoken the truth, whether his father believed it or not, and he was not sorry that he had done it. He was sorry for his father, who was so much more of a boy than he was himself, and who had to be taken care of by his son, who was not half his age. He was sorry for his mother, who was so much more of a child than he was himself, and who had to be taken care of by her son, who was not half her age. He was sorry for his sister, who was so much more of a child than he was himself, and who had to be taken care of by her son, who was not half her age. He was sorry for his aunt, who was so much more of a child than he was himself, and who had to be taken care of by her son, who was not half her age. He was sorry for his cousin, who was so much more of a child than he was himself, and who had to be taken care of by her son, who was not half her age. He was sorry for his uncle, who was so much more of a child than he was himself, and who had to be taken care of by his son, who was not half his age. He was sorry for his aunt, who was so much more of a child than he was himself, and who had to be taken care of by her son, who was not half her age. EXPORT DISCOUNTS

SELLING ABROAD CHEAPER THAN AT HOME.

The Practice a Far More Common One in Free-Trade Great Britain Than Under a Protective Tariff in the United States.

The practice of granting discounts on goods sold for export is the bane by much of the agitation for reduction of the tariff. For example, the most Gov. Cummins boils with virtuous indignation at the contemplation of so foul a crime as that which is included in selling surplus products to foreigners at a lower price than that which domestic consumers are required to pay. The words of Senator Dolliver (director of the Mint Roberts and other watch dogs of the tariff bee) similarly and for a similar cause. They cannot tolerate the thought of battling on foreign trade by such means, and they proposed to stop the thing by tearing down the tariff schedules and introducing what free Canadian cattle pension foreign competition. Congressman Tawney also exhibits some perturbation at the thought that some portion—about 1 per cent—of our domestic production finds it was to be sold to foreigners at slightly cut prices, and he proposes a Congressional convention to inquire into the matter with a view to arriving at some method of tariff reduction, of course—namely American mills and factories will be forced to shut down more than the domestic consumption will have been reached. Incidental to this plan it is proposed to lower the tariff high so that it will in such cases enable the foreign producers to work off their surplus on the American market at cut prices and thereby diminish American production, employment and wages. Great heads these Republican reformers have.

The practice of price cutting to foreigners, however, is universal. It obtains to a very limited extent in the United States, where conditions generally have created a demand that absorbs all our industrial production as fast as it can be turned out. It obtains much more in foreign countries, all over Europe, goods for export are invoiced at lower prices than the prevailing market price for the same goods at home. In this connection attention is called to the following extract from a letter to an American house, dated Sept. 12, 1902, from the firm of Charles Cammell & Co., Limited, of Sheffield, England:

"In regard to reducing prices for export business, this is done by us, inasmuch as the prices we quote from home railways are somewhat higher than from customers abroad."

Cammell & Co. and steel rails. They do business in a free trade country. Hence it cannot be a protective tariff that enables them to obtain from home railways prices that "are somewhat higher" than the prices obtained from "customers abroad." And yet we hear of no parliamentary commission to examine into the matter and report a plan whereby a British trust producer shall be compelled to stop his quest for foreign trade by means of reducing prices for export business. Foreign governments seem to think it a good thing to market surplus products abroad and thus maintain production and wage paying at home. For example, the Germans, at a considerable number of English railways, report that goods for export shall be carried at a lower freight rate than goods for home consumption. It is only in the United States that "progressive" reformers are to be found who would prevent selling the sale of surplus products abroad, but would offer special inducements to foreigners to dump their surplus on the American market.

ASTOR MAY ENTER POLITICS.

Rumor That Ex-American Seeks Election to Parliament.

A London correspondent learns "from authoritative sources that William Waldorf Astor is likely to be a parliamentary candidate for a London constituency at the next general election. He is said to have been approached among him some on this subject before, but has held back because he feared defeat. He was waited upon recently by an influential deputation and without giving definite promises said he would give the matter serious consideration. There is also strong probability that his cousinship may succeed the Earl of Dunsmore, who has chosen member of Parliament for Middlesbrough, the constituency which was once represented by Gladstone. Mr. Frohman's said to have a winning personality.

Virginia Farmer Explains Unexpected Shortage of Liquor.

Judge Epes Hunton says that once while campaigning in Virginia he stopped for the night at the home of a wealthy farmer. Supper was the best said he had not put in a barrel of whisky and they had a drink of rye. In about three weeks the judge came that by accident to the farmer's house, but no whisky was forthcoming. His host said they were "out out of liquor. "You don't mean to tell me" said the judge, "that you drank up that barrel of whisky already?" "Why," said the host, "I pulled the bung out of that barrel when you have a big family of children and one can very easily milk."

Surgeons' Sutures.

Modern surgery employs dozens of different kinds of thread for healing cuts and wounds. Among them are bandages of horsehair, silk and very fine silver wire. The short, tough tendons taken from the legs of cattle, which are used for sewing severe wounds, are particularly valuable and have stood HOT, that, they hold for about a month before they break. Wire thread will hold out much longer, sometimes six months, while the fine silver wire is practically indestructible. Silver wire is used to select a thread that will not injure the tissues, which should take to it and will then disappear completely.

NOW ANOTHER SCARE!

Ten Years Ago We Were Frightened by Dowey's Army of Tramps; Today We Are Worrying Because the Country Is Too Prosperous.

The Pan Milner Capital, a Republican newspaper that is edited with marked ability and forcefulness, has performed a public service of value in ridiculing a fetish and condition of mind prevailing from 1893 to 1897. Under Cleveland and tariff reform, and from 1897 to 1902 under Republican rule and tariff revision. The picture is vividly drawn and the contrasts effectively brought out. Ten months and have taken an occasional look among the last two years. I am practically a new man and feel that I have been given a new lease of life." Dowey's tramps, hard times, stocks of goods to close out and "the country is ruined" are nothing compared with the Dowey's tramps, hard times, stocks of goods to close out and "the country is ruined" of today. The contrast is striking and effective. It was expensive in Dowey's time to be a patriot and to shout for the tariff and the protection of American industries. It is now fashionable to be a patriot and to shout for the tariff and the protection of American industries. VOLUNTEER FIREMEN KILLED AT SHELDON, NEB.

Town Had No Fire Protection and Unaccustomed Flame Ignited Gasoline—Consequences of Temerity—Scored for Refusing Women Access of Rescuer.

A falling wall caught several volunteer firemen at Sheldon, Neb., at 10 o'clock Monday morning. Fred Gulke was thrown out alive from beneath the debris. The dead are: Joseph Tomlinson, aged 35, leaves a widow and three children.

Gulke was doing the work of a fireman for the first time. The town has no fire department and no fire protection. The firemen were called to the scene of a fire in the building in which the town's gasoline was being stored. The fire was quickly extinguished by the firemen, who then began to pump gasoline from the building into barrels. Some of the gasoline ignited and the firemen were ordered out of the building. Gulke was in the building when the order was given and was thrown out by the falling wall.

FLAYED FOR FREEING WOMAN.

Two Men Given Well Week and Seven Lashes Each.

Two men were publicly flogged and then ordered to leave Hamilton, Ohio, by the committee of a lynching party which had taken Julia Wolf, a married woman, from the county jail Monday night and had her whipped. Mrs. Wolf was taken from her home by a masked mob of 100 men. The men who led the mob were masked, but it is said that they were men who had been in the employ of Mrs. Wolf's husband. The woman was taken from her home to a place in the woods where she was stripped to the waist and tied to a tree. Then she was given seven lashes with a whip. The men who had been ordered to leave town were given a week in which to settle their affairs.

ODELL'S LIFE THREATENED.

Governor of New York Asks Police Protection from Lynchers.

The life of Governor Odell of New York has been threatened by an assassin. Extra precautions have been taken to guard the chief executive of the state, and any person who makes himself or herself a nuisance around the executive mansion will be arrested. The threat was received in a letter addressed to Governor Odell, which was written in a very illiterate hand. The letter was signed "Lynch." It was addressed to the executive mansion, and was received by the police of this city. It is the opinion of the police that the letter was written by a crazy man who is not to be taken seriously. The letter reads as follows:

"Mr. Governor Odell: Sir, I hereby give you notice that if you don't pardon the prisoners that killed the lynchers, I will be sure to get you. Yours, Lynch."

Governor Odell's life has been threatened by the members of the various factions of the Republican party in this state since the Republican convention in Saratoga last September, when it was rumored that a settlement was reached at a conference between the Governor and Senator Thomas C. Platt. The Governor's life has been threatened by members of the Republican party because it was rumored that he had made a bargain with Senator Platt by which the Governor was to be given the Republican nomination in 1906, in return for his support of Senator Platt's candidate for United States Senator to succeed Thomas C. Platt, whose term expires next March.

PHILIPPINE TRADE CROWING.

Customs Receipts on and Exports from Islands Show Increase.

The Philippines are showing a marked increase in the volume of trade, if the figures of the Philippine customs for the month of January, just received by the bureau of insular affairs, are any indication. The total receipts from the customs amounted to $1,000,000, for the month, as against $800,000 for the same month last year, and $700,000 for the month of January, 1903. The figures represent the total receipts from all sources.

YOUTH STARVES IN HIDING.

Lives Under a Railroad Building Two Days to Escape Pursuers.

Wagged to a standstill and the body covered with a mass of bruises, the boy, aged 14, a member of the Corona Junior Republic, ran into a railroad tower in Rockaway, N. Y., two weeks after he escaped from the institution. He was found in a corner of the tower, with his face covered with a mass of bruises, and his body so sore that he could not stand upright. He was taken to his home in Corona, L. I., and his parents were informed that he had been beaten by his pursuers, who had taken him back to the Junior Republic.

MUCH NEW RAILROAD.

Large Orders for Steel Rails Must be Sent Abroad.

Many orders for steel rails for the completion of projected extensions and new lines in the United States will be placed abroad, it is stated, because the mills in this country are so busy with other orders that they can not promise to make the rails in time to meet the requirements of the roads. The Pennsylvania Railroad is said to be considering the question of placing a large order for rails in Germany, and other railroad companies are said to be considering the advisability of placing their orders for rails abroad.

WOMAN FOUL'S BOLD FELONS.

Mrs. Jesse T. Mills, a Sheriff's Bride, Prevents Two Jail Delivery Attempts.

Mrs. Jesse T. Mills, wife of the sheriff of Tompkins County, Ithaca, has just twice foiled jail deliveries little since her marriage a year ago. Last week the prisoners made an attack on the jailer in an attempt to escape. The sheriff was absent and when a "trusty" ran to his home she ordered him to go to the jail. Mrs. Mills quickly armed herself and ran to the jail, reaching there just in time to drive back a dozen prisoners who were attacking Frank Ide, the jailer. The jailer had been killed and the murderer had escaped from Mrs. Mills if the point of her gun drove the remainder of the prisoners back to their cells. Chas. Beaver, the jailer's murderer, has since been captured and is now in jail. A confession regarding a plot to kill the jailer and release a number of the prisoners may be shortly published.

MRS. MAYBRICK TO LIVE HERE.

Official Announcement Is Made of Her Unconditional Release.

Mrs. Florence Maybrick, the American woman who was convicted at Liverpool in 1889 on the charge of poisoning her husband, James Maybrick, at Aigburth, and whose sentence of death was commuted to penal servitude for life will be released in 1905.

The announcement comes from the efforts of the Associated Press in Washington to secure a statement from the Department of Justice. The fact of her release next year is a reason for reviving the controversy of the trial of Mrs. Maybrick and for the prisoner's interest in Lord Kitchener, Virginia and West Virginia.

STRIKE COMMISSION GIVES RESULT OF ITS INQUIRY.

While Labor Leaders Are Commended for Their Attitude, Rioting and Boycott Are Denounced in Strong Terms—Union Is Not Recognized.

Although declaring the anthracite coal miners entitled to the increase in pay for which they fought, the strike commission selected by President Roosevelt, in its report gives no formal recognition to the union and has some harsh things to say regarding the lawlessness that marked the recent struggle.

The individual men are blamed for crimes committed during the strike, but the commission exonerates the president of the union and the national leaders of any responsibility and declares that did all possible to maintain peace. Complaints against the police and special agents are held to prove the best interests of the public demand the retirement of men should not assume the prerogatives of officers of the law.

In brief, the commission recommends a general increase in wages amounting in most instances to 10 per cent.

Petoskey Record: C. C. Hamill commenced this week one organization of a co-operative association for the protection of the farmers of Emmet and adjoining counties. The association will be capitalized at $10,000 consisting of one thousand $10 shares to be held principally by the farmers. The number of shares which one person can purchase has been limited to fifty so that no one person can secure a controlling interest. The object is to stock a store with general merchandise used by the farmer and to provide a place where he can sell his farm produce for cash. Mr. Hamill hopes to have organization completed and ready for business by June 1st.

The Petoskey board of trade, which formed a temporary organization a few months ago adopted a permanent organization lately, the entire capital stock of $10,000 having been subscribed, and will at once file its articles of incorporation with the secretary of state. The board of directors elected for one year is composed of E. H. Goldsmith, Chalmers Curtis, G. A. Hiles, R. M. Winston, M. Rosenthal, H. G. Yeass and I. B. Wachtel. Five per cent of the capital stock is immediately available to encourage manufacturing enterprises and assessments will be made by the board of directors from time to time as needed. The stockholders number 200 and it is believed that in proportion to the size of the city Petoskey has the strongest organization of the kind in the state.

Lake Shore Drive.

Charlevoix will have a lake shore boulevard. Surveyor Nettleton this morning began a survey for a beach road from the water works to the south-west point, and beyond.

The scheme is being promoted by owners of property out at and near the point, and it is expected that the village and township will aid in the enterprise.

It is proposed to make a wide and hard driveway just back from the beach far enough to be clear of the surf. There are thousands of tons of crushed limestone near the point, which will be utilized.

The Election.

Returns from the several townships of the county indicate a republican majority in the county, on State ticket of between six and seven hundred.

The republican township ticket in Charlevoix was elected by a large majority, the socialist ticket being the only opposition.

Election Notices.

Returns show that the republican state in Michigan was elected by about 50,000. The republicans made a clean sweep of Wayne county.

In Chicago, Carter H. Harrison was re-elected Mayor, over Graeme Stewart, by 5000 majority.

Petoskey elected H. Hepworth (dem.) Mayor by 128 majority, and Traverse City elected John B. Santo (dem.)

In Charlevoix county the board of supervisors will stand as follows.

Destructive Lightning Bolt.

Last Thursday afternoon, after the SENTINEL had gone to press, a bolt of lightning struck the old central school building, damaging it to the extent of $300 or $1,000.

The school had just called, and all the rooms were full. With a terrific crash the bolt struck the belfry, completely demolishing it. The lightning penetrated down to the old high school room, and its operations there strengthen a belief in minacus. In the northeast corner of the room the door into the office room, on the north, was open. This was torn from its hinges and thrown half the length of the room, along the north wall. The plaster and lath for a third of the length of the room were torn down from the brick wall. A little girl sat on a seat front seat near this door, which passed her not three feet away. The lightning passed along the entire length of the north wall, behind the teacher's desk, and broke out the transom over the door into the recitation room. It then apparently returned and spent itself through the cold air shaft that leads to the furnace from behind the teacher's desk. Prof. Rose, luckily, was sitting at one end of his desk, instead of behind it, or the story might have been differently told.

Of course there was a panic in the room, but it was only of brief duration. The pupils ran down above the room throughout which plaster and lath were scattered. One little girl had reached the window sill with the evident intention of jumping out, when she was seized. About every window in the room was broken.

Order was soon restored, and the pupils from all the rooms soon passed out to the yard. A fire alarm had been sent in, and a hose cart was on the ground in five minutes from the time of the crash. Not, strange to say, there was no ignition, although in the attic splinters from the wrecked belfry covered the unboxed lath and plaster.

And more marvelous still, was the fact that no one was injured. That some were not killed is little less than a miracle. When it was known that the building had been struck, there was much excitement about town, and the premises were soon crowded with people, anxious to ascertain if their children had been harmed.

The damage is fully covered by insurance.

MARINE NEWS.

The steamer Beaver took the For Island light keeper from Northport to their station Saturday.

The clearance of the Pine Lake Calendar was the first departure with cargo this season. She took a load of cedar to Chicago.

The first arrival of a cargo vessel at this port this season was the steamer Welcome from Manitowoc Sunday morning.

At T. D. Smith's ship yard, on Saturday, April 18th, the steamer Mary will be sold under a mortgage foreclosure, to the highest bidder.

The steamer Gordon is out, and is making one trip per day on the East Jordan route. The Gordon is in fine shape and will make better time than before.

The firemen's strike has already affected Pine Lake. The Wm. H. Vo ble steamer Three Brothers, (formerly John Spry) was unable to leave Manitowoc this week because of inability to get firemen and the Sister was paid off the crew. The Pine Lake is in Chicago, and will probably have trouble from the same cause.

The steamer Chippewa passed down Lake Huron Sunday on her way to Craig ship yard at Toledo for general overhauling before taking for New York to go into service. The fast steamer Iroquois will also leave for the east coast and with the Chippewa will be engaged on runs out of New York. These steamers were known as the Amoth boats, and ran between Mackinac Island and the Soo.

Capt. John Gemelli's fine new naptha fishing boat was launched from foot of Clinton street Saturday afternoon, a large crowd witnessing the ceremony. The handsome little craft was christened by the young daughter of the owner, whose name the boat now bears—"Little Maria." A bottle of champagne was deftly handled by the young lady and the baptism was successful. The new boat was built by Lorin Morrison, is of hospitor model and strongly built. She is driven by a triple-expansion engine, built by Strauss Bros. as was also the reversible propeller. Her tank carries eighty gallons of gasoline, and she is equipped with a large tank for fish. She has a large cabin, and sleeping berths. Her length is forty feet, and has all the qualities of a heavy weather tanning tug.

Henry Koffman, the Junk man, at the old water works building will pay from 5 to 7 dollars per ton for old iron,—5, 6 and seven cents per pound for copper. Sheep pelts from 50c to 75c each. Zinc 1 cent per pound. Highest price paid for all kinds of furs. I also pay 5 cents per pound for old rubbers.

Paddock and the Holmes Bill.

Extreme temperance people in Charlevoix county have been very much agitated over Representative Paddock's attitude on the saloon measure known as the Holmes Bill, which has to deal with liquor bond sureties.

The Holmes bill provided that sureties on liquor bonds might be compelled to file statements of their wealth, so that township boards might see whether they were qualified to act, and the liquor men met this proposition with another to the effect that surety bonds might be accepted. After two bills the temperance men seemed to be forward, the Holmes bill being referred back to the judiciary committee of the house to be tinkered up so to be constitutionally. [Holmes himself appeared to give up the fight, taking it for granted that the bill had been sent there for burial. But since then the church people have taken up the matter, and there is a new deal on. Holmes got together with Representative Paddock, the introducer of the surety bond bill, and they agreed on a measure which would provide that surety bonds might be accepted in cities of over 1,500 inhabitants, and that statements of assets should be required in other places from bondsmen, the time for qualifying being extended thirty days.

At indications that the house is ready to put through the proposed compromise, Representative Paddock put through, without opposition, a bill permitting city and village boards of Charlevoix county to accept surety company bonds from liquor dealers. And this is where Paddock heard the hornets about his head.

The provisions of Paddock's bill are that the bonds of surety companies may be accepted. It is left entirely discretionary with the board.

Really, we see no reason for hysterics over the bill. So long as the law legalizes the sale of liquor in saloons, and prescribes the boundaries of such traffic, it matters very little whether the field is occupied by a barkeeper or a board fence, so long as it is enclosed. And this is all that the bill means.

Half the personal sureties on saloon bonds now, are only straw sureties, and very often straw at that. If representative Paddock can improve the conditions of saloon bond sureties, and eliminate the "straw" feature that prevail in Michigan, he is doing the public a service, and we commend him for it.

Of course, people who criticize Mr. Paddock are what is known as prohibitionists.

There are many good people in Michigan who conscientiously believe in prohibition; there are equally as good people in the State who are radically opposed to the liquor traffic, who do not believe in prohibition.

What is the record in the years from '892 to 1897 inclusive, the following counties adopted prohibition: Allegan, Antrim, Branch, Calhoun, Clinton, Ionia, Hillsdale, Oceola, Ottawa, Saginaw, VanBuren. Every one of these counties have returned to the license system but VanBuren.

At St. Joseph in that county before prohibition was enacted, there were five drug stores; since prohibition was enacted, there are eleven drug stores, and "illicit liquor" without number.

The experience has been that prohibition does not prohibit; that in comparison with prohibition per se, high license does prohibit, or at least, restrain; that the open saloon, which contributes largely from its questionable, seemingly is preferable to a certain class of "drug stores," and the hidden dives that always infest prohibition communities. This is not a theory, but a condition.

We will agree on the principle intended to be established, but we do not agree as to the means of eliminating the evil. If we cannot abolish the evil, we can restrain; and, call it "blood money" if you will, it is better to levy tribute upon an evil than to endure the evil without tribute.

CHAPTER III.

It was almost twelve o'clock and Grace Ashton was still in her white nightgown and lay in the center of bolsters, her hair in her arms, and sobbing bitterly down upon the coverlet. Mrs. Ashton, dressed ready to go to church, was standing over her, a troubled look upon her pleasant face, and her gentle voice was trying to coax her out of the sad fright she was in. Mrs. Ashton had spoken to her husband, and he had promised to be very good to her, and not scold her for her folly, and Grace was now in a state of mind between fear and joy, that she could not control herself at all, and was sobbing and laughing by turns.

"Darling, darling, just a little one. She mustn't see you in your nightgown. Come, Grace, you must get up. Mr. Sheldon will be here in an hour, and I want you to look your prettiest. Come, Grace, I hear your father coming. Do, darling, for my sake, get up and be good."

Grace did not hear her mother's words, but she felt the gentle hand upon her shoulder, and the sweet voice was enough to calm her. She sat up, and her mother, seeing that she was herself again, left her to her bath and her dressing.

Grace was ready when her mother came back, and was sitting in a low chair by the window, looking very pale and very pretty in her white muslin dress and her mother's lace fichu crossed over her bosom and fastened with a pearl brooch. She was very quiet and very pale all through the morning, and her mother was anxious for her, and was glad when the time came for her to go to her room to dress for the afternoon.

Mr. Sheldon came at three o'clock, and Grace was ready to meet him when he came into the drawing-room with her mother. She was very pale and very quiet, but she was very pretty in her pale blue silk and her lace fichu, and her mother was proud of her as she took her place behind the tea-table and poured out the tea.

Mr. Sheldon was very attentive to Grace, and she was very quiet and very polite to him, but she was very pale and very sad, and her mother was anxious about her and was glad when the time came for her to go to her room to dress for the dinner-party.

Grace was very pale when she came into the drawing-room that evening

DUTY ON HIDES.

It Will Stand Until Shoes Are Put On the Free List.

The American people will never allow hides to go on the free list with out boots and shoes going on the free list as well. If the farmer is compelled to compete with the markets of the world in hides he will insist that the shoe manufacturer shall compete with the markets of the world as well, and the farmer will be right. No shoe manufacturer pledges that manufactured shoes will be any cheaper than at present if sole leather is given free hides. Hon. John F. Lacey wrote to a leather shoe manufacturer inquiring as to the probable reduction in the price of shoes, and was told that there would be none provided the tariff were taken off hides. Who then would get the benefit of the reduction in the price of hides? The answer is, the shoe manufacturer. The American people may thinn just as much of the beef trust as they do of the shoe trust.

The contest for free hides illustrates the subdivision of special interests when it comes to the tariff question and demonstrates that the tariff law better by left alone. When raw materials are made free, especially such raw materials as are produced abroad solely in America, there will be an end to all the tariff, because free raw materials will be used, should be followed by free manufactured goods.

The shoe industry is prospering while hides are on the protected list, and that interest is simply pagatin in its present demand.—Des Moines Capital.

Hold the Spider to the Fly.

Enough of the Iowa idea.

Iowa is undergoing a change of sentiment on the tariff revision question, and the prevailing sentiment in the state today is to "let well enough alone" on the tariff schedule, or at least to move with care and caution in changing the existing tariffs.

Governor Cummins has lost his "Iowa idea" fully and freely exploited for two years. Many Republican leaders in the state, while not in accord with the governor's strenuous efforts to modify, and while not indorsing his profession that the tariff schedule and shelters trusts, have nevertheless come out in line with the party and its platform. They have recognized that the matter was simply a local craze, which the party in the nation would not accord, and rather than create division and turmoil within the party they have consented to let it pass through the campaigns, either in silence or with mild protests.

Now it is being realized that the "Iowa idea" far from being an important stepping stone for the party in all of the people, is degenerating into something bordering close for the Republicans of other states. It is doubtful if a single one of the Iowa Congressmen, either now serving or elect, will have the courage to broach the idea in the halls of Congress, and it is almost a foregone conclusion that the next Republican state convention will see that the "idea" is eliminated from the platform.

In doing this there may be a personal antagonism to Gov. Cummins, but he will find it conducive to his political peace of mind and political comfort, too, to get into line with the majority of his party, and especially with the old time leaders who have carried the organization along such successful lines in the past. It is time to stop the "Iowa idea" before Iowa loses credit for all the good political sense she has exhibited in the past and is made to smile with propositions because of a few years ago.—Waterloo Courier.

Cannot Use His Own Cars.

P. A. S. Wilcner, the Philadelphia traction magnate, controls thousands of miles of street railroad in America, but he cannot ride in a trolley car without risking from an exact imitation of musicians. Cuno he made a desperate effort to overcome this weakness. Accompanied by W. L. Elkins his partner, he went for a trolleyville ride and stuck at it until the trip was ended. By that time he was in a state of complete collapse. He approached on the steam railroad and has not ventured on a trolley car since.

A Unique Apology.

President Roosevelt was telling a friend about his mail, which averages 250 or 300 letters a day. "One of the most remarkable letters I ever received," he said, "arrived on the morning the first full accounts of the Martinique disaster were printed in the newspapers. The writer said he saw that the American consul at Martinique had been burned to death. He apologized for the place and wound up with the sentence: 'I hate this early application so as to be ahead of those institutions creatures, the office seekers.'"

Useful Grapes Resistant.

Proof of His Alma Mater.

Senator Quarles of Milwaukee has formally accepted the invitation extended by President Angell of the University of Michigan to deliver the commencement address at Ann Arbor on June 18. The senator takes great pride in his connection with the University of Michigan. He delivered the commencement address at Ann Arbor on June 15. The senator takes great pride in the fact that his son was a "pluebo," and to the other day, "and but for the fact that the university authorities have seen fit to deprive me of the privilege I would be the proudest father in Milwaukee."

Silver coins similar to those used in Japan, Germany and the United States are shortly to be introduced in France. COTTON MILLS CLOSE.

STRIKE OF OPERATIVES BEGINS AT LOWELL, MASS.

Trouble Is Brought About to Enforce Demand for Ten Per Cent Increase in Wages—A Wrong Signal Causes Fatal Wreck on Erie Road.

Five thousand men and women employed in the Lowell, Mass., mills of the Merrimac Manufacturing Company, the Massachusetts Cotton Mills and the Lawrence Manufacturing Company, which operatives belong to the Textile Council, struck last Saturday morning, the first effect was the closing of the Merrimac mills. The period of idleness, the duration of which cannot be predicted, was brought on by a notably stubborn, stern principle on the part of the corporations. The operatives had asked for a ten per cent increase in wages, the first advance they had asked since the mills started in business, and the refusal of the request was followed by the announcement that the mills would be closed indefinitely. The operatives had not been given any cut in their wages, but they had been working only a short time each week, and they had asked that the time be increased to the old standard of sixty hours a week. The Merrimac mills have been working but three days a week for some time, and the Massachusetts and Lawrence mills have been running only four days a week. The Merrimac mills have 1,800 looms and employ 3,000 operatives, the Massachusetts mills have 1,000 looms and employ 2,000 operatives, and the Lawrence mills have 1,000 looms and employ 2,000 operatives. The Merrimac mills are the largest cotton mills in Lowell. Most, if not all, of the operatives are members of the Textile Council, which was formed last fall. The council is affiliated with the United Textile Workers of America, and has a membership of about 5,000. It was the council that ordered the strike in the Merrimac mills last January, when the operatives in that mill were forced to work only four days a week. The strike lasted but a few days, the operatives being compelled to return to the looms because they had exhausted their resources. The council was formed a few weeks before the strike, and it was then that the Merrimac operatives first made their demand for an increase in wages. The council has been very active since its formation, and has been instrumental in bringing about a shorter working week in the mills of Lowell, Lawrence and Haverhill. The council also was responsible for the passage by the last legislature of a law providing that no woman should be employed in a factory more than sixty hours a week. The council is now agitating for a law to prevent the employment of children under 14 years of age in factories.

BELL BOY AND BURGLAR.

Alleged to Have Confessed to Police. His Dual Existence.

Working as a bell boy in a downtown hotel during the day and operating as a sneak thief and porch climber in the evening is the substance of a verbal confession made by Walter Sheehan to Capt. John Hoare at the Marquette street police station in Chicago. Not only did Sheehan admit that he had been guilty of numerous burglaries but he furnished the police with information which resulted in the recovery of large quantities of jewelry, silverware, opera glasses, and other articles. The prisoner claims to have committed the various burglaries he robbed. Sheehan has "been living a year or two around the Illinois Central station." He admitted that he was married a year ago and lived in a modest flat with his wife. He was well liked and respected by his neighbors. Sheehan would go to bed by a down town hotel during the day. He'd even tip his wife when he left home and all he had to do in the evening was to put on his clothes in the form of burglar and travel to a fashionable residence section where he would ply his trade.

CHOPPED OUT OF CARS.

Passengers Escape from Burning Coaches in a Wreck.

Passengers on the C. M. & St. P. at Chicago, Burlington and Quincy road had a narrow escape from being burned to death in a wreck near Stanley, Wis., on Saturday night. The train was composed of a baggage car, a coach, a Pullman sleeper and a dining car. The Pullman caught fire from the kitchen and burned to the ground. The dining car was saved. There is the report that the fire started in the sleeper. The passengers were all asleep when the train left Stanley and when the fire was discovered it was too far gone to be extinguished. The passengers had to be chopped out of the coaches. A wrecking crew was ordered to the scene from Chicago and when it arrived at 10 o'clock Sunday morning it had cleared a way through the debris and had taken the passengers from the burning coaches to Stanley, where they were cared for.

MYSTERY SURROUNDS CRIME.

Dakota Sheep-Raiser Arrested and Held on Charge of Murder.

Stanley County, S. Dak., is another county in which William Alsbaugh is a prominent citizen. Mr. Alsbaugh is a sheep raiser and he is well known in Pierre, Fort Pierre and other towns in Hughes county. Some time ago Alsbaugh was arrested on a charge of murder and the sensational death of Andrew Bruhn, a cattle man, was the cause of the arrest. Bruhn was found dead on the Chicago, Milwaukee and St. Paul railway near Fort Pierre, and the coroner's jury found that he had been murdered. Alsbaugh was arrested and held under the body of the murdered man. Bruhn had a bunch of cattle and a quantity of money when he left Pierre.

MOUNTAINS AT SOUTH POLE.

Most of Antarctic Region Is Land, Not Water, Is Believed.

President Roosevelt on the 12th received the following cablegram from Captain Scott, commanding the British antarctic ship Discovery, dated "Off the antarctic region in a south east gale, 12 miles from land, 8 a. m.": "Yesterday proved extremely fine with a light southerly breeze and continuous sunshine. We sighted land at 10 a. m. and 2 p. m. We steered towards it and at 6 p. m. we were within 20 miles of it. We saw a range of mountains, the highest of which we estimate at 8,000 feet, with a great glacier stretching from it to the sea. We named the highest point Mount Markham and the point of land Cape Adare. We have proved that the Ross sea is not a bay, but that there is land to the south and west of it. We hope to be able to land and secure specimens."

WRONG SIGNAL CAUSES WRECK.

Two Men Killed on Erie Road Near Ashtabula.

A misunderstanding of signals caused the wreck of a freight train on the Erie Railroad in a cut near Ashtabula, Ohio, on Friday night. Both engineer W. H. White of Meadville and fireman Frank Lyons of Meadville were killed. The men had been held on the Erie road for the Erie freight to pass them. The men had been given a green light and supposed it was a signal to go ahead, and when they came around a curve they found the Erie freight coming in the same track they were on. The engines collided and both were wrecked.

At Onaway an employe in the pest house and two of the inmates got whiskey and made themselves bitterly drunk. The patients decided that life in the hospital was too low, so they escaped and made a tour of the saloons. Officers drove them into a physician's office, and special deputies were sworn to keep them under restraint until they were marched back to the pest house. A pint of peppermint was secured, and all concerned will be prosecuted as soon as the patients recover from the disease.

Mrs. McDowell, of Charlevoix Review, has torn down the old log cabin on her property. The cabin is an old landmark to yesteday having occupied its position long before the beginning of Petoskey history. The old structure, said to have been built some eighty years ago by the Mormons, bears a history scarcely suggested by its unpretentious exterior. The Indians who at various times have made their homes in that neighborhood, and the old pioneer grey headed relicsing all say that the cabin is a reminiscence of the earliest days, and in fact it dates beyond the confines of their memory.

Benzinia has a lion that claims the state championship. This week she laid an egg that measures seven inches three-quarters or eight and three-sixteenths inches in circumference, and weighed five and seven eighth ounces. When cracked of the egg was blown out nothing but the white part of the egg appeared, and upon examination it was found that the shell contained a second egg, fully developed, with a very hard shell. This was transferred and found to nestle in the yolk. The double egg was as large as a common egg and it took four eggs of good size to make the weight of the double egg.

CHAPTER IV.

A silver overcast morning dawned upon the sight of Mrs. Conway's bell. In spite of it the lady rose early. She had not slept at all, and, tired as she decreased, she roamed over the dissolving views from which the sweetness were blown removing the debris of the evening entertainment. Hours sooner she expected to see her nephew arrive, and as the day drew on she failed to present himself her expectations looked forward to night and she sent a messenger into Norfolk as the National Hotel, for some tidings of the truant, only to return after him. The boy's well, there was no news, he had gone back to his home. He came here the lady's promise and "Good night."

"Did you see him, Julia?"

"I saw his servant, and told him the hands to his master, imperatively ing, the, and he would be here on the post-boarded on him. Yes—to my as how he will be here in an hour to see you on-morrow."

He was the gay that evening, ready to take his master's horse when he carried up the steps of the mansion at sunset. The servants had all been sore fully transported when Miss Bernard off to Europe without the great wedding that the lady had planned, and when Miss Bess Stevens blossed and Miss Grace, and the other of the bridal party, were tempo having seen deep counsel from master to lady, and the shadow lurking hardly doubt, who was the most charming of the ladies, and the most fine gentleman who was fascinating food for so much speculation and conjecture. Meanwhile, guest, beauties of a sit, walked on up the stairs and into the room of his expectant host. She came forward, very smiling, very gracious and possible anyone she felt under an appearance of offence. She began to see their responsibilities and were sure that was no danger of quibbling, with the young fellow in the corner.

"I trust you are feeling very after your fatigue of last evening," he pleasantly observed, as they shook hands.

"Oh, I cannot say that I am. I hardly so clever, old I'm worried and sore from exposure and cold. Sore throat, too, almost sore, my poor lady."

"That is sad, indeed, and unusual, long thirsty. I am sorry for your sake, I don't want it a man would, very her indeed, to increase the object of a woman's pity.

What a strange good lie was it! Accustomed to the sweet, sunny face, and not Jathom him this evening. She faded at her beauty in her eyes, and wondered what. He grew restless under her gaze, and felt his position so that he light should not stroke on his features.

"Did you see Miss Bess, Julia?" he said, as I expected to be well with a silver dry laugh.

"Yes, I saw her for a moment."

"Did she?" she answered. "I sent for you because I wanted to see you alone, and I want you to stay with me if you will. I have been so lonely here with no one to talk to, and I am so tired of my life. Will you stay?"

"Why, I am sorry to resume it." "Oh, I am sorry, too, I mean I sent for you because this is your home, and I want you to stay with me if you will. It is very lonely here with no one of my kindred, friend, and I am getting to be quite an old woman now. Why cannot you give me a little of your time and affection for my long remaining years?"

"And Conway, I have very little affection to give to any one, I fear, I'm dead to our home. I came home on full of noble reasons, to be full of hope, this my downfall was almost benumbed reason from my mind, and I am so far on nothing. I fear I cannot even give you that, I over it to myself, and I am more than all to the wife of Reverse Wilson, to take myself away from home, where I know I can never well my injustice to her, and my cowering life away."

"You shall not talk so—shall not leave our home. Mrs. Wilson shall not leave you to neighborhood throw—nay, from home for her sake—no, I shall not go again. Norfolk is nearly large enough for you to do without crossing the path of each other. As for what happened last night, it was no more than all to and soon to forgotten. Stay with me, Bruce, you are planed for this place. Norfolk offs will soon teach you to forgive Mrs. Wilson."

"Forget her! It is likely, when the consolidated family of Norfolk is the lovely Mrs. Wilson, the brilliant Mrs. Wilson, the accomplished Mrs. Wilson, the Mrs. Anne Conway, you cannot dissociate me from my injurious conduct. Forgive her, indeed! I can learn to be a saint, Hermione, for the sake of your love, but the pledge myself to forget her as an humiliation and a disgrace."

His face looked at him, her regret and pain gone, in a moment. He took her hand, as she spoke, as stands as he spoke. The thought of the wrong she had done, the thought of the wrong she had taken full well. She had known of her power, she had exercised it, she had sinned against. The servants had all been sore fully transported when Miss Bernard off to Europe without the great wedding that the lady had planned, and Miss Grace blossed and Miss Bess Stevens having seen deep counsel from master to lady, and the shadow lurking hardly doubt, who was the most charming of the ladies, and the most fine gentleman who was fascinating food for so much speculation and conjecture. Meanwhile, guest, beauties of a sit, walked on up the stairs and into the room of his expectant host. "I trust you are feeling very after your fatigue of last evening," he pleasantly observed, as they shook hands.

"Oh, I cannot say that I am. I hardly so clever, old I'm worried and sore from exposure and cold. Sore throat, too, almost sore, my poor lady."

"That is sad, indeed, and unusual, long thirsty. I am sorry for your sake, I don't want it a man would, very her indeed, to increase the object of a woman's pity.

What a strange good lie was it! Accustomed to the sweet, sunny face, and not Jathom him this evening. She faded at her beauty in her eyes, and wondered what. He grew restless under her gaze, and felt his position so that the light should not stroke on his features.

"Did you see Miss Bess, Julia?" he said, as I expected to be well with a silver dry laugh.

"Yes, I saw her for a moment."

"Did she?" she answered. "I sent for you because this is your home, and I want you to stay with me if you will. It is very lonely here with no one of my kindred, friend, and I am getting to be quite an old woman now. Why cannot you give me a little of your time and affection for my long remaining years?"

"And Conway, I have very little affection to give to any one, I fear, I'm dead to our home. I came home on full of noble reasons, to be full of hope, this my downfall was almost benumbed reason from my mind, and I am so far on nothing. I fear I cannot even give you that.

TAUGHT THE PRINCE A LESSON.

Young Woman Administered Stinging Rebuke to Germany's Future Ruler.

"A nod is as good as a wink to a blind horse," says the proverb, but some people are so obtuse that nothing less than a sledge hammer will impress them. Such a person seems to be the young crown prince of Germany. An American girl was recently traveling on the continent. It was during the emperor's regatta that Miss Bonnie Willard, a Philadelphia girl, was introduced to the crown prince at a dinner on the water. They were all sitting on deck, the conversation touching, when a whiff of the smoke from the prince's cheroot blew into the young lady's face.

"Smoke willows flourish," remarked a lieutenant across the way.

"It is so flowery," remarked the prince pensively. "It is a tobacco."

Miss Willard raised her eyes a little. "Do that again," she said, "I had best retire hurriedly or I shall be devoured."

The party saw the point; the prince was discomfited.

REAL QUALITIES OF WORTH.

Loyalty, Charity and Generosity Most to Be Praised.

As a man arrives older he perceives that the moral qualities are worth a good deal more in friendship than the intellectual qualities, and that no brilliancy of mind can charm of conversation can make up for lack of loyalty, charity and generosity in social intercourse. Young men of twenty or thirty, who think cleverness the flower in either people, and it is a human quality to forgive much in men and women of genius. This is a false appreciation of the respective values of mentality and the moral qualities. The time comes when a man learns that unselfishness and affection are better in wife or friend than intellectual power accompanied by fretfulness. Infinite fortunate the man who does not come to this knowledge too late.—San Francisco Bulletin.

"THE WOMAN IN BUSINESS."

She Explains Difference Between Engagement and Wedding Rings.

"As a new woman" he said "I suppose you will object to the wedding ring as a symbol of man's tenancy."

"Of course I shall," she replied. "Under no circumstances would I consent to wear such a thing. It is too essential to a marriage, and it stands for all that is objectionable in the marriage relation."

"And on the same theory," he continued, "I suppose you will refuse to wear an engagement ring also."

"Well—no," she answered slowly and thoughtfully. "That's a very different matter."

"But theoretically it—"

"There is no use arguing," she interrupted. "I don't care what it is theoretically. Practically it is very attractive, and I like to wear it. The wedding ring is a diamond, while the wedding ring is only gold, and that makes all the difference in the world."

FOUND THEM HARD TO RAISE.

Slight Mistake Made by a Lover of Lettuce.

A great gardener, who had a passion for lettuce, which he ate at lunch and a large share of money. He had been extravagant, and his friends were nearly crazy at his funeral. Mr. H. Barry, in "Team at Home," tells to what end the money was devoted.

I went to town one day and soon learned that the prince was in his usual impecunious condition.

"Where has your legacy gone?" I asked.

"Why," he replied, "you know that I am very fond of lobsters, and having a river on my estate, I thought I would try to acclimatize them there, but, unfortunately I have spent all the legacy in the attempt without succeeding. The game forgot the water in its salt." Youth's Companion.

NO ONE TO DO IT.

How Horace Greeley Quelled a Railroad Magnate.

Speaking of the traditional policy of the United States concerning South American affairs, Prof. John B. Clark of Columbia university tells a story attributed to Horace Greeley.

The English man of a conservative television, Mr. Greeley and an eminent Englishman on some diplomatic question in which the United States had asserted itself with some forcefulness, and Mr. Greeley remarked:

"The trouble with us is that we want a cash good lickings."

"Yes, Mr. Greeley, you do," replied the Englishman. But his exhilaration was short-lived, for Greeley broke in, as if finishing his former sentence:

"But there ain't any one can do it."—New York Times.

Imitates Mrs. Astor.

A certain comic opera soprano in New York is causing much concern to Mrs. John Jacob Astor by imitating that young fashion leader in every way possible. In dress, walk, carriage and manner does the stage celebrity show this "innerved form of flattery." The climax came last week when the woman of footlights added to her stage accoutrements a loose cover of fine seal leather with the Astor coat wrought inconspicuously in brass in one corner. Every one waited for the footlights queen to do likewise. The next time she appeared her dress was covered by a leather trap plugs. But the crest was as big as a saucer.

The Ruler of Morocco.

The Sultan of Morocco is described as a progressive, young man whose misfortunes are quite undeserved. Though he grew up in the enclosure of an Oriental palace and had no real education from the western point of view, he has shown all the strongest influence of early training and is keen to acquire knowledge. Europeans who have visited his court have been struck by his unusual intelligence, and they say he actually does possess a much more big acquaintance with the practical side of modern affairs.

Grip

Brought On Sciatic Rheumatism.

Nervous Prostration Followed.

Dr. Miles' Nervine Gave Back Health.

"I was laid up during the winter of 98-99 with Sciatic Rheumatism and nervous prostration, being unable to walk without two crutches. The rheumatic pains were so severe at times that it was impossible for me to turn in bed. I was unable to sleep. I had two of our best physicians in attendance, took all the advertised remedies for troubles of this kind but got no help whatever until I tried Dr. Miles' Nervine. The first bottle received gave me decided benefit. I am better than for years, in fact am entirely relieved. I can say with a clear conscience that it was Dr. Miles' Restorative Nervine that restored me to health. When the pains—sciatic and rheumatism were most severe I received great relief from using Dr. Miles' Anti-Pain Pills. I have used your Nervine in many people.—Fred Myers, Rodney, N. Y.

"I was taken with pain in my head and under the left shoulder, with such severe pressed feeling in my chest that I could hardly breathe. I had palpitation of the heart and my head would so that it would almost burst. I was so nervous that I felt as if I should go to pieces if my heart. My doctor treated me for liver and stomach trouble but I failed to receive any benefit until a friend recommended Dr. Miles' Heart Cure and Restorative Nervine. I saw both and used two of the Anti-Pain Pills. I believe it is the most valuable and permanent cure.—Mrs. Angie Gooding, Jamestown, N. Y.

"A person gave me a pamphlet on Dr. Miles' Remedies. Never forgive back on Nervous and Heart Diseases. Address Dr. Miles Medical Co., Elkhart, Ind.

HOUSTON COULD ACT FRENCH.

How Famous Governor of Texas Received French Minister.

Representative Hunter Wollitt was telling Gen. Sam Houston stories recently, says the Washington Post. He pointed out that Houston was the first nation to recognize the Texas republic. A Minister was sent to the capital, which was then Houston. The minister knew no English and President Houston could speak nothing but Cherokee and English. An interpreter was sent for. When introduced the minister had his first audience with President Houston. The minister came in bowing and scraping the floor with his chapeau. He made a speech of fifty minutes. President Houston stood and bow closely and when it was time for him to respond he made one or twelve of the most profound bows, each time sweeping the floor with his cowboy hat. When turning to the interpreter Houston said, "Tell the Frenchman that if I can't speak French I can act French."

Legally Qualified.

An old man with a sprightly patriarch stepped up to asked, "How long have you resided in this country?" asked one of the judges of the election. "Let me see," said the old man, musingly, "I moved here the next year after Lincoln was born. Given from nine leaves two. Right from sixteen is eight. Due to carry. Two from nine is seven. Something over two years, gentlemen—I am old enough to vote, so—if anybody cement ask you." Whereupon, there being no objection, Methusaleh—for he was Methuselah—walked to repeat his ballot.—Chicago Tribune.

Amos Shaffer of Pittsburg Pa. has just passed his one hundred and fifth birthday. He was a Hessian slave in the battle of Yorktown. When he married his first wife, who was a spinster and owned a farm, he drove to her house with a coach and four, found her in a chair sitting a cow, held as comfortable over her quite his produced in a manner most unconventional—for it was entirely any wedding her next day. USED BY JOHN BROWN

HIS COTTAGE AT TABOR, IOWA, IS BURNED.

Building Was Headquarters While Making Raids Among Slaves in Nebraska and Kansas Former Finds Portrait in Pile of Rubbish.

The historic cottage used by the famous John Brown the abolitionist as his headquarters in 1857 while on his forays against slavery in Nebraska and Kansas, was burned last week. Nothing but the chimneys remained to marking each among the slave hunters in Missouri and other South states. These states were keenly on the trail of John Brown and were of why friends of Brown. Later they were sent to Tabor, Iowa, and thereby hangs a tale of a wonderful escape. The cottage was built by Brown and his sons and called the "Underground Railroad."

In connection with the "underground railroad" Brown managed to secure considerable money and was able to help helpless a runaway field which was on his way to Canada. Traverse City Eagle: From information which has just become public and which is believed to be quite authentic, it is extremely doubtful whether the much-talked-of big car ferry will operate this summer between Northport and Manistique.

This news is true will shatter the dreams of Northport of becoming an important lake port but the indications now are that the Northern Lumber Iron Co. has aspired too high. There are two reasons for fearing that the Traverse City, Leelanau & Manistique railroad will not have a ferry connection with Manistique. A Grand Rapids & Indiana official in Grand Rapids is authority for the statement and there is a block delaying negotiations between his road and H. H. Metheany for the purchase of the Leelanau, the Manistique, Marquette & Northern, in the upper peninsula. It is said that Metheany is trying to hold up the G. R. & I. for more than the road is really worth. The G. R. & I. recently acquired the Manistique and Grand Rapids railroad running from Manistique to Tustin on the main line of the G. R. & I., a little south of Cadillac. If the Manistique-Marquette & Northern is purchased the big car ferry now being built by the American shipbuilding Co. at Cleveland, and Manistique. The reason for believing that this may be done is a plausible one. On the Walton branch of the G. R. & I. there are several grades which assume the nature of hills. These are formidable in considering the hauling power of locomotives and would be an objection to handling large freight trains, which would result from running the car ferry between Northport and Manistique. By operating the transfer between Manistique and Manistique the freight trains could be run over the Manistee & Grand Rapids to Tustin This would make a longer trip by total and a shorter trip by train, which would reduce the expense of handling the freight. The Traverse City, Leelanau & Manistique railroad will, of course, be completed at once but instead of being a link in an extensive system, it will probably become only a local road. In this capacity it will still be almost as valuable to Traverse City, as it would if it were a through line. It will bring much into direct communication with Leelanau County. The chief cause for extreme feeling here about the change in plans since the construction of the road was begun a year ago [illegible]

The Salt City, it now seems, will score another point on the Gem City by stealing hot upper peninsula lakes road.

Spring is here. The farmers in this vicinity are getting a good start with their work. Feed is plenty and every thing looks promising. The farmers are securing the best machinery and crops will be put in, in good time.

The beet industry is new in this section but is looked upon with a good deal of interest, and will certainly be one of the best money making industries of the country.

The Sugar company are leasing all the good land they can get and paying a good rent for the same and outlook for the season is encouraging for both Sugar Company and farmer.

A very pleasant affair occured at the home of Mr. and Mrs. Chris Trimble on Friday evening April 23 it being the 25th anniversary of their wedding day. About fifty friends and neighbors gathered in, and presented them with a nice selection of silver ware. Dancing and all enjoyed themselves. A nice lunch was served, and all departed for home, leaving many good wishes for Mrs. and Mr. Trimble. They have both for themselves and family one of the best homes in this part of the country.

Reports say that Mr. Peter Block will run the choice factory this season, and pay the farmers a good price for their milk.

W. E. Clark is still working for the Sugar Co. leasing land and looking after their interests in this township.

CHAPTER V.

Grace Winslow remained in her room long after everybody else was asleep. Her mind was in a state of confusion. She could hardly think in the midst of blinding scenes, and broken dreams that had fallen around her. She had never felt herself remote in the room, and the gaslight burning dim and low through the closed shutters and lace curtains. Her sight, as she lay with clasping arms in her warm, white cool. She refused to think of anything, only to sink back wearily with a dull, fevered throbbing in her temples, into the soft cushions of the pillows.

"Is it worth the trouble?" she whispered to herself. "Let wonder where I be and what I do, when I am dead, laying my cold, weary arm on the pillow by my side, and my head on the pillow beside me. My father or a stranger, who will care? Who will care about me? Who will care for me? Who will care for me? Who will care for

HANNA AND HIS HASH.

Solicitude of a Serving Man Lest He Indulge in It Too Freely.

As is generally known, Senator Hanna is fondnessly fond of corn beef hash, and whenever he takes leave of the capital restaurant he orders that dish, which he has taught the cook to prepare in a manner peculiarly his own. As a result he has had many imitators and "second best" is a little na" be a favorite luncheon dish with many senators. Years ago, the head waiter of the senate restaurant, wants it produced with unusual care he ordered it this way:

"One normal beef hash for Senator Hanna."

The restaurant was doing a great business one day, and everybody seemed to want normal beef hash. Therefore when the order for "normal beef hash for Senator Hanna" was shouted to the cook. When the 31 hearth order was down there was a rumbling noise in the kitchen and the job abolished.

"That's fifteen orders for Senator Hanna. He better catch one or he'll become biased."

Insane Doctor Was Wanted.

A doctor at Hinsville, Ohio, was subpoenaed lately by the probate court. There was no room for him at either of the state asylums, so he was taken to the county jail in West Union. A few days ago a detention jib Hinsville appeared before the probate judge and asked that the doctor be sent home pending his admission to the asylum. He made an unusual amount of progress in his vicinity, said the spokesman "we have great confidence in our old doctor and we want him to come back and resume his work. The request was granted and the old doctor returned to Hinsville and resumed his practice.

States in an Argument.

"South Carolina" observes the Nashville American, "always was an obstreperous and impudent little state. It fired the first gun in a war for which it furnished less than half as many soldiers as Tennessee supplied." To which the Charleston News and Courier replies: "It is largely the fun half of South Carolina's having been an 'obstreperous and impudent little state' in the early history of the country that Tennessee or any state can beyond it ever became any kind of state. Never forget that. At this stage of the controversy South Carolina is a little afraid.

Strenuous Demands of Society.

Nervousness, cause of nervous breakdown among women in New York and Washington, including, when all the precedents are broken, the attorney general, call attention to the circumstance that no one only of wealthy women but of well-to-do. If there were places in this country round called "inns" where would be more excuse for it. But there is none. The same people who one day after day, compare notes of the last ball or dinner and directly speculate upon the next, exhibits the jewels and gowns and years for last night and to a tremor upon its coming, and merely a period of rest and preparation for new task that came to nothing.

Gen. Grosvenor's Sobriquet.

Representative Champ Clark has a new sobriquet for Gen. Grosvenor, who he has spoken of before as the brown. "Lon is Gen. says Mr. Clark "and even beyond the confines of that state my friend bears the sobriquet of 'Old Figures.' The other day I happened to be standing alone in the hall by the postoffice. An old employee of the House was talking to a 'reporter.' The General swept by in his majesty, tenderly fondling his prodigious head, and the old employee said to the newsmen: 'There goes the wind bag of arithmetic'."

A Valentine.

Selfish Tariff Reformers.

The present tariff law more fully subserves the interests of all classes than any ever enacted in this country. It protects the manufacturer from competition of cheap manufactured goods from abroad, and at the same time protects the producer from this competition. Item of all it protects American labor from the competition of the cheaper labor of other countries, whether used to produce cloth or shoes or wheat or barley and cattle and wool.

The discussion is attention in consequence that the farmers are seeing that "the great protected manufacturing concerns of the East are quite far more out of the tariff than they do." The farmers of the West are satisfied with the present conditions which are the best they have ever had. They are satisfied that the prosperity of the Eastern manufacturers and the employment of thousands of workingmen is a factor in the prosperity of the farmers, as the increased consumption of our products shows.

Says the Oregonian: "Half the woolen corporations in the country are themselves now, and for months have been carrying on a campaign against the tariff reduction through reciprocity treaties, for free hides and free wool.

This is true. But will the Oregonian point out one of these corporations that has demanded a reduction of the duty on manufactured products? They are not one. Their demands are rather, not to comply with them would be to work injury upon other classes to secure a harmony that profit—Helena (Mont.) Record.

"If it hadn't been for Dr. Miles' Remedies I would not be here to write this letter. Two years ago last June I lost the use of my left arm, could not use it and could only move it a little way, of my right hand. My heart was so weak I could not do a single night's work and could not walk a mile without stopping. I was so weak that I could not walk without staggering like a drunken man and my heart fluttered so I could do nothing for me. I was in so much pain I was almost wild. I consulted the physicians as they made me worse. Then I read your book and I thought I had all the symptoms and I thought I would try your remedies. I took two bottles of your Nervine and I found it helped me so much I kept on using it. I also used your Heart Cure and Nervine and the two bottles I used in all cured me. I write to let Miss Medicine Co. by advertisement in the letter. I can now make that I am glad I did so I am a woman now; can work and can walk two miles and not stop to rest. I can do my work and I am well as ever. I can do not go to bed. I shall I am for those grand medicines, Dr. Miles' Restorative and Nervine. CRUELTY IN ASYLUM.

BRUTAL PUNISHMENTS METED OUT TO PATIENTS.

Investigation Started by Attendants' Complaints Served a Startling Exposition of a Reign of Terror for Fines for Violation of Trivial Rules.

As the result of an investigation into charges of alleged cruelty on the part of the attendants of the Northern Insane Asylum, situated about eight miles from this city, which appeared in the Sentinel two weeks ago, Dr. Ira Ward, superintendent of the institution, has been made acquainted with a state of affairs which, if the charges are true, should be at once corrected and the guilty parties dealt with in such a manner as will prevent a recurrence of the cruelties which have been made public. According to the statement of several attendants who at the request of some of complainants put themselves in the hands of the writer, a reign of terror has existed for some time in the institution, the patients of which are treated with a severity which, if the charges are true, should be visited upon the heads of those who have been guilty of the cruelties complained of.

The charges made by the attendants are to the effect that patients who are guilty of the slightest infraction of the rules are dragged from their rooms and beaten with a heavy strap, and that this form of punishment is administered by the attendants without any regard as to the extent of the injuries received by the victim. Instances are cited where patients have been so severely beaten that their bodies were black and blue from the effects of the blows received, and that they were for days afterward in a condition which made it impossible for them to move from their beds. Instances are also cited where patients who have been guilty of the slightest infraction of the rules have been compelled to pay fines of from $5 to $10 for the privilege of being allowed to remain in the institution. Cases are also cited where patients who have been guilty of the slightest infraction of the rules have been placed in a room with a temperature so low that they were almost frozen before they were released from the place of punishment. Cases are also cited where patients who have been guilty of the slightest infraction of the rules have been compelled to stand for hours in a position which was so painful that they were unable to sleep for days afterward, and many other cases of cruelty are cited which are too numerous to mention in this article.

The charges made by the attendants have created a great deal of excitement among the people of this city and vicinity, and if the charges are true there will be a general demand that the guilty parties be

NORTHERN MICHIGAN.

Prof W. M. Andrus of Petoskey who was offered the position of superintendent of schools at Holland, Mich., has signed a two-year contract to remain in the Resort town, at an increase of $100 in salary.

Traverse City Eagle. H. B. Mcheany, president of the T. C. L. & M., in company in Superintendent W. R. Stimson and Chief Engineer Barnes of the G. R. & I., returned this morning by boat from Northport after a tour of inspection of the roadbed, which they found in good condition.

The Petoskey Coffay & Food Co., limited, has been organized and papers filed. The capital stock of the company is $300,000, divided into 30,000 shares of $10 each. The company has bought the plant and full equipment of the Nut Fruit Coffay Co. at Ypsilanti, and the same will be moved to Petoskey very soon. The plant now has a capacity of 3,000 pounds of coffee and 2,000 pounds of fruit flakes and will be increased as the demand requires.

The G. R. & I. will construct a new road running northwest from the main line at Boyne Falls for use in marketing logs and lumber. This road will be built under an agreement with Cobbs & Mitchell of Cadillac, the G. R. & I. contributing $4,500 towards the construction of 44 miles of track. The G. R. & I. has further agreed to contribute $1,000 per mile up to 17 miles as construction proceeds into the timber. By this extension from Boyne Falls a timber district containing 75,000,000 feet is tapped, the logs from which are to be hauled over the G. R. & I. to Cadillac, sawed into lumber there and reshipped. The G. R. & I. is to have the exclusive haul of the product.

"The roadbed stood the winter and spring rains well," said Mr. Mcheany to The Daily Eagle." There isn't really a washout on the line. It is in good shape for laying steel, which will begin at Hatch's crossing next week. It will be laid at the rate of about a mile a day. Mr. Mcheany stated that the car ferry, Manistique, Marquette & Northern No 1, has been completed at Cleveland and is now ready for business. He mentioned that she would be put on the Northport-Manistique run and that the dock at Northport would be built this summer. Asked what would be done with the boat in the meantime, he said: "We don't intend to let her lie idle for three months."

Daniel W. Kaufman declared this morning that the Manistique, Marquette, & Northern car ferry No. 1 will undoubtedly run between Northport and Manistique, connecting the Traverse City, Leelanau & Manistique and Manistique, Marquette & northern railroads. The time when she will go on this route, he says, will only be delayed until the docks are built at Northport and Manistique. "The new car ferry has been leased to the Wabash Railroad Co," said Mr. Kaufman this morning, "but under the agreement that it must be returned to us on 24 hours' notice. Our own crew is on board and will remain with the Wabash, running between Frankfort and Manitowoc. The car ferry is owned by the Manistique, Marquette & Northern Railroad Co. and will undoubtedly go on the Northport run." Mr. Kaufman stated that he had never tried to sell or lease the car ferry to any line but he said the Pere Marquette had made overtures for leasing her. The dock at Northport cannot be built for some time as timber has to be brought in. Work on laying steel on the T. C. L. & M. has been delayed, he said, because angle bars and spikes have not arrived, although they were paid for six weeks ago. Some of the material has been over seven weeks on the way. The angle bars just arrived this morning.—Eagle.

A Delightful Prison.

It is very doubtful if there is anywhere a more delightful prison than that of Tobel in Switzerland. There are very few guards, not more than one to twenty-five prisoners, and they never think of carrying arms. The prisoners rolls are constantly open, so that the inmates can easily tell at any time what the guards are doing. Moreover, the prisoners are allowed to have paper ink, newspapers, cider and various dainties from the kitchen, including fried eggs of which they are very fond.

Male Teachers Decreasing.

The number of men employed as teachers in the public schools of this country, according to United States Commissioner of Education Harris is slowly but steadily decreasing. In 1870 41 per cent of the teachers were males and in 1900 the percentage had fallen to 29. The reason for the abandonment of school teaching by men is that it does not pay well enough.

Is It Fair?

Is it fair to reduce protective duties on sugar and keep them up on products of American manufacture, which successfully compete with foreign goods in foreign markets? And as for the plea for suffering Cuba—there is no suffering Cuba."—San Francisco Argonaut.

Is it fair? That question is going to be asked many times and in many places in the event that the ruling powers of this country shall decide to select the agricultural interests to bear alone the burden of so-called "reciprocity." The farmers of this country who grow sugar, tobacco and fruits are very certain to inquire why it is that their products are subjected to foreign competition for the sole benefit of manufacturers, whose protection is in no way disturbed. It will be an awkward question to answer.

Retaliation May Be Necessary.

The loss of German's meat purchases from this country, contemplated by the proposed German tariff, will seriously injure the export meat trade of this country, reducing it twenty-five per cent. It is to be hoped that the injury can be averted by the exercise of wise statesmanship on the part of German leaders, but if it cannot the United States will undoubtedly be driven to the adoption of retaliatory legislation. This would cripple Germany far more than the protected German tariff affects this country, and would probably have the ultimate result of bringing that country to terms. It is hoped, however, that such measures will not become necessary.—Terre Haute Tribune.

The election for mayor of New York will be held next November. Mr. Brooks also says that should Judge Parker be nominated for president by the Democrats he (Brooks) will be ready to bet $50,000 that the candidate named will carry New York state.

"Free" Coal a Delusion.

The action of Congress in putting coal upon the free list for one year is not likely to afford the relief to consumers in Eastern cities that was anticipated from the passage of that bill. It is now said that the supply of foreign coal that will be attracted to the American market by the remission of the duty will be infinitesimal, compared with the demand and when the cost of transportation is added to the foreign price, it will be impossible to sell this coal in New York or Boston for much less than nine or ten dollars a ton.

The trade has not thought at any time that the removal of the duty from coal would be of any marked benefit to the people in this country. The fact of the matter is that, while there was a nominal duty on anthracite coal, it was not a protective duty in any sense, for the reason that, duty or no duty, there could be no serious competitions between Welsh coal and that mined in Pennsylvania in any of the markets of this country. That was proved last fall, when prices running as high as twenty-five dollars a ton failed to attract any considerable shipments of Welsh coal to this market.

The coal trust has not been fostered by protection. It has grown up as the result of a monopoly of the production and transportation of coal, and no possible foreign competition could have prevented it. But the people thought the Pennsylvania operators were given an advantage in the tariff to which they were not entitled, and Congress satisfied the popular demand by repealing the tariff for one year. It will have little or no effect.—Cleveland Leader.

And Yet.

The number of sheep in the United States has increased twenty millions since the repeal of the Wilson tariff. And yet, according to the Democratic prophets, the protection coal which our industrial engine is now using is sending it straight to the devil with the brakes off and throttle wide open. Head us, somebody! Police!—Moravine Falls (N. Y.) Yellow Jacket.

Evident.

It is more evident every day that American interests, whether in raw material or manufactured goods, must stand together or fall together. It is more evident every day that American interests must read reciprocity laws with a great deal of care to avoid being crushed in the transaction.—Des Moines Capital.

THEIR PORTION.

American Labor's Share in the Benefits of Protection Prosperity.

It is announced from Chicago, under date of Feb 1, that on April 1 an increase of wages will be paid by the Pullman Palace Car company to every man employed in the works. Nearly 8,000 men are affected, and more than $70,000 will be added to the company's pay roll each month. One thousand extra men will be employed to do the work performed in the ten-hour day by the old force. Under the old schedule the men worked sixty hours a week. Under the new system they will work fifty four hours a week and will have their Saturday afternoons off.

Lacking only a few weeks of nine years ago the Pullman Palace Car company did precisely the opposite thing. It put in force a sweeping reduction in the pay of its great army of employes, and because they refused to accept the lower wages a great strike resulted which cost the country a vast amount of money, and very nearly plunged this republic into the abyss of anarchy. This wage reduction and this strike followed a little more than a year after the inauguration of a free-trade President backed up by a free-trade majority in both houses of Congress. The free-trade tariff law cooked up by Wilson and Gorman had not yet been enacted, but it was known to be coming, and its effects on all industry, all labor, all trade, all commerce, all business were already in full force. It was not the passage of the Wilson-Gorman tariff, but the anticipation of it, that carried the country into the most prolonged and devastating period of paralysis and ruin that it had ever experienced.

The obverse of the picture is now presented. It shows 8,000 Pullman company wage earners working shorter hours and receiving as much pay as they did for working longer hours. It shows that these 8,000 workers have come into their share of protection and prosperity.

The Big Obscured by the Little.

Cuba's trade with the United States per year $90,000,000, Germany's trade with the United States per year, $190,000,000.

Neighborly Neglect.

Every one knows the dislike of the country person to interfere with his neighbors. A good instance has just occurred in the Midlands. Farmer Jarvis, driving to market, saw through the open door of a barn the body of a neighbor suspended from a beam, and drove on, revolving the tragedy. When he reached the market town he imparted the news with deliberate emphasis. "Good heavens!" exclaimed the other, "and did you cut him down?" "No," said the farmer more slowly still. "He wasn't dead yet."—London Globe

The Inevitable Effect.

As a tariff law must apply alike to all, as no discrimination can be made in such a law against the combinations, whatever effect the removal of duties might have upon the stronger industries would also reach the weaker ones, and while the former might withstand the consequences and survive the latter could not. If by this course the combinations should be destroyed certainly the independent industries would also be. But only the weaker industries would go to the wall. The stronger ones would remain, and with the competition removed they would grow stronger. The proposed policy, therefore, of striking the industrial combinations through the tariff would result in increasing the opportunities for the creation of monopoly.—Omaha Bee.

STATEMENT RELATIVE TO

CLOSING OF STORES.

The following firms entered into an honorable agreement with others, whereby they were to close their places of business at six o'clock, and some at seven o'clock, except Tuesdays and Saturdays, until the first day of May. The reason this agreement was made, was to lessen the hours of labor of our employes, the justice of which will be appreciated by all organized labor, and by fair minded people generally, from whom we are asking support.

We shall continue to close as agreed, until the first of May, as our business principles would not allow us to do otherwise under existing circumstances:

MARINE NEWS.

The schooner Pentlandshire is here from Cleveland with a cargo of coal for Wilson.

Capt. J. C. Emery has been in Cleveland of the Beaver the past week, Capt. Campbell having business ashore.

Tuesday Tuesday on Monday said his schooner, the Harvey Bassett, to Frank Lundy, of Washington Harbor. The vessel left for that port Tuesday.

Under the new management of the Petoskey Harbor Springs line, Capt. J. C. Emery will run the steamer Hiawatha and Capt. Wright the steamer Light.

Capt. S. P. Coleman and his schooner, the Tom Jones, arrived here on her first trip Saturday. The old schooner commanded by L. A. Burton is also on arrival.

It is noticed that the old schooner E. M. Stanton is moving down at Rock Island. The Stanton was one of the first vessels to come at this port where the lumber was cleared thirty years ago.

Capt. Wm. Hobson of Port Huron, passed to the command of the schooner Tom Hayward, owned by McMillan, of Port Huron. Herbert Hobson goes on watch. The Hayward is a 200 gross ton schooner, and rates A2.

Last Saturday a deal occurred at Harbor Springs, whereby the Cleveland firm of Hoopes, Mosenfelder and the steamers Hoopes and Sunshine, passed into the possession of a Chicago syndicate consisting of C. H. Wilson, F. D. Campbell and Wilson Brown. The new owners will keep the steamers on the Harbor Springs Petoskey run, and Mr. Gill will be the manager as one month with headquarters at Harbor Springs. It is the intention of the new owners to improve the service so that people will always pay the way to any point that they see the steamers in commission.

The new tug Perry, Captain Mac Martin & Northern, No. 1, will run between Frankfort and Manistique after June 1, after the Manistique Herald. The tug made its first trip between Frankfort and Manitowoc, the trip to Manistique being too small to prove to accommodate her. D. D. Rich, of the civil engineer of the Ann Arbor road, will be in charge for work. It is said a larger ship and work will be started soon to make it large enough to accommodate the gigantic craft. She will be also to run between Manistique and Frankfort in the remarkably short time of five hours.

Chicago special: The departure of the schooner Sophia J. Luff with a cargo of coal for Kingston, Canada, today, marks the permanent removal of one of Chicago's schooner fleet this spring. The Luff, as well as the four others formerly named, have been sold to parties not in the Lake Michigan trade, and the boats may never enter this trade again. The once large schooner fleet that hailed from here has now dwindled down to but more 20 craft, a reduction of full half per cent, during the last five years. Lumber now is brought from far up in Lake Superior at rates for transportation that made such voyages prohibitive to schooners. Even on the shorter runs in the lake freight rates have been reduced to a point where owners of sailing craft can make no money, and they are either disposing of their property to persons who have special use for such boats, allowing them to wear out for lack of repair, or fail to replace them when lost in storm. Fifteen years ago Chicago's schooner fleet numbered 400 vessels, and even in the late '70s, when schooners still were carrying the bulk of grain between this port and Buffalo, the fleet numbered nearly 300 vessels.

If you have not been able to get your eyes properly fitted you should see Lesley the optician when he comes May 14th, as he has prepared for any eyes that can be fitted with complete fout days at Hotel Bartlett.

"Last spring my blood seemed clogged up, my digestion poor, my head ached and I felt languid and tired all the time. My physician prescribed for me, but a friend advised me to try Peruna. I tried it and am pleased to state that I found it a wonderful cleanser and purifier of the system. In three weeks I was like a new woman, my appetite had increased, I felt buoyant, light and happy and without an ache or pain. Peruna is a reliable family medicine."

THE SCHOOL AND GRANGE.

Teachers in Rural School Districts Should Join the Grange.

A large proportion of the rural school teachers are men and girls who have been raised on the farm. The latter are of the sort that are the backbone of the grange.

Every month in some Wayfaring Lecture school may present. A teacher in such an organization is of more or less use in organization in the grange.

Petoskey Daily News: Alma Wagley, of Cross Village, was stabbed Saturday night. It is claimed, by John Petoskey, of Harbor Springs. Wagley received a number of serious knife wounds as a result, but will recover. A feud of two years standing, it seems, has been in existence between the two men. Wagley is white and Petoskey a half breed. The existing feud blood between the two culminated Saturday night when the Indian is alleged to have threatened Wagley with the following words: "Wagley will water its sun with blood before long." Wagley gave chase and wanted retraction from the Indian, who in turn as the story goes, met the unfortunate with an open knife. The first thrust opened a gash three inches long in Wagley's cheek. In the attempt to hold the Indian and restrain him from using the knife Wagley's clothing was literally cut to shreds and two more wounds inflicted, one severing the artery in the back of the hand, the other proving formidable in its nature. The young man, he is but 22, will receive quite his wounds. His assailant, who has been incarcerated and was in Harbor Springs the week, Sunday, visited Wagley during some of the former's in the evening, having arrived across the lake in the afternoon. The affair, and the events which led up to it, have been shrouded in the secret peculiar to the Indian character.

Traverse City Eagle: A case which makes the heart of every legitimate sportsman in the state bleed is one of the slaughter of deer now in season in the upper peninsula. Chief game warden Strahan and deputy A. L. Cheeke found the abandoned carcasses of fifty-one deer, all of which in Chippewa county. The animals had been slaughtered, dragged out along and skinned and the meat thrown away. The deputies estimated their search, so close to the guilty parties. They found 125 deer skins and twenty-one heads, some in a warehouse in Sault Ste. Marie. Kilting leaves it the most serious offence of the kind, as it is a crime to kill deer at Manistique or any other Waterworks have been passed and it is expected legislation will be asked for.

Petoskey News: Jamie Kerwin, son of Indian merchant of Cross Village, was perhaps fatally injured by a train Marquette train last night coming in. The train pulls into the town's depot was crossing, throwing out side of the train there happened upon the national road. Kerwin's father, who was with the boy, had just left the train and was walking ahead of the boy when he was struck. The young man was taken to his home and a physician called. The extent of the injuries could not be ascertained last night, but it is thought he will be crippled for life.

SCHOOL COM COLUMN.

The inspector asks us say "Hill from the town pump," which we wrote, "A Hill from the town pump," is our bad mistake. J. V.

What should be the nature of teaching during the first six years of school?

In teaching practical answer to this question, let us consider the aim to be attained by such training.

In no other branch of study is a knowledge of the end to be attained more important than in language, and in no other branch is a wrong end achievable so easily. Hughes gives that was long taught under the definition that the manner gives the learner aid and necessary to the use of language, and the war often laid out as an enticing reward for its early study.

When the so-called "language lessons" supplanted grammar in the lower grades of school, the majority of teachers looked upon these lessons as simply a new manner of teaching grammar and grammatical accuracy of speech and writing was still made the conscious end of study. Pupils were drilled on the recognition of "action words," "object words," "adjectives," "adverb words," etc., with later drills on the manner and use times in action and purpose, the latter and passive forms of verbs with exercises in changing and parsing sentences, in filling blanks, in giving seven words into sentences, etc., and the aim of all this patient work was to transform the pupil to English grammar and time to grind into against the use of Saxon syntax.

Such every indeed of a text book in grammar were, as Hughes says, "unusually free from technical terms, involving series or set form phrases in grammar. With just enough technical to make the language complete. Thus pupil with exercises in pointing sentences using marks, or part pass to drills on "relative pronouns," and thus give a little synthetic work, and this training instead grammar, and simplicities are cared to the end of the broad course.

It is therefore that when the so called language lessons in the schools have widely faced grammar, yet so far as they have trained the art of language, their natural aim has been to develop grammatical accuracy of speech and writing whatever may be form of the grammar results. If these lessons may have taught to give some attention to the art of expression. What is needed is to turn language training in elementary schools right direct and make the first and grammar, for variety of the practical use of language as a means of expression.

The end and object are, to be attained in elementary language instruction.

Pupils in the primary grades should be taught to use the English language in writing, hence the school important aim to be attained in language training in the child is the use of the written forms of words and language.

Oral work is very important, but time for Technical and consider pass Written to the art of teaching which will be one of the learning and practice.

CLOSING OF STORES.

The following firms entered into an honorable agreement with others, whereby they were to close their places of business at six o'clock, and some at seven o'clock, except Tuesdays and Saturdays, until the first day of May. The reason this agreement was made, was to lessen the hours of labor of our employes, the justice of which will be appreciated by all organized labor, and by fair minded people generally, from whom we are asking support.

We shall continue to close as agreed, until the first of May, as our business principles would not allow us to do otherwise under existing circumstances.

I felt comfortable in these old-fashioned rooms, and pleased in the little Miss Bessie, who was so pretty and so gracious to me.

"Thank you, no, you do better," said the Senator, when I had finished my tea. "Bessie, you must be good to Mr. Tullier, for he has been very good to us."

"I hope I may be good to him, too," said the little Miss, with a pretty courtesy to me, and I felt that I should be happy in her company.

"Now, Bessie, you must go to bed," said her father, as she finished her tea; "Mr. Tullier and I have business to talk over, and you must be asleep when we come in."

GERMANY LEADS OFF

PREPARING TO RESIST AMERICAN TRADE DISCRIMINATION.

When the United States Shall Have Granted Special Trade Privileges to Competing Nations Germany will be Ready to Enforce Measures of Retaliation.

Direct and unmistakable confirmation of the prediction of results with European countries at the outcome of the consummation of the proposed reciprocal trade arrangement between the United States and Cuba is at hand in the shape of a Berlin cablegram to the New York Herald dated March 15. The cablegram follows, the certainty of amusing pleasure, constitutional and insurance states as a consequence of Germany's adoption of the policy of reciprocity is conclusively shown has been printed and let Andrew Carnegie in his sense, assuming that his every friend made in such a policy we shall make satisfaction. The Argentine Minister this week presented to Secretary Hay the view as to the disadvantages of such a policy, which is little if the number of its sacrifice of the principle of fair and equal treatment of foreign trade and industry. The report that Germany indicated. This is not to raise material at the Commercial Bureau, Washington, that the Argentine Minister was at the American Ambassador Jackson's and at the American Embassy in Berlin, and that in it is known that among high officials—Chancellor von Bülow there the source of the report is regarded as of importance, but that it had not been confirmed. The Treaty through and by ultimate development of Reciprocity, Germany, from business, these apprehensions have not to be discussed from the Berlin cablegram.

Berlin, March 14, 1902—Germany, Russia, Austria and Italy treats for the United States to be placed at a disadvantage as compared with those countries. It is proposed that Germany shall be placed on the most favorable footing with the United States and the equivalent to the concessions granted to Germany's rivals, in the form of negotiations for commercial treaties have been entered into with the United States, however, in view of the exclusion of the Philippines, powerful influences are at work to induce Germany to make the same concessions to the United States as it has granted to Russia, Austria and Italy, and the Government will be asked to do so.

What the attitude of some countries may be in this should the Cuban treaty be accepted and footed to work out, similar treaties may be arranged by the United States with Mexico, Brazil and Argentina, Germany, as a leader in the United States obtaining a measure of all the South and Central American markets.

It is not to be certain that Germany will not are about to lavish the course indicated in the above report. It is a matter of course that she will ready to find acceptable and substantial compensation, in exchange, calculated to enter the trade monopolizing principles of the United States. We shall find on our part, and very ready to our disposal, that preferential tariff treatment is a case that more than has ever yet, or, and that unless we are prepared to extend to practically the all-comers favors and preferences which we are prepared to extend to Cuba alone, we are treating a case time in time may make which very too to us. It holds as though concessions in competitive positions might to the long run prove a decisive factor than a further up of foreign trade.

It is more than suspected that although the state Department has been advised by our foreign representatives of the negotiations with which the proposed treaty is to be, yet no effort has been made to ascertain the European opinion. It is now said that it was not necessary to bear such offers as an indication and information that Germany would be ready for the Cuban treaty, and yet ultimate development. Germany, however, has learned, from experience, that it has not been to her advantage to be the last to accept the offer of a favorable treaty.

Strong Union Royal Lips.

When Prince Henry of Prussia visited the United States Hotel 3 years ago persons were surprised to see how quickly he picked up American words. In fact, some said with him it was not uncommon to hear such phrases as "make hits," "the hoop-coster," "out of sight" and "go war back and sit down." With other current slang of twelve months ago, none frequently from the royal lips. Therefore no one here is surprised to learn that in speaking of a statement he claims previously made and afterwards Baron Von Sternberg frequently says: "I've bullseye right on the bar."

Lady Curzon's Blunders.

Lady Curzon, wife of the viceroy, is encountering fire on page in her business which has not yet been quite successful. Her wife, and two years ago, in her first year, a "Mogul" in India, the order "Oh, that the queen is Mormon" caused Lady Curzon to make her exit by a Mogul, and the non-commissioned officer, who was replied the viceroy, "I'm sorry, have a cold."

OUR FOREIGN TRADE

LARGE INCREASE BOTH IN IMPORTS AND EXPORTS.

Under Conditions So Satisfactory It Would Seem That Experiments with Our Economic System Are Neither Necessary Nor Desirable.

The export trade of the United States is rapidly resuming its normal conditions, it exhibits the pleasing need of artificial stimulation in the form of special trade treaties. Figures for figures of the Bureau of Statistics show the largest exports of any February in the history of our commerce and show also that the exports of the month exceeded in value the February imports by more than those of the preceding period of any earlier year, the month with the figures also show a combination of the growth which has characterized the year to date. The figures of the eight months ending with February support that the balance of trade in the United States in the fiscal year 1902 will exceed $1,000,000,000 for the second time in our history, the record $1,000,000,000.

The total exports of February above the imports amounted to $1,000,000, which is the largest excess of any preceding February, and exceeds the figures of February, 1901, by $1,000,000. Taking the figures for the eight months ending with February, the total exports are $1,000,000 in excess of the imports, which is the largest excess of any preceding period of the eight months

CAPITOL AT SPRINGFIELD.

Springfield (correspondence).

A mad scramble of men without rhyme or reason, some struck others, others sprang upon their fellows, and yelling like fiends, tumbled over desks, chairs and everything else in their way, was the scene in the Illinois House of Representatives Thursday, by Representatives who, as a rule, are considered quite sane and even dignified. The fight was over the Lively traction bill. Speaker Adam was forced from the chair by the House, and Representative Shanahan, Democrat, was placed in the speaker's chair by his colleagues. Speaker Adam was not disturbed, however, and he quietly walked back to his desk and continued to preside over the House. The Speaker's action in leaving the chair was a ruse to get the House into disorder, so that the Democrats could carry out their plan of action. The Speaker knew that the Democrats had a majority of the House, and he knew that they had decided to take the chair from him and declare a new Speaker. Allen was the man they had selected for Speaker. When the Speaker left the chair Representative Shanahan, Democrat, of Cook, was in the speaker's chair, and he was immediately surrounded by a mob of men, who, yelling like fiends, tumbled over desks and chairs in their way, and made for the Speaker's desk. Representative Shanahan was pushed from the chair, and Representative Allen was placed in the speaker's chair. The Speaker's desk was then

Medical Science Has Almost Entirely Discarded It.

That terrible poison antimony, known most familiarly in the crude pound called tartar emetic, has a very fascinating history. It was introduced into medicine some centuries ago by Paracelsus. Its name signifies that it is "against monks" or some one who it was cried discharged the new familiar experience. NO TARIFF REVISION

PRESIDENT ROOSEVELT DEFINES HIS POSITION.

He Cannot Perceive in Existing Conditions Anything That Calls for Change in Duty Schedule Prior to Presidential Election of 1904.

All doubt as to the attitude of the administration regarding the question of tariff revision has been removed by the events of the past few days. Before starting on his Western tour President Roosevelt had intended to make known in the most emphatic and unmistakable manner his views as to the advisability of any immediate alteration of the Dingley tariff schedules. Preliminary to the speech of the President himself at Minneapolis on the 9th of April, was the speech of Secretary Shaw at Peoria, Ill., March 31, and the speech of Secretary Root before the Home Market club in Boston, April 2. The two cabinet officers served admirably in preparing the way for the official declaration of the President. At Peoria Mr. Shaw pronounced against any and all attempts with the tariff now or in the near future to declare that in his judgment no considerable extent which would justify any attempt at tariff changes and he then went on to make it perfectly clear that such a thing as general revision of the schedules was out of the question. Near the subject to be taken up the whole tariff must be pulverized, Secretary Root joined in exactly the same ground in his Boston speech.

Last and most important of all, President Roosevelt at Minneapolis defined his position and that of the Republican party in vigorous opposition to tariff revision, which is not only for "trade or for any other reason which would not contain some form of protectionism—that the existing tariff schedules are sacred and must be forever left unchanged. The line as it stands contains many inequalities and discriminations and these will some day be corrected according as changes in wealth conditions shall suggest. But not now, claim the said the President, in the view much of all industry and all labor and the tariff mandate should not be changed until it shall have become certain that the alterations to be thereby made will outweigh the damage inflicted upon business by tariff changes. No such condition now exists and the risks that are occasioned should be appreciated rather than overlooked by the members of business vitality were permitted to become the sport of the country a permanent period of tariff tinkering.

The President has spoken plainly and wisely. The country will welcome and approve what he has said. Tariff revision agitation was much for some months a source of real alarm to the business world as evidenced, and it was felt that the President should not himself be a party to adding fuel to the flames that the Republican party will stand for any and every revision that does violence to protection to all labor and all industry.

"GOOD LUCK TO HIM!"

That is How the Free Traders Feel Toward Gov. Cummins.

Democratic and free trade editors seem to be greatly gladdened at the pronounced tariff notion favor of the latest guest of Gov. Cummins. This profess to see in it two things which are most gratifying. First, a new tendency toward lower duties and increased foreign competition, and second, the wonderfully improved prospect of a serious split in the Republican party on the question of tariff protection. The New York Evening Post says:

"Governor Cummins of Iowa stands by his tariff guns. Fresh from conversations at the White House he tells the Republicans of his state that he is more determined than ever to work for the lower level of tariff duties and against the abolition of the Dingley tariff duties and against the abolition of the Dingley tariff duties and against abolishing altogether some that are taken advantage of for the sweet object of enhancing domestic profits, doubtfully by means of contributions higher at home. There is every prospect that he will force upon the Republican party, the Cummins tariff, and he favors making the fight with bold definite issues of some put tenets on the confidence. Therefore, he proposes to retain the tariff reduction made in the few months the last year, and to demand the insertion in the national platform of this. We wish him good luck for he's a bold and fine man! Democrats have the best of it, however, whichever way the tariff goes. If the protectionists get one of the two who is firmly planted on the party's doctrine and clinging to it tenaciously.

"We strongly like Governor Cummins and the Iowa somewhat good luck. Meanwhile, anywhere, whose action is not for tariff tinkering is sure to receive a Christian and a benediction from the thousands of American labor and industry."

Plans to Honor Emerson.

The committee which is raising the fund of $10,000 for the erection of a building for the department of philosophy in Harvard university, as a memorial of Ralph Waldo Emerson, has announced a gift of $1,000 toward that fund from an anonymous benefactor and of $10,000 from another—the former conditioned on the completion of the fund by the committee and the latter on the completion in time to admit of the corner stone being laid in connection with the celebration of the Emerson centennial on May 24. These two gifts bring the total amount now on hand to $420,000.

First of Rhodes' Scholarships.

The Talbot statement that the first two scholarships at Oxford granted under the terms of Mr. Rhodes will have just been awarded by the governors of Rhodesia. Both of the new scholars are Roman Catholics and students of the Jesuit college at Beiswater. In a letter announcing the nominations Lord Grey says a high tribute to the importance of the work which the Jesuit fathers have done in Rhodesia among both white and blacks.

THE NATION'S HEALTH

DO WE NEED TO TAKE TARIFF TINKERING MEDICINE?

Democrats Know Better Than to Talk Much of Tariff Revision—They Leave That to Republicans of the Iowa "Progressive" Persuasion.

When safety existing tariffs are attacked the Democrats in Congress appear to be tied up the tariff question for discussion and exploitation. The agony in the old market, the competitions in Venezuela, Cuba, Japan and China, other market fears have of late been sufficiently effective to keep the tariff in the background and it is probably a question of only a short time when we may expect some tariff talk. And because as it is such, the chief features of what will money being discussed are hypothetical. The Democrats are for revision, the Republicans are against revision, the former are for the experiment, the latter are against the experiment, the former are for revision because of the country's need, the latter are against revision because the country's need is not in evidence. The Democrats are for revision because they believe it will be a period of business and industrial depression, the Republicans are against it because they believe it will be a period of business and industrial prosperity

SCHOOL COM. COLUMN.

House Bill No. 34 changing the date of the August and March examinations to the second Thursdays of those months has become a law and has been given immediate effect. Consequently the August examination of this year will begin on August 13. The State Teachers Institute will begin on July 27th in order to allow an the day preceding the examination. We will have a 10 days session this year and desire all the teachers of the county, and all those who contemplate teaching to make arrangements to attend the session Mrs. Bennett of West Branch will give the teachers instruction in using the line of teaching the primary grades in rural schools. Our teachers, especially beginners, cannot afford to miss it.

We have been the recipients of Bulletin No 8 to the school officers of the county. This has been prepared by the Superintendent of Public Instruction and gives the method of procedure in consolidating school districts.

Act 179, P. A. of 1903, which approved May 12, 1903, amends sec. 1665 of the compiled laws in regard to the authority of the directors to levy taxes for the purpose of transporting pupils to and from school, also to use the funds arising from the one mill tax for that purpose.

The law is permissive and the people are now entitled to enlarge the area of school districts by consolidating two or more districts into one, and in so doing if any people act as the great majority of the people in the district may carry them in public conveyances, if pay their parents for carrying them.

These matters should receive the careful consideration of all school officers and school patrons. The improvement of our schools is a question of vital importance to the tax-payer and especially to the children of the day who are to be the men and women of to morrow.

Death of Mrs. Ellen Mason.

Mrs. Ellen Mason, relict of the late Seth I. Mason, died at her home in this village late evening of last Friday, aged 71 years.

Mrs. Mason was probably one of the three oldest living white settlers of Charlevoix. She was born in Elyria, Ohio, coming to Michigan at an early age. In 1847 Mr. and Mrs. Mason arrived at Pine River, Charlevoix from Pelham Bay, Huron county, accompanied by Mr. I. Stockman and wife, in an open boat, and located a homestead on what is now the south corner, extending back to the cemetery. Then the Stockman was started then lived in a log house at a point that is now occupied by Newman Jones as the old water works building. The present name way built the same year.

Deceased was a sister of M. I. Stockman, and the mother of Albert E. Mason, Mrs. John M. Ackert, Mrs. Theron Ackert, Mrs. Silas Ackert, Mrs. L. C. Stockman, Mrs. John Beattie and Omar Mason, of Charlevoix, and John and Lafayette Mason, of California.

The best of care going to great expense a long extended series of the life and death of this pioneer.

Suicide at Bear Summit.

Living in the Woodlands miles from Kortlandtville, Ind., about through the cold forests, Joseph Bert became a pioneer Michigan editor and just was about Friday afternoon at a house. He was alone at the time. His relatives was found under his neck. He was taken to the house in his father. Joseph was a native of Kortlandtville, where he lived two hours after without regaining consciousness.

Smiley had been living at his father's for a few months. He was ill, and taking treatment for a nervous disease. On Wednesday he took good night to the members of the family and retired. That was the last seen of him until he was found dead. It is supposed that he died about that night. He was alive on Thursday morning, and his father who was in the industry with the second Mrs. Smiley, was notified. Smiley was needs the bite of a Thursday.

Smiley leaves a widow who lives in Augusta, two young daughters, and a son.

Smiley's death was not altogether unexpected for he had told friends that he would take that way under certain circumstances. He was a victim of chronic brain, and was afflicted with an Oliver dance, which made him an object of ridicule to the thoughtless. The needle became unconditioned at the outbreak time and upon him that he suggested Tom Sawyer of smoking and chewing tobacco, and gave to be a month with him.

Smiley was well known in Charlevoix. His father and family were formerly resorters on the south side grounds, where they were well liked. He was very erratic in his ways, and, social, amusing, pugnacious and quarrelsome, but people were charitable toward him, owing to his infirmity. He was some very good poetry, and published a book of his poems, one of which was an elegant poetry on "The Raven."

While publishing a paper at Ludsburg he came near being mobbed because of his bitter personal attacks on citizens.

The Charlevoix Sanitary Act.

The gentlemen has signed House Bill No. 325, entitled "An act relative to the payment of special assessments for paving in the Village of Charlevoix." The bill is as follows:

The Future of Charlevoix.

Local pride, local ambitions and the castle-building dreams of the habitue, sometimes map out a degree of greatness for the future that is unwarranted in fact. Charlevoix has been no exception to this condition—the wheels of the car of progress have been sometimes clogged and the road sometimes obstructed.

But through it all there have remained that nature created, elemental: never disintegrate in their stability or fade in their beauty. The seed was sown at the Creation, it may have lain now in springing, forth to life growth, but it was sure to appear, and is now springing surely and unmistakably.

And we believe now, as we have believed for a third of a decade, that the future of Charlevoix is assured, in all that can be compassed in our years of hope, and years of toil.

It is an axiom that all prosperity springs from the soil and a country is a self evident truth. When the dollars of the soil prosper, the merchants, the artisans and the professional classes prosper. To this conclusion we are approaching indeed, we may be said to have reached it.

The farmers through a couple of years past, have learned that mixed farming and not specialties, they are as prolific diseases and pests as the chinch bug and cinch. The farmer, the market gardener has grown to appreciate that they already raise some of everything from the farm and consequently a market is opened for the farmer that is now and realize.

The beet sugar factory, yet in embryo, has rapidly assuming consequence, will be commodious in future, for along the sidetracks, by our direct will be finished soon by the farmers themselves for the delivery for the sugar producing product by practical scientific.

There is distinction and affinity of a like nature which, we infer, follows, are the true elements of lasting prosperity. That these factors will extend to years beyond the radius of our own commercial existence is true, but the chief point we notice of Charlevoix, Lumbering and other kindred industries are but building the prosperity of the long hereafter in a fair and.

Thirdly, are we not justifiable in claiming the rising sun? Can we not look out over the fields and see the harvest opening?

And in our enthusiasm, let us be charitable to the croakers who from the beginning of the world have croaked.

How We Have It Again.

Supervisors are receiving type written letters, almost identical in wording and the figures indicating them what the Tax Commission considers the property in the Township worth, and we infer that if these figures do not come up to that figure the commission will see that they are raised.

Then we are given to understand, the only functions of the supervisor are to copy the assessment roll from dictation and meet with the board to settle bills. So far as the village assessor is concerned, the position is merely honorary, and he, too, must act as the amenuensis of this terrible tax commission, and that only.

This we are given to understand that no man in Charlevoix county knows as much about Charlevoix real estate values as a man from Benzie county, another from Wayne, and a third from Cass. We mention these counties on a guess, for we are interested if we know where the residence of the tax commission lies. We only know they live in southern Michigan, and know just about as much about values in Charlevoix, as J. L. Price, supervisor of Charlevoix, knows about the value of a stone building in Detroit or a farm on the Michigan Southern railroad.

It is a farce, a hoax and a travesty.

After taking a few doses I felt relieved, and soon thereafter was entirely cured, and have not seen a sick day since. Neighbors or some have been cured of Rheumatism, Neuralgia, Liver and Kidney troubles and general Debility." This is what B. F. Isaac, of Fremont, N. C. writes. Only 50c. at F. G. A Real Estate Change and a Brick Block.

Last week the Charlevoix County Bank caught bought of A. T. Barnett & Co., the lot on the corner of Bridge and Clinton streets. The bank owns the lot adjoining this property, or owned by the bank building. This gives them an feet frontage on Bridge street and 90 on Clinton.

This will be their home for erection of a three story brick block on the property. It will be 90 feet deep on on Clinton and probably 50 feet wide on Bridge. There is a possibility that the Bridge street front may extend 20 feet, on certain contingencies.

The structure will be a fine class solid brick building the entire frontage will be occupied by the bank and the north half of the ground floor be fitted for a store. The second story will be banks, law office apartments and the third story will be occupied in part, as a lodge room, banquet hall and parlors by the Knights of Pythias.

It is proposed to have the building completed and ready for occupancy before snow flies.

Reports from the principal growth of all the principal crops, except wheat, are to the effect that the cold weather of last week has retarded growth and in many instances injured the young plants. EXTEND HOME NEEDS

HOW TO ADD TO THE BEST OF ALL MARKETS.

Multiply the Earning and Spending Capacity of the People and thereby Provide a Market That Needs Neither Ships to Reach Nor Navy to Guard.

Col. Augustus Jacobson of Chicago, a clear thinker and an able writer, writes the Inter-Ocean from Washington when in the course of an interesting article entitled "Our Aim Should Be Home—Market." He says:

Booker T. Washington is an educator. But he is not only an educator, he is a capital developer. Every negro who goes through the course at Tuskegee multiplies individual productive and spending capacity. Negro or white, the man who has come to the point where he must have a tooth brush or a napkin has started on a career of consumption without limit. Men of that best friends now near Lake and those are our most valuable markets of the world. It requires neither army nor navy to open them or to keep them open. No ship was needed to get to Tuskegee.

Much the same line of thought was followed by Andrew Carnegie in his address at Pittsburg, when he said: St. Louis is my home, and I am pleased that the fair creature of national commerce as she frolicks with national commerce—that Mr. Carnegie—

"Statesmen talk for the most at ending in armed peace, and yet every dollar invested in improvements in our country, increasing the productivity of our industries, adds to the security of our peace.

FAITH AND SERVICE.

By Rev. Louis Albert Banks.

Trust in the Lord and do good. Psalms xxxvii.

Trust and service are two things which are reciprocal in nature. We can not serve God unless we trust him, and we can not trust him unless we serve him. Trust is inspiration and service is aspiration. Trust is a receiving and service is a giving. Trust is a receiving of help from God and service is a giving of help to others. Trust is a receiving of the good things of God and service is a giving of the good things of God. Trust is a receiving of God's power and service is a giving of God's power. Trust is a receiving of God's love and service is a giving of God's love. Trust is a receiving of God's life and service is a giving of God's life. Trust is a receiving of God's character and service is a giving of God's character. Trust is a receiving of God's spirit and service is a giving of God's spirit. Trust is a receiving of God's salvation and service is a giving of God's salvation. Trust is a receiving of God's heaven and service is a giving of God's heaven. Trust is a receiving of God's eternal life and service is a giving of God's eternal life. Trust is a receiving of God's all and service is a giving of God's all. Trust is a receiving of God's infinite and service is a giving of God's infinite. Trust is a receiving of God's infinite love and service is a giving of God's infinite love. Trust is a receiving of God's infinite love in Christ Jesus our Lord and service is a giving of God's infinite love in Christ Jesus our Lord. Trust is a receiving of God's infinite love in Christ Jesus our Lord for us and service is a giving of God's infinite love in Christ Jesus our Lord for others

SHORT ROAD TO PETOSKEY.

Pere Marquette May Buy The "Klondike" Branch.

And With Extensions Would Have a Short Route North.

It looks as if the cat was out of the bag and the scoop of William Alden Smith's somewhat mysterious visit to Detroit exposed, says the Detroit Free Press.

Some time ago a piece of railroad known as the "Klondike" branch of the Pere Marquette was built, running southeast from Rapid City through heavy timber land, to and through the south and eastern part of Kalkaska county to Stephens, in the upper edge of Missaukee county. The timber was largely owned by the Thayer Lumber Co., of Muskegon, and the road was primarily built to haul this lumber for the Muskegon firm. William Alden Smith, of Grand Rapids, and W. S. Mathews and a Mr. Terrell of Detroit, built the road, which they afterward leased to the Pere Marquette, which still uses the transfer to a connecting line. Messrs. Mathews and Smith, who are shipping at Cadillac, come to Detroit on the purpose of making a deal with the Pere Marquette, whereby the company will buy the line outright, or agree with Messrs. Smith and Mathews and those they represent, and build on, still southeast to Harbor Springs, using part of Cross county. That this move would be of great benefit to the Pere Marquette is evident and is clearly shown by a map of the system.

If the proposed extension were built it would give the Pere Marquette a straight road from Detroit to Petoskey and would make a saving of two hr miles between the two towns. As regards its ability to get to Petoskey or the Pere Marquette is as necessary to go either by one way of round Rapids and thence north, or via Saginaw, thence west to Hubbell and north to Petoskey.

NORTHERN MICHIGAN.

A canal from delivery route will run out of Pigeon about the first of July, delivering 22 miles of territory, covering Deer Lake, Pleasant Valley, Quack's corners and Aloma.

Central Lake Times: J. B. Hogg returned from the Beaver Island a few days ago where he said about four-thousand feet lower in about so many days.

East Jordan has undertaken to organize a band in the only manner that will be successful. The leading musicians men of the town have organized themselves and the band will have 16 members.

At a recent school meeting held in Bay Springs, the district voted to go the district in order to build a small, cheap school building. It will be a 20-thousand dollar structure containing four rooms.

Charlevoix: Last week in Boyne Falls men were charged with counterfeiting quarters. They have been adjudged in Emmet county jail until the October term of the U. S. district court held in Grand Rapids.

The largest rainbow trout ever caught in this county was pulled out of the river at Boyne Falls Sunday evening. John McKee landed one that weighed 10 pounds, and John Lovely of Lake Vivian caught one that weighed 9 pounds.

Inquiries received this week in Petoskey make it very probable that the Northern Michigan Railroad Co. is making active preparations to start north in the spring. That this move would be of great benefit to the Pere Marquette is evident and is clearly shown by a map of the system.

If the proposed extension were built it would give the Pere Marquette a straight road from Detroit to Petoskey and would make a saving of two hr miles between the two towns. As regards its ability to get to Petoskey or the Pere Marquette is as necessary to go either by one way of round Rapids and thence north, or via Saginaw, thence west to Hubbell and north to Petoskey.

LAWYERS HAY AND TALN

First Annual Banquet of the Charlevoix County Bar Association.

The Charlevoix County Bar Association held its first annual banquet at the Hotel Bartlett Monday evening, and the event was worthy of the occasion, as constituting the first note alone in the history of an organization that grinds the law, and guards the rights of men.

The tables occupied the center of the spacious dining room, and were set in the form of a pushpangle, in the center of which potted flowering plants were banked in profusion. The service could not be surpassed. The banquet was a five course affair, and was elaborate in every detail. Following is the menu:

Cream of Celery
Baked Trout Tartare
Lamb Chops Cutlets
Roast Chicken
Boiled Ham Browned Potatoes
Potato Salad
Fresh Apple Pie
Coffee Cheese
Fruit Salad Ice Cream
Cheese Crackers Coffee
Wafer Cheese
Angel Food
Fruit Wine
Assorted Cake

His Honor, the Judge, occupied the head of the table in Toastmaster and, independent of the toaster that is always and only properly attended with much wine should be, made the judicial occasion. Judge Mayne should be noted a worthy toastmaster. His introduction of Guests and Orators were felicitous, and while he did not confine the order THE Bench lawyers fall into, and the orators and guests upon the table cloth, the speaker was permitted to reach it—just enough which it is good to do, life and health.

More than an hour and a half was taken up with the menu, and then the post prandial toasting began, with the following results:

"The Day Before" J. A. Sweet
"The Modern Practitioner" A. J. Fisher
"Responsibilities" H. W. Bennett
"The Bench" Judge Mayne
"The Ministerial Alumni" W. A. Frazer
"The Bar" Judge Mayne
"The Old Time Lawyer" A. J. Sweet
"Commercial Contracts" J. E. Bennett
"The Jury" C. M. Bennett
"Further—and what was intended for the ladies" title and Attorney Dwight Flint.

Means were wanting and Judge of Traverse City, and Congressman of counsel happen were guests at the banquet, and were assigned topics, as follows:

We could not for both a sense of pride in Charlevoix county to see the interest in the attorneys taken at the time in the affairs of its bar association, and were impressed with the thought that such a social meeting will add vitality to it. It will be to the good use of Charlevoix county during the years to come of its life, and a very interesting feature at the event was the presence at the banquet of the judiciary in special president of the bar association, the first of its kind—for the first dinner to include in the dinner, and who has been a prominent in the county since its organization.

Much could be written in what was said, and so also much of what was said would not permit a review of all the addresses, or can only say that indeed it was a "Feast of Reason, and a Flow of Soul."

It is regretted the first annual banquet of the Bar Association of Charlevoix County, the occasion of which was so enjoyable, and so full of good fellowship, that the Sentinel proper was a guest to the occasion, and the ladies of the association of Charlevoix county, and the Attorneys of Traverse City, and Congressman of counsel happen were guests at the banquet, and were assigned topics, as above.

MARINE NEWS.

The Northern Michigan Transportation Co. began running its steamers on the summer schedule on Wednesday, May 27. Steamers will hereafter leave Chicago each Tuesday, and Wednesday at 12, to and each Friday and Saturday at 7 p. m.

Detroit special. The steamer Pere Lake, Capt. E. S. Small, with a deckload of lumber from the Charlevoix Lumber Co., went adrift inside the snake marking the end of the middle-ground at the lower end of Belle Isle. She was consigned to Jno. Morley & Co., of Detroit.

Capt. F. D. Campbell arrived from Charlevoix Tuesday afternoon with the steamer Simon Gerrit. The boat was bought for the Harbor Springs Packet Co., and, judging from the place of the Hand recently sold, she is exceedingly well adapted to the purpose for which she was bought. She is strongly built, and only carry 200 passengers. The Simon Gerrit will be thoroughly cleaned and repainted and refitted before going on her run.

Considering contracting companies are about to begin widening and deepening the Sturgeon River ship canal, connecting Lake Michigan and Lake Huron. Nearly 2,000,000 cubic yards of earth will have to be dredged away. The work will be prosecuted with the biggest tools in the lakes. The government will spend $150,000 on the improvement, and when the work is completed the ship canal will have been widened from 150 to 250 feet and deepened from 12 to 21 feet.

Capt. Frank Gaskill and E. Howard Gaskill with stake team on an lake shore, tried to save a tow off Friday morning in the worst gale of the season. The steamer Ira Dwight was in tow of the Gaskills, and was anchored out over night and blown up shore in the gale. In the morning the Gaskills started out to tow her in, but the tow line parted and they had to let her go. The steamer Ira Dwight was driven ashore and badly damaged. The Gaskills succeeded in saving the tow.

Saginaw Valley Charter Fleet will run hard during June.

A Steamer Wrecked.

Chicago, June 1.—The steamer Pere Marquette, which was wrecked in the gale of Friday, in attempting to enter the harbor of Ludington, was a total wreck. Three persons were drowned. The steamer was a wooden boat, 200 feet long, and was owned by the Pere Marquette Railroad Co. She was valued at $100,000. She was insured for $50,000 in Chicago and Detroit companies.

His Appetite.

A young lady in Paris recently applied to the secretary of the Conservatory of Music for admission to the classes of the institution. The secretary asked her what she had to offer in the way of a musical education. "Oh, I can sing the Marseillaise, and I can play the Marseillaise on the piano, and I can dance the Marseillaise," she said. "Very well, mademoiselle, we will accept you as a pupil," said the secretary, politely.

THE UPS AND DOWNS.

By Rev. Geo. H. Ireland.

No. 52 South 2nd Street, Akron, O.

The year now in the middle of Ohio, is itself some which have the ups and downs of life. Some years are lightsome and joyous, others are sad and sorrowful, and some are even tragic in their sorrow. Some are prosperous and others are adverse. Some are full of hope and others are full of despair. Some are full of joy and others are full of sorrow. Some are full of life and others are full of death. Some are full of light and others are full of darkness. Some are full of peace and others are full of war. Some are full of love and others are full of hate

LATEST ASPECT OF THE TARIFF REVISION QUESTION.

The Plain Speaking of President Roosevelt, Secretaries Root, Shaw and Others Has Wrought a Marked Change in the Situation, and Outlook.

The chasm that has occurred in the situation and outlook regarding tariff revision during the past six weeks is the subject of careful comment by a number of the editors in the World-region correspondents of the New York Tribune of April 7. If the speeches of Secretaries Shaw and Root, March 31 and April 1, respectively, were read and approved by the protectionists, they were derivative, and unfavorably judge that they were the opening and the blows of the President's campaign of Midwestern and Mississippi Valley towns in the cause of this proposed revision, and have the same weight of opinion behind the Chief Executive's position against the exclusion of existing tariff schedules as time. President Root and Secretary Shaw are Republicans of the Roosevelt school, and the former, in the Senate, is a leader in the Republican party. Secretary Root is a member of the President's Cabinet, and Secretary Shaw is the chairman of the committee of ways and means in the House of Representatives, and is in charge of the administration measure for revision of the tariff. Secretary Root said, in his speech, that the Republican party must revise the tariff, and that the revision must be made by the Republican party, and that the revision must be made by the Republican party from the side of the protection idea, and that the revision must be made by the Republican party from the side of the protection idea, and that the revision must be made by the Republican party from the side of the protection idea

CLEANLINESS AS A VICE.

Young Malcom Criticises Methods of Her Mother-in-Law.

"Cleanliness is next to godliness, I know, said the young matron, whose mother-in-law lives with her but there is such a thing as carrying it too far, I think. Now my husband's mother is fearfully and wonderfully neat. In fact, at times I feel that to live in a pigsty would be a relief. From morning till night there is nothing but clean, clean, clean. Bits of carpet are laid in the places most likely to trip you up. These are to be stepped to keep the floor underneath from stain and then the carpets are taken up and the floor underneath scrubbed as carefully as if it had not been protected all the time. You can not imagine how tiring it is. But the other day she reached the limit. She came in, took off her shoes, carefully washed them and set them out to dry! Think of it! It's a wonder she did not catch her death."

THE EXPANSION OF RUSSIA.

Nothing Stops the Progress of the Giant of the North.

The progress of Russia is one the speediest of all civilized nations. There is no natural barrier in Russia to check her march or hand her off such as the mountainous frontier of India for the prospect of the subjugation of Persia is not practicable politic today. Neither is it practicable politic for another generation to hound on Great Britain to conquer Russia glutted as she is now, from every country which has seen fit to lend to Russia. Africa is shut out, the South Seas North a prince is quite by natural. We can barely guess at the prestige prestige of Russia. Fresh from responsibilities in China, in Germany, in Turkey, she would simply weigh in lower to the Greeks and Saxon than an ounce. Chronicle.

Descendant of Robert Burns.

The only direct descendant of Robert Burns in Canada is a Quebec shipping office. He is Robert Burns Hutchinson, and his descent from the poet is unquestioned. His mother Sarah Burns was a daughter of Lieutenant Colonel James Gwendolin Burns, the third son of Robert Burns and Jean Armour. Mr Hutchinson will be 48 this year. He was born at Chatham, but followed the sea early in life. He married Miss Mabel Harnand. Their little daughter Gordon Burns Hutchinson, is the next in the straight line from the poet.

Differing Views on Providence.

A recent traveler in Macedonia writes: "The views on Providence entertained by Turks and Jews respectively and the extent to which belief influences the conduct of each, are well illustrated in the following anecdote: A Turk and a Jew were one day in a field. Suddenly the weather changed, and a fierce squall arose. The Jew prophesied that they should turn back at once. The Turk was for going on. The Jew, my friend, Allah is great, he said, Allah is great, relieve the Jew, but our God is Allah!"

Joe Point of View.

"I am very much afraid that you do not appreciate the spirit of a free country." "Oh, yes I do," answered the man who had recently landed in New York, in a direct shot to the needless to explosion. "What do you understand by a free country?" "It is a place where you are free to do as you choose if you manage to get on the police force."

French Commissioner Disgusted.

Michel Lagrave, French commissioner to the St Louis exposition, arrived there recently with Mme. Lagrave, and made of twenty-four hours was the most disgusted man in Missouri. There was no one to receive him at the depot and as he does not speak English he had much difficulty in finding a carriage to his hotel. The fare man charged him $20 for the short drive to the hotel where he would until the next STORMY Come the presence in town was recognized by anyone connected with the exposition. M. Lagrave declares that the steward cannot take him back to Prairie Du yonky.—Chicago Chronicle.

Misquotations.

A correspondent sends the following popular misquotations: The absurd tautology "Life assets" vista for the sense of shores and for believe that "Money is the root of all evil." The "The love of money a very different thing. He remarks that it is curious that the Dan De Quincey himself in his monograph on Milton falls into the snare of quoting "Fresh fields and pastures new." He suggests also that the use of the Italian phrase in petto, as if equivalent to in nubibus, is another share into which many authors fall.

Had Had Opportunity.

Two society belle at the Waldorf, Astoria were commenting upon the marriage of Mrs Lewis Rutherfurd to William K. Vanderbilt. "He is a fine match," said one. "Mrs Lewis Rutherfurd belongs to the Upper Ten." "She ought to," was the tart answer. "She's had plenty of them."—New York Times.

We have no desire to be unfavorable, or to "rub it in," on Petoskey, but we refer the Petoskey Democrat to its article in a recent issue concerning the Charlevoix High School team, and observe that she who laughs last laughs best.

The boastful Mr. Murphy, who was so complacent the downfall of Mr. Lewis, was first to hit one every, after Lewis' movements at Ann Arbor, Mr. Murphy declined to to enter any of the runs against the young man from the "modern school." In the defeat of Petoskey by even Boyne City, there is much for Petoskey to think of, and much cause for humility.

"Thank you, Miss Ashton," said the young man, with a grateful look at the speaker, "I will do as you advise. Good-bye, Miss Nora, and thank you for your kindness to me."

"Good-bye," she said, extending her hand to him, and he took it in his, and bowed over it with a courtesy that was not lost on her, and she felt a little thrill at his touch, and was sorry when he had gone, for he was a pleasant man to look at and talk with, and she had seldom met one who had so pleased her.

"Now, Lillian, I am ready to hear your story," she said, when she had seated herself in her own room, and taken her sewing from her work-basket.

"Well, I don't know how to begin it," said Lillian, with a little sigh, and a look of perplexity on her face.

"Begin at the beginning, of course," said Nora, with a little laugh at her sister's perplexed face.

"I suppose I must," said Lillian, with a sigh of resignation, and she began to ply her needle with a vigorous stitch, as if to gain courage for the task before her.

"Mr. Hunter and I were married in Paris, you know, and we had a very pleasant time for a few weeks, and then he had to go back to his business, and I was very lonely without him, and I was very glad when he came for me to come home with him. We came on the steamer with a party of people we had met in Paris, and I was very sick all the way across, and was very glad when we reached our journey's end. We had taken a house in Washington, and I was very glad to get into it and have a home of our own. We had a very pleasant winter, and I was very happy, and I had a great many friends, and was very fond of my husband, and he was very good to me, and I was very happy. But one day he came home from his office looking very pale and very anxious, and he told me that he had lost a great deal of money in speculation, and that we must be very careful and economical for a while, until he could get on his feet again. We had been living very fast, and I had a very pretty house, and I had a great deal of company, and we had a very pleasant time, and I was very happy, and I had never thought about the money at all. A BEAUTIFUL STRUCTURE.

Memorial Building at Pomona Characterizes The Grangers.

When the Order of Patrons of Husbandry in New York might have long hoped for to shout to be realized in the success of a temporary structure at Observation Hill, an orange blossomer has last year the Pomona grange of Chautauqua county acquired a very beautiful building site, and now, through the generosity of Mr. Cyrus E. Jones of Jamestown, N. Y., there is to be erected on this site and facing Chautauqua lake a grange building which will be a monument to the late Mrs. Emma Jones, friend of the donor of the building, which, since it is a memorial, will be a home and work for Chautauqua county. At nearly the same address Brother Jones explained to the Pomona grange that the building, since it is a memorial, and since it is a home and work for Chautauqua county, it should be the home of the Pomona grange, and that it should be a home for all the Patrons in this county. The building will be 40 feet by 60 feet, and will be two stories and a basement. The building will be of the Palladian Ionic order, and will have large porches on the fronts of the building

THREE BIG DAYS.

The Odd Fellows Gathering Bids to be a Great Event.

Info on all and all are to be great days in Charlevoix. All of these days will be centered in the gathering of the Northwestern Association I. O. O. F. The territory embraces everything from Cadillac north.

It will bring to Charlevoix a large number of the representative men of the Grand Traverse region and the occasion will be a memorable one, as representing a great and organized fraternal union, and as a general gathering in this, the best place in Northern Michigan for them to generate enjoyment.

The local odd fellows are exerting themselves to put that one over that he royally entertained in which work our people generally will join.

That this seminar assemble will bring many people outside the City is a certain and without doubt Charlevoix will see the biggest crowd in its history.

Of course the crib will be the big place [illegible]

Iron Indian Enterprise. The Dickinson Co. Fair Association met here Thursday afternoon, and arranged for their 19th annual fair to be held Tuesday, Wednesday and Thursday, Sept. 22, 23 and 24. The occasion last was some over and exceed and it is the intention to make the fair this year the most successful in the history of the organization. Special efforts will be put forth to get the best horses in Northern Michigan here for the speed tracks for which liberal purses will be put up and the track will be put in first class condition.

Traverse City Record. The future of the village of Northport is now practically assured. The completion of the T. C., L. & M. railroad marks an epoch in the history of that village and it reflects for the people of that locality to assist in the development of the village and its surroundings, to the most beautiful resort in the world, and on the south. Northport possesses all desirable natural advantages for a summer resort, and already our state capital has been exploited by a number to suggest great possibilities for the future. Omena will enjoy the benefit of a fine [illegible] resort in that part of the county.

ABOUT ORDINANCES.

Too Much Legislation and Not Enough Enforcement.

We do not question the wisdom of the drug stocking ordinance, and believe that "an ounce of prevention is worth a pound of cure." But a well posted citizen said the other day "Nobody ever heard of a dog being spontaneously attacked with rabies in towns where there is a flowing stream or lake. It is always in an inland town where water is not convenient to a thirsty animal, and where, in hot weather, dog owners forget that dogs cannot ask for what they want. Intense thirst affects the dog's brain, and serious bite ensues. It is then that the sight of water will cause hydrophobia to spasmodic convulsions."

It would be amusing to look over the ordinances passed by Charlevoix and note the number of ordinances that have practically become dead letters, and some of them are at comparatively recent passage. The sidewalk blocks on Elmira for instance is openly violated every day on nearly every corner. Yet, nothing is said about it. Within a week the water of this city was washed by a Egyptian left to take care of the side of the street or crossing a time. It is pretty hard to make a city plated in golden corn appear a handsome young lady, who forgets or does not know that she is a violator of the law.

[illegible]

There is an ordinance, framed in all the conventions and minion Avenue of the law, against having horses unhitched on any street in this city, yet it is there every day, and runaways have on several occasions resulted from it. Yet the dog law, every day of the year, is enforced at the cost which are not touched.

[illegible]

And within and outside the corporation are ordinances, making it punishable by fine or imprisonment, or both, for any person to open saloons on the Lord's day. You cannot walk five rods on either side of Bridge street without seeing tobacco juice on the cold and soiled sidewalks, dried by air or by a combination of fresh tobacco juice and a little water. There is not a large new laundry with complete modern conveniences. New mortars for the baby have also been built.

The improvements are by no means confined to that portion of the house covered by the roof. Outside the middle kitchen has been at work. A strong wall has been built along the south front, and between an artistic boulder retaining wall and the porch is a lowered terrace. All about those magnificent grounds, in which the editor of this paper lived in a big house thirty-three years ago, the work of adornment has been done. Water mains have been discharged and improved, and a complete sewer system installed. Several fine cottages have been built this spring, and others are in contemplation.

If the Rip Van Winkle of thirty-three years ago should have slept three times decades and awaken today at our "sunny southern terrace, what a change would greet his eyes!

Should he imbibe the potion of the Lotus, and sleep again, three times his years, when, but he will not awaken.

To Librarians.

The law just enacted in regard to libraries says: Hereafter it shall be the duty of the librarian of any and all public libraries, including township, school district, village or city libraries to make an annual report regarding the location, condition and support of said library to the county commissioner of schools on or before the 15th day of June in each year.

Blanks for reports will be furnished by the librarians of library Commissioners.

WANTED—FIFTY men for woods and new mill. BEAVER ISLAND LUMBER CO. St. James Mich.

THE NEW BELVEDERE.

The Big Summer Home Association Hotel Bigger and Better Than Ever.

The original Belvedere No. 1, the nucleus of the present great resort, was a small affair and was destroyed by fire a number of year ago. From its ashes there arose the "New Belvedere." About it has grown a small city of beautiful cottages, embowered in foliage, and surrounded by all that is attractive in nature.

The "New Belvedere," will open this month now indeed. Work has been in progress on the hotel and grounds almost since the house closed last fall. Not only has it been enlarged but it has been improved in many features. It will hardly be recognized by the old guests when they enter it.

The chief feature of the improvements is a 40x70 four story addition, built on the west side. The ground floor is entirely taken up by a cool room without a post or pillar. It is a beautiful room and will prove a great feature of the famous hotel. The upper three stories contain 45 sleeping rooms, 25 of them with bath rooms attached. Those rooms are larger than the average of hotel rooms, and on the west side command a fine view of the Harbor and Village. Many bath rooms have been put in the old part of the house.

The lavatory and an entire new and modern set of closets have been installed in the basement, under the office. It is the office that will first attract the attention of the former guests. This has been enlarged by taking in the writing room and Manager Foley's private office. The latter now occupies a space to the west of the of the office, fronting on the porch. An elegant oak staircase occupies the south west corner of the office. It is broad and has two landings.

A new and complete steam heating plant has been installed, to meet the requirements of the early opening and late closing, for when this house is noted. The house now has 125 sleeping rooms, many of them double rooms. Altogether the house contains 200 beds.

The kitchen equipment is new throughout, and contains steam cookers, steam tables, and many other appliances not heretofore used, and the house has been furnished with new carpets and new furniture. Manager Foley has engaged as chef Mr. John Frisch, who has been at the head of the cuisine of several of the leading Chicago and Florida hotels. His staff has also been enlarged in all branches.

Not the least important improvement is a large and elegantly appointed Children's play room, in the angle of the "L" easily accessible both from the office and the hall room. Near this is a large new laundry with complete modern conveniences. New mortars for the baby have also been built.

The improvements are by no means confined to that portion of the house covered by the roof. Outside the middle kitchen has been at work. A strong wall has been built along the south front, and between an artistic boulder retaining wall and the porch is a lowered terrace. FAITH LOSES GROUND

PREACHER SAYS METHODISM IS AT A STANDSTILL.

During Last Five Years Increase Has Been Only One Member a Year for Each Church. Rats Up and Nailed to Desk.

Methodism is not a stationary, but a vibrant force, and if it does not go forward it must go backward. Methodism must live, L. W. Munhall of the Ohio Conference of the Methodist Episcopal Church in a sermon in Grace church last night, and unless it does this it will be crushed by the first loud accusation against it. Mr. Munhall is a tall, slender man, with a face that would be pleasant looking if it were not for the expression of sadness that it wears. He is a good preacher, however, and he held his congregation spellbound for an hour and a half while he talked to them about the Church's needs.

Methodism, he said, is not standing still, but it is not growing as it should. Its membership increased last year at the rate of one member for each church. Unless this condition is changed, he said, the Methodist church will be crushed by the first loud accusation against it. Methodism must be a living force, he said, or it will be a dead one.

Mr. Munhall said that the Methodist church was not doing the work that it should do because it had become too conservative. It was not willing to take the risks that it should take, he said, and it was not willing to pay the price of success. It must be willing to pay the price of success, he said, if it is to live.

Methodism is not a stationary institution, he said, but it must be a living force, or it will be crushed by the first loud accusation against it. Methodism must be a living force, he said, or it will be a dead one.

ROOSEVELT SPEAKS

THE PRESIDENT'S VIEW REGARDING TARIFF REVISION.

He Pronounces It Useless as a Trust Remedy and Urges That No Rearrangement of the Schedules Be Attempted Until After 1904.

That portion of President Roosevelt's speech at Minneapolis April 4, 1902, relating to the question of tariff revision, was as follows:

"We are now in a condition of unquestionably prosperity. We have a tariff (the Dingley) set by the Congress of my predecessor. This prosperity is not perfect and there is a little fear because it is not so this fall as the average American hopes it is for the end of which visitors are made in the actual industrial conditions of the hour. Just as in the prime minister of the past, we have to see what to use and whether the conditions be such which call for a substantial change, or only a temporary stoppage, or only a temporary slowing up, we must consider the question of how far the business of the country is in a healthy condition. Now, I do not pretend to know enough of the different industries to be able to say how far any particular change would be advisable. I do know that the average American business man is for the Dingley tariff, and I do know that the average American business man is for prosperity. I do know that the average American business man is for prosperity and prepared to work with those who are for prosperity and who are for those who are for the same end. I do know that the average American business man is for prosperity and prepared to work with those who are for prosperity and who are for those who are for the same end. I do know that the average American business man is for prosperity and prepared to work with those who are for prosperity and who are for those who are for the same end.

"The great advantage of our tariff system is that it gives us the power to meet any emergency that may arise. We have the power to meet any emergency that may arise. We have the power to meet any emergency that may arise. We have

THE POPULAR PULPIT

LOOKING INTO JESUS

By Rev. R. F. Fullerton

Look unto me and be ye saved all the ends of the earth for I am God, and there is none else.—Isa. 45:22.

Salvation is not a future but a present thing. It is the greatest thing in life. It means the life. It means the life more abundant. It means the life eternal.

Sometimes men say when a man has done a business thing, the man who is always looking for the business opportunity, the man who is not content to let the business come to him, but who will go out and hustle for it, we say of such a man, he is a business man. We say of such a man, he is a man who is not content to let the business come to him, but who will go out and hustle for it, we say of such a man, he is a business man.

Let us look at the business man and see what he does. He sees a business opportunity. He sees a business opportunity. He sees a business opportunity Resolutions in order.

A sure sign of approaching spring and serious trouble in your stomach is nervousness, constipation, or stomach disorders. Electric Bitters will quickly remove the cause and prevent serious results if used at the first appearance of these symptoms. Regulate the kidneys and bowels stimulate the liver, and purify the blood. Hundreds testify to the wonderful results and all who tried something else and found it worthless, return to Electric Bitters as the only one that does good. Electric Bitters is only one, and that a remedy, that will give perfect satisfaction. Guaranteed by F. G. Hines Druggist.

SCHOOL COM. COLUMN.

It is the duty by law of the school commissioner to examine the reports of school directors and school inspectors which are sent to him about the first of October. The Commissioner should examine all these reports very minutely, noting carefully the correctness of the totals, the accuracy of the financial statement and teachers who were employed during the year. After examining over the correctness of these reports he should file one of the inspector's reports from each township with township clerk and forward to the Department by other inspectors report and all the reports from fractions.

He should see to it that these are filed with the Department on or before the 2nd day of November. This work is important and nothing should prevent the prompt filing of these reports with the proper officers.

It is my duty to examine record of the teachers because the law requires that no person each township should be allowed to teach unless he has received a certificate from the County Commissioner of Schools, with a complete list of the legally qualified teachers published in the county during the preceding year. The Commissioner is the leader in the Teacher's Reading Circle work of his county. The success of this will depend very largely upon the thoroughness with which he arranges and executes his plan. The work also should be followed in all sections by annual of varying conditions, but some systematic effort should be devoted in connection with this work and by arranging for teachers meetings in different parts of the county and meetings with patrons. The Commissioner can help the community in like directly upon the school work. The organization of patrons and teachers meetings or meetings in connection with the Grange or with Farmers' clubs has been productive of very excellent results in many counties in the state.

Through this line of procedure the families and schools will receive some benefit that they possibly can from the personal visits of the Commissioner. Such visits are necessarily hurried, and while the Commissioner can judge very closely of the ability of the teacher and then the work that is being done, he does not have so opportunity to make all the suggestions he would like to, to inspire the teachers with greater love for this work and greater earnestness in producing good results.

Boyne City is to have an electric light and power company which will derive its power from the Boyne river, and which from all indications will prove one of the most valuable industries ever secured there. E. A. Stowe and C. C. Pillmer, of Grand Rapids, are the leaders for enterprise, which has secured control of 920 acres along the river, comprising all the flowage rights between Boyne City and Boyne Falls. A heavy head of water can be secured and the force produced is expected to amount to 1,000 horse power. This will be sold to Boyne City industries for lighting and power purposes as far as possible, and it is now probable that the company will use a part of it to operate a knitting factory or some other industry requiring women and girls and using much power. The plant, which will cost about $70,000, is expected to be in operation by October.

STEAMER MARY AT MERCY OF WAVES.

With Fifty Passengers Its Board She Loses Her Propeller while in Midway.

[illegible]

The fifth steamer Mary drifted helpless in Lake Michigan for twelve hours yesterday. Fifty passengers, who left Michigan City on the steamer at 8 o'clock yesterday morning, waited in a state bordering on panic for help from shore. Because of the loss of the passengers propeller it was impossible to hold her straight in the slight sea running on the lake, and many of her passengers passed the day in an agony of sea sickness as the disabled boat rolled. Those who were up late in the evening were ravenously hungry, for there was not a bite of food on the steamer.

Fifteen miles from Michigan City, with Chicago still twenty-five miles away, the steamer suffered her accident. She was making good speed with the propeller when they felt her eighties, released from the resistance of the wheel, ran free thrashing the entire vessel and causing fright to the passengers. As soon as possible the engines were stopped; but not until some of the ship's seams were opened and water began trickling into her hold.

Captain Alex Alexander tried in vain to calm the insane passengers, chiefly of them women. He declared there was no danger, and, by his confident, persuasive call to ward the ship's board. When it was discovered that the ship was helpless, Captain Alexander, who nothing the passengers, ordered four of the crew into a rowboat, which, with the boat's first oilcloth on, charge was headed for Michigan City. Two hours later the present was reached. Chicago officials of the company were notified, and the Chicago crew came on board the Mary.

With the assistance of the ship's boat came a demand from the passengers to be taken ashore. The demand was refused, and the passengers were forced to be the frightened passengers it looked exceedingly good. There was not than breaks on the ship, and it was reported that such would only fifteen.

"It's miraculous to talk about going ashore," said Captain Alexander when the passengers had been conveyed to him by a committee. "You wouldn't get half way there before high winds drive to take us to Chicago." And it looked as if fulfillment of this was. The wind was strong with the steamer.

By this time the vessel was rolling in the swoghet of the sea and the discomfortable passengers began making inroads in the cabin and lunch counters on the boat. Dinner in the cabin was crowded, but no one present was hungry.

At o'clock in the afternoon smoke was seen in the direction of Chicago, and half an hour later the Dorchester steamer up to the side of the disabled boat.

The Mary was rolling hard, but the tug straightened her out and the lines were made fast. The tug then started for Chicago, and half an hour later the Dorchester steamer up to the side of the disabled boat.

THE POPULAR PULPIT

LOOKING FAITHFULLY.

By Rev. W. T. Fullerton.

Look unto me and be saved all the ends of the earth. For I am God, and there is none else.—Isa. xlv. 22.

Salvation is not a lottery but a necessity. It is the greatest blessing we have to bestow upon our fellow men. It is the greatest "bonanza" in the universe. Yet this is eternal. Some men say when a man has lost from a fortune thus "He will only miss it once." Yes, again, he will cut his throat. Some men say, "I will run the risk." Yes, and you will run the risk of damnation. Some treat salvation as a matter of chance, as men bet on the race. I may not be one of those who say that there is no hell, but I do believe that if there is, there is not one other thing. This looking is for the salvation of the soul.

This text is a good, good essay. It is a gem set in silver. It is a jewel in the crown of a king. It is a star in the firmament of God. It is a rose in the garden of God. It is a song in the choir of God. It is a harp in the hand of God. It is a crown on the head of God. It is a throne in the heaven of God. It is a God in the universe of God. It is God. It is God. SLAUGHTER IN A PALACE

King and Queen of Servia and Several Cabinet Ministers Assassinated at Belgrade.

KARAGEORGEVITCH PROCLAIMED NEW KING

Murdered Ruler's Wife and Others Are Struck Down with Axes or Killed by Bullets.

OFFICERS OF THE ARMY LEADERS OF REVOLUTION.

Royal Victims and Their Attendants Slain in the Dead of Night—May Have Been Result of Plot to Get Rid of Queen—May Cause Turmoil in Europe.

The news of King Alexander and Queen Draga, of Servia, being murdered by a band of army officers, became known in London and Paris Tuesday morning in the form of a cable message from Vienna. The report was confirmed by the Servian legation in London, which received the news from its government in a cable message. Details are meagre, but it appears that a number of army officers, headed by Colonel Mashin, forced their way into the palace, killed the King and Queen with their own hands, and then proclaimed a new King and new Cabinet. The report from Vienna says that the King and Queen were hacked to pieces with axes, and that their bodies were then thrown out of a window into the courtyard of the palace. The King's brother, Prince Nicholas, who happened to be in Servia, was proclaimed King by the conspirators, and a new Cabinet was formed with Colonel Mashin at the head of it. The Vienna report says that the new King and Cabinet are in control of the country, and that there is no danger of a counter revolution.

The news of the murder of the King and Queen was received in London with a gasp of astonishment. It is said, the bodies of the King and Queen were found in a state of nudity, and mutilated in a manner that is too horrible to be described. The report that they were buried in the same grave in which they were slain, on which the blood had scarcely dried.

Queen Was the Signal.

Queen Draga fired as a signal for the carnage to begin, and the troops responded the moment resistance to the scene was thus they moved on the palace. After the tragedy at the palace officers stationed throughout the streets of the city shouting the news that the King and Queen had been killed.

According to the best available information obtainable from the heart of the troubles the crime was committed by members of the Sixth infantry, under the command of Colonel Mashin and Maschin. The latter is a brother-in-law of the late Queen Draga and minister of public works in the new cabinet. The officers appear to have forged their way into the palace, and to have the aid-de-camp on duty, Dr. Nasimitch, stationed at the another woman, who is said to have Nasimitch became to open the gate to his assistants, thereby causing a portion of his confederates. None of the other personal aides were surprised in their homes simultaneously with the attack on the palace.

In all, eight persons lost their lives immediately after the assassination of the King. The dead proclaimed Prince Karageorgevitch, the pretender, King in Alexander's stead.

The assassins, who started the fate of their victims, were the leading spirits of the Obrenovitch party. They murder appears the only sure cancelle of healing a real result, since the Karageorgevitches, who are here no serious opposition to Servia.

The murder of the Obrenovitch dynasty was closely dovetailed with the plot which Prince Michael was murdered nearly five years ago in the park of Topscider, near Belgrade. Tuesday's regicide came was sung in unison of Prince Michael, and one the list of his race and all connected with the dynasty by his unfortunate marriage are dead.

ASSASSINATED SERVIAN ROYAL COUPLE.

THROWN INTO GRAVES

Last Contumely Heaped Upon King Alexander and Queen Draga.

When the news came yesterday that the remains of Belgrade rejoicing over the death of King Alexander and Queen Draga, some more benefit of all the King and Queen, the authorities had ordered that the bodies of the royal victims should be thrown into a pauper's grave, without coffins, and covered with a few inches of earth. The ceremony was hurried through in the dark, and the bodies were thrown into the grave in a state of nudity, and mutilated in a manner that is too horrible to be described. The report that they were buried in the same grave in which they were slain, on which the blood had scarcely dried.

Crowns Give the Signal.

Queen Draga fired as a signal for the carnage to begin, and the troops responded the moment resistance to the scene was thus they moved on the palace. After the tragedy at the palace officers stationed throughout the streets of the city shouting the news that the King and Queen had been killed.

SERVIA A SMALL KINGDOM

Turbulent Little Monarchy, However, Has a Great Fighting Force.

Servia, one of the smallest monarchies of southeastern Europe, has recently been growing along under a new constitution granted by the King on April 6, 1901, under which the legislative power is vested in a senate and a popular assembly.

The senate consists of the heir to the throne, the archbishop of Belgrade, the leading of Nish, twenty members appointed by the King, and eighteen elected for a six year term.

The area of the monarchy is but 18,000 square miles, and its population 2,000,000. The capital, Belgrade, has about 70,000 inhabitants, and the second city, Nissa, about 30,000.

Military service has been obligatory in Servia since the law of January, 1901, which provides two years' active service from the age of 20, nine years in the reserve and six years in the first and eight in the second ban of the national militia. The budget provides for 12,000 men in the infantry, 1,400 in the cavalry, 4,000 in the artillery, 1,000 in the engineers, and 500 in the sanitary corps.

"PRETENDER PETER" ON THRONE

Like His Grandmother, Karageorgevitch Heads Successful Revolt.

The young pretender, King Peter Karageorgevitch, long known as "Prince Peter," comes from a family of noted revolutionists. The Karageorgevitches and Obrenovitches are the two principal families in Servia, and have been rivals for many years. The Karageorgevitches are known as the "democratic" family, while the Obrenovitches are known as the "aristocratic" family. Prince Peter Karageorgevitch, long known as "Prince Peter," comes from a family of noted revolutionists. The Karageorgevitches and the

One day while in Norway an upper family was given to an American traveler to see that the name of Henrik Ibsen, whose name is a household word in Norwegian, is a battalion of Norwegian and Swedish cavalry, between 2,000 and 3,000 and Ibsen's name, was swinging from its scabbard to the pitch in Christiania, he says. In passing Ibsen's house we noticed in command and his adjutant to attempt to get a Hamlinian permission to give him an ovation. With his family and guests assembled about him on the veranda the monumental figure stood with bared head to receive the military greeting. As each regiment passed, in review before presentation salute as to their chieftain, there went up a deafening shout of personal exhilaration from each of the soldiers who then formed in singing the national hymn, to whom author they were offering this spontaneous salute. There was the unique spectacle of a man in private life, being accorded a military demonstration by the nation's army which a king might envy.

He was occupying the first rooms at a well-known hotel. All of a sudden without any introduction of people to whom I was not brought to him signed by the wife of a wealthy American millionaire. He asked me whether to accept or refuse to giving up his rooms to her alone. He was quite amused, but worse luck, inquiring whether the same check Mrs ——— wrote in reply, in European and India nation, winding up with an emphatic statement that her husband drinks drink. Lord X——— concluded with the following note: "Lord X——— regrets that he cannot give up his first floor rooms to Mrs ——— unless he can be convinced that, as the young lady does not drink, it is a very unusual thing for her to go to stairs than it is for Lord X———.—London Tailor.

Fortunately, her mother has accustomed servants who rather enjoy having the little around, so they are the charmed hours which Jessie spends downstairs making little pies under the cook's supervision, and generally getting in brown up.

"The other day she descended to the laundry to witness the family wash in her busy little way. When she got back of other entertainment as Mary got on the clothes to boil, and then lastly few minutes she was startled by claiming:

The Tax Commission.

Northport Herald, June 26 1903.

Editor of Sentinel:

Why blame the tax commission when with all deference to the opinion of the Sentinel and others, I feel sure the fault is more in the system than in the men composing the commission.

The five men who form the present board are likely as able and honest as any other set picked up throughout the state and Freeman and Sayre are as good as the others on the present board. The whole trouble is the system they are acting under, and which you very well know, is the outcome of Pingree's fight for what he called equal taxation, which resulted in the act changing the tax on railroads from direct to ad valorem valuation and to the appointment of a board of commissioners, who under the great power given them by the act, are virtually the assessing officers of the state, and the office of township supervisor about as well have been abolished. The result after a trial of four or five years is certainly nothing to be proud of, and property is more unequally taxed than under the old system, and seems to be growing worse all the time.

I think you will agree with me so far as this county is concerned, but the system is more at fault than the men composing the commission. Five men cannot go over the state and assess the property—they have to send agents. Now it sometimes happens that these agents whom they send may be desirous of promotion, and in such cases the results will be disastrous

The tax commission will not, other things being anywhere near equal, discredit their agents, and will be apt to stand by their report, unless they can clearly be shown to be in the wrong, and the circumstances have no time to go over the country and look over the property, and would not know much more about it if they did. And where only three or four towns in a county are let, as is sometimes happens, they don't get much help from the others.

Now I am convinced that neither the present board or any board who may be appointed to act under the present system will make matters any better, and judging the future by the past it will grow worse and the more unequal taxation will be the longer it continues.

People talk of equal taxation. You certainly never can have absolute equal taxation under this system or any other system in this world since Eden's established on earth and that will hardly be in time to help the present generation. I do not think the present system as good as the old one and also had many very serious defects. But a much better than either is possible. Repeal the present law that established the tax commission. Separate the state and county taxes, according to the method formed by Attorney General Oren. That would do away with a large share of the work of the Auditor General's office, and would give us the State board of equalization. But a direct tax on the railroads and other corporations enough to pay the state tax. Then you would have local taxation, and as near equal possible the only thing to fight over would be over the county tax, and that would be within our own county. Charlevoix county would not care, how much Emmett, Antrim or any other county in the state raised nor whether they assessed their property at 30, or 60, cents on the dollar, and they would not care what we did. It of course makes no difference whether property is assessed at cash or any value so long as it is equally equal. I cannot do this, state all the benefits to be derived from the change, you would have the same Nov. election each year hundreds of thousands and bills. Neither will I attempt to answer any objections to it, which might be made, but can easily be answered.

The tax commissioners claim they have added to the tax rolls of the state three hundred million dollars and by doing this have reduced and equalized taxation. How much of this three hundred million dollars added to the roll is new property, you can judge by the report in Charlevoix county. Raising the rate of property already on the rolls is only shifting them, and in 9 cases out of 10, will fail in making the taxes more unequal, as the result in Charlevoix county is a conspicuous or a shining example of the system by doing this you have not done a good work, and good results will follow. If you merely attack the commission I feel sure you will fail, as no act of mine however good, can obtain good results from a bad system and there could not be a worse one ever devised than the present one.

The Masonic St. John's Day Service.

Last Sunday was the Sabbath preceding the annual Festival of St. John the Baptist, one of the two chief holidays of Masonry, and the day was appropriately celebrated by Charlevoix Lodge by attendance on divine service at the Episcopal church. The attendance, besides the lodge itself, embraced members of the Eastern Star Adoptive order, and the fine little chapel was filled by these bodies.

The preacher was Bro. Brother Geo. W. Howe, Michigan Conference, M. E. church, a royal Arch Mason and a Royal Select and Super-Excellent Master. Bro. Howe's text was, "Make all men see what is the fellowship of the Mystery which from the beginning of the World hath been hid in God." —Ephesians 3 9 11.

From this text, so full of comprehensive meaning to Masons, the Reverend Brother wove a fabric of sound argument for human kinship, as applied to the great fraternity to which he proudly claims a membership. Applying the life of Masonry's patron saint to the affinity between religion and the teachings of Masonry, the speaker uttered an eloquent exhortation for every Mason to "walk uprightly before God and Man." The sermon was an eloquent and scholarly review of the great theme suggested in its text, and was listened to by a deeply interested congregation.

The musical numbers enlivened an address by a specially selected choir, and a solo by Prof F W. Howe. The responsive reading was the 85th Psalm

HOW IS THIS?

The Secret Scented Tax Commission Under the Search Light.

From the Detroit Journal.

The latest acts of two of the state tax commissioners, A. E. Freeman and Ira T. Sayre, indicate that an investigation of one department of the state as well as the city government is a pressing need of the time. These two commissioners are charged with supplying the railroads with affidavits, setting forth that the general properties of the state are assessed at only 52 per cent of their real cash value, which the commissioners say is $1,715,000,000. So important are these affidavits to the railroads in their suit against the state to invalidate the assessment of the commission and overthrow the decision of the supreme court, that they will unquestionably be their strongest evidence when the case comes to trial.

Either because of bad judgment or incompetency, the work of the state tax commission in many particulars has been exceedingly blundering. Heedless the errors have been of omission. In efficiency now, however, is taking a much more malignant form. That of secrets paid by the people should offer aid and comfort, vital information, to a litigant in a suit against the people of the state is altogether beyond excuse. By and stealthy abuse of official information, the work of the tax commission is made practically worthless and the government now is powerless to enforce the laws and protect the interests of the taxpayers. Such a breach of public confidence demands immediate and thorough investigation by the governor and the attorney general.

The Tax Commission.

In another column we publish an editorial from the Detroit Journal on a recent disclosure of the incompetency of the Michigan tax commission. The SENTINEL has heretofore paid the compliments to this official abortion, and now its criticism has been justified by the attorney general.

As we have before said, the law creating this commission has in inception in no honest intention, on the part of the legislature, to correct certain glaring evils that were existing; but taking advantage of the necessarily broad scope of the law, the commission has gone beyond the spirit of it, and multiplied the evils instead of diminishing them.

That four, Hess is a skeins of misplaced confidence, just as the President has been in postal appointments, is certain; and we believe the unprofessional honesty of the governor will move him to prompt removal of these parasites, who have given more thought to their per diem allowance and their hotel menus than they have the state's good.

The incompetency or dishonesty, or both, of this board of parlor assessors has reached in two directions. It has stimulated the cloak among them the evils really existed and committed rank acts of injustice among the class from which the cry for justice came.

To the tax commissioner, it seems there has been more than one "blind spy Park" in Michigan, and more than one Charlton M. Heald. Supervisors and boards of review have been but puppets in the hands of this band of buccaneers, when they lacked the nerve to assert their prerogatives, and local government rights have been heavily abrogated.

There has been nothing but an exhibition of utter cowardice on the part of these men since they received their commissions from an honest but misled executive.

OUR CELEBRATION

Everything Seems to Indicate a Large Time Here July 3rd and 4th.

July 3d and 4th, especially, will be big days in Charlevoix—the 4th more especially, will be a large, well developed, old fashioned day of enjoyment.

Arrangements have been perfected for a good list of athletic and aquatic sports, including an exhibition drill by the life saving crew.

At ten o'clock, the 4th, State Senator Chas. C. Simons, one of the best of Michigan's orators, will deliver an address at the park, and a good program of music has been provided.

They will be great days, and you will make a mistake if you don't come.

The Life Saving Station.

The Charlevoix Life Saving Station has been inspected this season by both superintendent Morton and Inspector Heinberg. Both these officials speak in the highest terms of Capt. Fountain and his crew, along the line of efficiency, and the good condition of the equipment of the station.

But there is a feature of the Charlevoix station that attaches to no other station in the district—the grounds a surrounding it.

The Village of Charlevoix donated to the government a large tract of its park property for its purpose, and today that tract constitutes the most attractive feature of the original park grounds. The beautiful and well shaped lawns and gravel walks are the work of Capt. Fountain and his crew, the landscape plan being the work of Capt. Fountain alone.

Both superintendent Morton and inspector Heinberg declare the station and grounds are the most beautiful on the lakes But Capt. Fountain has still further plans for improvement, and he will carry them out.

In the issue we print a cut of the station.

Kentucky Has Pitched Battle with Police at Stearns, in Va. Issues and Crime Reach Settlement Long Used to Manchuria.

The Middle ear notorious feuds of the Upper and Kentucky have for some years, be a result now have a final and decisive battle, which the Pinkerton Detective Agency, which is a party of detectives, employed by the Kentucky Coal Company, to protect and to help the Pinkerton men, who were brought into Stearns, Ky., on a special train, and began to shoot and to beat everybody in sight. Merely it looked a state of Russian.

Stearns is a town and the home of Middle Coal Company, located among the mountains of Kentucky, and has a population of 1,500 people. The company has had trouble with its miners for some time, and it was to protect its property against the miners that the Pinkerton men were brought there.

DUE TO PROTECTION

FACTS REGARDING DOMESTIC PLATE GLASS MANUFACTURE.

Rolls of Wages Twice as High as in England and Three Times as High as in Belgium, Yet the Consumer Has Been Greatly Lowered.

A Republican member of Congress from Minnesota has forwarded to the American Economist a pamphlet which has been circulated all over the State of Minnesota and has been printed in many newspapers. It has also found its way into print outside of Minnesota, the Republican at Springfield, Mass., having recently used it as the text of an editorial adverse to protection. The pedal came seemingly from a Minneapolis business house, and is as follows:

"If there was no duty to be paid on imported plate glass, based on Canada's tariff, an ordinary store front would cost $100. To a Minneapolis The same store front, with the present tariff added, each $175, the consumer being obliged to pay $75 extra for duty, which is the 'protection' given to the front, as plate glass is manufactured entirely by machinery, no skilled labor worth mentioning (all machines are operated about as cheap in America as in Europe), it must be clear to any one that the trust is not entitled to such enormous and unreasonable 'protection' as it has at cost of the expense of the consumers (at plate glass, your editor).

"Fireman, Ford & Co."

This is the customary form of argument chosen by free traders as a reason for raising the removal of the protective tariff from all competitive imports. In the case of plate glass there is a semblance of truth on the surface of the statement that if there was no duty to be paid a store front which now costs $100 would cost $100 in Minneapolis. Undoubtedly the store front would be cheaper without a tariff than with a tariff—to begin with. But how long would it stay cheaper? That is the question. Twenty-five years ago, before a protective tariff had helped to establish that industry, we imported all our plate glass and sold it at an average of $2.25 per square foot. To-day the average price per square foot in Antwerp, with the cost of labor in the United States twice as high as it is in those forms and three times as high as it is in Belgium—the exact figures in support of this statement may be found in the testimony taken before the industrial commission in December, 1899—shows the protective tariff, and who would make the plate glass consumed in the United States? Answer, It would be made in countries where wages are one-half or one-third what they are in the United States. Either that, or the American wage earner would have to be reduced to one-half or one-third of what it now is.

It is, after all, almost wholly a question of wages. The Minneapolis journal would have its readers believe the proposition that the labor cost in plate glass manufacture is so small as practically a negligible quantity, since the work is done "entirely by machinery." This is a flagrant perversion of the truth. The labor cost in plate glass manufacture is 40 per cent of the total cost of production, as sworn to before the Industrial Commission.

We have said that in the absence of a protective tariff the selling price of plate glass in the United States would probably be reduced to half with. How long would lower prices remain above those at which plate glass in this country were ground on? Before we left any room for speculation glazed on the subject we will quote what we pay for plate glass. They did the same thing with the pocketbook proposition given in our the plate mills. They stood on it again it some protection were crushed out of existence for the benefit of the trust.

Just now the foreigners are selling plate glass very cheaply in the United States. All the foreign factories are operating on an agreed run, wherein under great discounts are granted to exports to the United States. For example, while the discount on foreign polished plate glass sent to England is 15 per cent off the list price, on Belgian glass sent to the United States the discount is 40 and 5 per cent, making a difference in price of 31 per cent. In France the local price of polished plate glass is at least 15 per cent higher than the price obtained for the same class of glass shipped to the United States. They make this country their dumping ground by means of set prices, and our importe of plate glass in consequence increased from 36,297 square feet in 1893 to 1,326,350 square feet in 1899.

The American railroads, strangely in sympathy with foreign producers, help along the dumping process, and put extra duty by charging 25 cents per 100 pounds more on plate glass shipped from Pittsburgh to Minneapolis than on plate glass shipped from Antwerp to Belgium to Minneapolis; so that, for charge twenty-five cents per 100 pounds more for a haul of 1,000 miles than for a haul of 4,000 miles. Now testimony before the Industrial Commission shows that the trusts "They are charging point only the selling price on domestic plate glass, the price charged when the glass is sold either in four or five cities, and then to add to this rank robbery a duty equivalent to an additional reason why someone plate glass makers need a protective tariff to enable them to compete with Europeans.

The rate in the Dingley tariff on all sizes of plate glass from 24x36 inches up is precisely the rate in the McKinley Democratic free trade tariff of 1894. On these sizes the existing rate is only 1c to 1½ cents per square foot lower than the McKinley tariff rate of 1890.

As to trust monopoly in plate glass production it seems to vary ridiculous from what it is generally supposed to be. Three years ago, the Pittsburg Plate Glass company produced about 75 per cent of our domestic plate glass. The other were not three "independent" factories. Today that number is increased to twelve, with the prices place of the Pittsburg concern per foot lower than it ever was before, and the quality of the product is far superior to the best that was produced when the Pittsburg company had the monopoly.

Our Cousins Coming.

Mr. Mandeville was ready for his relatives when they came, having his eldest daughter home, since having Mamie to look after the house, and her aunt was in the hard world of work that she would think of undertaking, or any great exertion, or any thought and responsibility of anyone but herself.

Mr. Mandeville was very much pleased with the idea of his cousins coming to live with him, for he was very lonely, and Mamie was a great comfort to him, and he was very proud of her, and was very fond of her, and he was very much pleased with the idea of her being the hostess of the entire household, and of his entertainments.

He was very much pleased with the idea of having his cousins come

Charlevoix Sentinel.
WILLARD A. SMITH, Editor.

What the World Owes Every Man.

This world owes to every man a living, says Channing W. Depew, greatly of he has the industry and enterprise to collect it. The world owes to every man more pleasure than pain; more good than bad, more gain than loss; more happiness than sorrow; more success than failure; more love than hate; more friends than enemies; but it rests with the man himself whether he collects that debt for the world holds fast to the good things which it possesses and hide from the bad; and it is only by labor and energy, only by determination and character that the debt which the world owes to every one is collected.

A Serious Consideration.

In the Stockton, Instrumentarium, Charles H. Brookfield says that his great uncle, Henry Halliam, the historian, was invited by Talleyrand to a gathering to see Rossini, Italian vocalist, conducted. As they were waiting up the churchyard, side by side the historian inquired of Talleyrand, "What name do you mean to give him?" "Why, Joseph of Italian Italian," said the good "Oh, bad yet better call him alfred," modestly suggested the historian. "Ever so, cried the latter, "but what if he should turn out a fool?"

Wedding Cake Disaster.

Paris the other day enjoyed the unusual sight of a cake five feet long by inches in height being carried solemnly along the streets to two men with a hand walking behind. One of them slipped, and the unfortunate author of confectionery was credited to finish upon the occasion. The cake intended for a wedding feast, and was for the breakfast. It is one of the features of Mardi Gras in Paris that a cake exactly as real as the bride. The cake had the utmost difficulty in getting in order sufficiently to be fetched, and at that hour could when the cake was ready.

Matrimonial Ages.

A statistician has published the results of his investigation of the relative ages of husbands and wives in the various capitals of Europe. According to the Parisian Journal he discovers that marriages are most frequent when the husband is two years older than the wife. Women under twenty years of age, however, usually take men three years somewhat old or active years older than themselves. The cases in which the men was a year younger than the woman were almost as numerous as those in which he was six or seven years older.

To Improve American Cattle.

Henry C. Moore of Ames, Ia., believes that it is possible to improve breed the American cattle with adding the imported type and that breed the produce would be able to withstand the severe winters of the United States. He has been in communication on the subject with Peary the Arctic explorer, who is favorable impressed with the idea. "The cattle of the present season among herds of the Western ranges," said Mr. Moore, "emphasizes the necessity of trying to infuse hardier blood into American cattle."

Indoor Snowstorm.

A writer tells of an indoor snowstorm on a very clear cold evening at a party given in Stockholm, Sweden. Many people with gathered in a single room, which became so warm as to be uncomfortable. The window sashes were found frozen and a pane of glass was broken out. A cold air current rushed in and at the same instant thousands of white specks came to fall on the floor in all parts of the room. The atmosphere was so charged with moisture that the sudden fall in temperature produced a snowfall indoors.

Cecil Rhodes' Dream Realized.

The dream of Cecil Rhodes is realized in America before the funds left by him have made it possible in Oxford. The wonderful university in the great athletic manufacturing city of Schenectady, N. Y., has among its students small colonies exclusively young men from England, Scotland, France, Germany, Switzerland, Norway, Sweden, Denmark, Holland, Spain, Italy, Russia, Brazil, Mexico, Canada, Siam and Japan. Nearly all the leading engineering schools of the world are represented there.

English Shanghaied.

The wife of a European official, recently arrived in Shanghai, was surprised one afternoon to receive the following "note."

"Dear Madam, This morning you have order to us of a tank, would advise to set right to at what you told me as the picture. The picture only one drawers one have folding, and other four drawers all of gold out. Please you may come down to see and thanks."

The lady hurried down at once to pull out the tangle.—Tit-Bits.

His Strong Recommendation.

The old gentleman showed his displeasure plainly. He seems to set rather presumptuous for a youth in your position to ask for my daughter's hand," he said. "Can you advance any good reason why I should give my consent?" "Yes, sir," replied the young man promptly. "What?" "I'm comparatively speaking, not responsible in the matter of my personal expenditure, and I think you will find me less costly to maintain than any other young fellow you could pick out!"

"The Traveling Widow.

The Sunday school superintendent was giving a class of small girls the other day. "And what was the widow's cruse?" he asked. There was a moments silence, then a little hand waved timidly. "Please, sir," said the youngster, "the widow was one of the people last week with Noah in his ark!"

Preparing for Spring.

Suburban Druggist—I have just placed an order for two gross of plasters."

City Friend—What did you order so many for?

The trembling hand of the gray-haired mother finished Dora's dress, and then the burning tears of her silent horror, the sin she had called upon her daughter to be her from the hotel where Sib Sabin had entered the parlor, and then the sudden, but kind, good-bye when the hard look had smoothed her face, and was as good as any, lay still and scared on the counterpane, never to take to bitter leaden again.

"Always senseless," she answered, in faltering tones. "No, Willie, dear boy, I cannot forgive you when you talk of anything your fancy of pain."

"Not one, I suppose," continued Willie, lying so impudently, clapping hand on the thin one that lay outside the counterpane. "I have got myself in Lydia's place, and I think I should be sorry for the privilege of selling in cup."

"Dora's pretty, Willie, dear, proud, and, like, clumsiness, with an irresponsible sense of duty, and a great conscience."

"Oh, silver Lizzie," she says, with an amused consciousness if little her own feelings, "I don't know, I don't know, I have your mother until for my to come on, while you are so good to me, I don't want to see her."

"Dora," the wistful pain in his dark eyes. "Dear little sister Dora, how I long to see her! Tell me, Lizzie, why why leaves her? She is coming shortly after, and I'm sorry I'm in the way, for, if not, we shall meet spell some time. Dora, Lizzie, tell me!"

"Don't talk that way," she says, in distress at his pain, and he sees the tears as soon as this from breaks. "Dora—Dora—I know I cross more some than Mrs. Wilson, which, I know, I don't mean to, and I'm sorry now tell. But we'll show—you, mother and the doctor—we'll show you I can be good to Dora—that the indications point to the worst."

"Your son and of us, the doctor, ever—and taken care of, Dora, and, little sister, I'm sorry I'm in the way, and I'm sorry I'm in the way, and I'm sorry I'm in the way, and

PLATFORMS OF 1904

THE ISSUE OF 1892 TO BE FOUGHT OVER AGAIN

Unless the Republicans Stand Firmly for Protection Without Apology, the Democrats Will Gain on the Tariff Reform Proposition.

The Democrats are preparing to make exactly the same kind of a fight they made in 1892, on exactly the same issue. They say there can be no compromise on the tariff question.

The question now arises, Can the Republicans go into the campaign with any prospect of success if they contends that a large part of the Democratic contention is correct? Are not persons fooled and woo on Republican friends?

To show the position in which the two parties would find themselves in case their Columbus idea is adopted, we quote from Mr. Charles S. Hamlin, of Boston, who was assistant secretary of the treasury under President Cleveland. Mr. Hamlin spoke at the Sanders Tilden banquet recently held in New York. He gave an outline of what he calls "the great questions of the coming presidential contest." He said the first attack should be upon the foreign policies of the administration, the second upon the treatment of trusts and monopolies, third tariff reform; fourth, economy in government administration, fifth, the civil service; sixth, the trust plank in the platform in his political creed and gave his entire attention to "tariff reform" as the purpose of the rolling Democratic competition to take the place of the protectionist competition, which, he said, is being discussed. Now quote Mr. Hamlin's words upon the subject of the tariff as follows:

I believe the first step should be realizing to realize our system of tariff taxation to the end that foreign competition may come in to take the place of that domestic competition which is being destroyed. This is the purpose of the rival competition which is now going on, and I believe it will succeed. Now, with the federal government entirely adverse to reform and provide no facilities to secure information as to what the competitionless are doing, it is the duty of the Democratic party to the people, to what respect does it differ from "lower protective republicanism?"

Some of our Iowa Republicans say that domestic competition has been destroyed, and that foreign competition must come in to take the place of domestic competition and that is exactly what Mr. Hamlin says.

How are the "progressive Republicans" of Iowa to make a campaign against Mr. Hamlin's creed?

Are they in this country next year will be for or against the tariff as a means of protecting American factories and their working men. There can be no middle ground.

If the Republican party, officially, adopts a protective tariff policy, then, if successful, the Republicans party will be defeated in the Presidential campaign, it will be defeated because the people who turn to the relief of tariff reformers will turn away from the party that has always stood for a protective tariff.

The Washington Post, an independent newspaper, does not believe that tariff reform will be put into the national platform of the Republican party next year. The Post is an able and independent journal. In the Forty Country Republican convention, there were some in the house who were doubtful expressed. After pouring the phrase on the part of the Democrats to attempt to put the "Iowa plank" into the national Republican platform, the Post says:

"Has the support of the 'Iowa idea' may pass the platform last year is such extremely and doubtful that the convention failed to realize its full import until Speaker Henderson flew the track and the other Iowa Republican leaders were metaphorically by the ears and in each other's hair. In his Des Moines speech the Speaker declared that the time has come for reducing the free list and a general revision of the tariff should be made on the stand-points, and for that reason much as we approve of it, we do not credit the intimation that it was referred by the President during the governor's visit to Washington. The President has certainly given no intimation, in his public talks, of a desire of a desire to procure writing it into party."

It may be true that the national leaders of the Republican party will be in favor of writing into the platform a tariff plank with some uncertainties connected with it. But the party has not been dealing in uncertainties during the eight years, and it will be strange if the national leaders shall suddenly grow willing to "come out" from behind a different constituency to different localities. For one reason is that the national platform next year will stand radically in favor of the protective tariff without apology.

Meanwhile, the discussion going on is interesting.—Des Moines Capital.

Doing Her Best.

A very small Philadelphia girl, who is not yet old enough for her immediate family circle for obedience, but her conscience was plain to the parents in her summer day, when a theatrical show was announced. The little mother called to her from the window to gather up her toys and come in. Just then, without warning, there was a heavy peal of thunder. Then the child, very much frightened, looked up to the sky and said: "Oh, God, don't send us rain, I am hurrying all I can."

Pake Fun at Dr. Hills.

New York, Dwight Hills arrested some feeling in this south by his remarks discussing the case of an Indianapolis commissioner who refused to vote Hickey's Washington's bust. Dr. Hills is said to have gone to make his Washington's bust should the colored man be a visitor at his home. Dr. Hills is said to have received a number of resolutions of McKinley, Penn., signing discussing the matter, which have sent to Dr. Hills a purse of 26 cents.

POSTAL BANKS OF BRITAIN.

Their Assets Less Than Their Deposits, But Nobody Worries.

The fact is said. The postoffice savings banks of Great Britain are technically insolvent. Their liabilities, the last of the year were $100,000,000, their assets only about $99,000,000. Nobody worries about a little thing like that, the government is responsible. Of course the disappearance from the bank notes the depositors must was forced to pay for national bonds before the war. The borrowing of the rate of interest allowed is a obvious issue. The postal banks were authorized in 1861 and nearly 170,000,000 was deposited the first year. Some later developments are curious. By the 1897 account a note as small as two cents can be deposited. Deposits can be withdrawn by telegraph. School savings banks are recognized, but are not very successful owing to the smaller aggregations of assets as a medium of investment. A feature of the postal bank is that thousands of their money depositors can buy small government bonds.—New York World.

KNEW THE VALUE OF TEARS.

How Little Piece of Femininity Discomfited Her Enemies.

The eternal feminine knows at a very early age the value of tears in getting matters adjusted. Not a little girl of five was quarreling along in school with her playmate when Bessie begins "laying the law" with a pile of fresh-mown grass. She was having about the space she cared no chance of pasting these naughty girls of mine, and she was not to be trifled with. Pretty soon she started in tears. Putting down her grass she stood with her hands on her hips a grandmotherly, amused look upon her features. When the crying showed signs of a little tired of the game she stood as two grandmotherly, saying:

"Stop, dears, enough for one short cry."

Sultan Missed the Whiskers.

When the sultan of Turkey first met Gen. Taft he refused to believe that the man before him was really the governor of the Philippines under the new dispensation. Making inquiry about the Philippine delegation, Mr. Taft ascertained that his personal appearance did not come up to what the sultan expected. "What's the matter?" asked Gen. Taft. "Is the board Filipino representative to assume that every high American official must certain had prescribed a dreamy beard and the thought the board was necessarily a part of every high American official?"

WOMEN WHO WEAR TROUSERS.

Employed at Gardening. They Have Adopted Sensible Garments.

At Kew Gardens, in London, a small, intelligent, capable and scientific regard of practical women gardeners is employed. They labor in the potting sheds, wield the pruning shears, study fertilizers and wear trousers.

In summer their author informed princesses are of dark blue linen or brown, as each wearer prefers. They have adopted long breeches wrapped close to their ankles, because they know about the ankles to plants unwrapped stooping in and out among growing plants. A blue smocked frock covers gathered in by a broad belt at the waist leaves the remainder of their very sensible uniform. The public when visiting the famous gardens can by chance a glimpse of them.

Three Lively Eggs.

"I think we shall have lively eggs yesterday. That is an unusually large number," said the carpenter. "There are. Look at them. Aren't they lively?" When the three eggs were laid down they immediately upon rolling over so as to stand upon their points. If they were pushed over on their sides they flew straight back to their points again. There is no trick about the eggs," said the carpenter. "They haven't been tampered with. Hens make them stand that way in the addition of their contents to the whole matter is not the public. That is the same as enough they were laid at will leaf I have seen a good many eggs and I never found three in one day before.—Minneapolis Herald.

Perfectly Proportioned Man.

Dr. Sargent of Harvard says the finest living example of physical culture he knows is a young athlete, Yale Wayne, who works in the rope shop at the Charlestown navy yard. There are Wayne's measurements: height, 5 feet 4 inches; weight, 151 pounds; neck, 14 inches; biceps, 14 inches; chest expanded, 43 inches; waist, 31 inches; thigh, 24 inches; knee, 12 inches; calf, 18½ inches; upper arm, 11½ inches; forearm, 12½ inches. He is a fine specimen in some ways the Apollo Belvedere. His strength is phenomenal. Sargent knows no going to see him as a model.

Regular Accident to Girl.

Miss Gussie Mae of Texas, while standing before a mirror the other day combing her hair, came too head a modern look. Then she found that her head was turned sideways and that the contact got it back. The landlady said she had a crick in her neck. Presently she began to "holler" pain, and a doctor was sent for. It didn't take him long to discover that the girl had dislocated her neck. It took two surgeons, aided by two strong men, to pull the crick back in place. Then the disappointed one took her father home the girl would have been killed.

MEDICINE IN SLOT MACHINES.

Press the Button and Get the Cure for Your Ailment.

A young man in a green suit stepped before a slot machine on Arch street, held his handkerchief before a tiny nozzle, dropped a cent in a small crack, and in a silvery spray there issued forth a quantity of wintergreen cologne. The young man was delighted. He sniffed the lovely perfume and to the dealer he said: "Hurray! What next, I wonder?"

"The medicine slot machine is next," the dealer answered. "I expect to have one soon. The machine is making a great success everywhere. On its face appear a dial the names of twenty-five mild diseases—cold, headache, rheumatism, indigestion, such diseases as wouldn't be apt to confine you to your room—and there is an arrow that you move to the disease which you have. Then you drop your coin in the slot and into your hand falls a little vial of medicine, with the directions marked in the cork."—Philadelphia Record.

TAUGHT TO READ NEWSPAPERS.

New Study Introduced into the Vassar Curriculum.

Vassar girls in future are to be taught how to read the newspapers. A new history class, the course of which is to afford opportunity for a thorough knowledge of current events and lay a foundation for intelligent reading of the newspapers, has been offered this year. Current newspapers and periodicals are the class of text-book. Months are assigned to the pupils to read from three to three hours a week, each member of the class will be required to report from time to time upon the contents of assets as a medium of investment. A feature of the course is a trip to the Metropolitan Museum of Art, where the students will be taken to see the pictures and small ancient coins of the Roman Empire.—New York World.

A Lone Widow's Appeal.

A lone widow in Henry county, Mo., has sent a letter to Congressman Hepburn to her local paper. "Dear Friend Editor, I would like for you to push my case before a notice for a husband for me. I am 38 years old, have children and there will be no deadbeat bills for my teeth air all ok. I am such a stout wife that frashes are place the parlor line. Also player on the accordeon and have had two hatchets. They air ded but there graves air green as landed to all on account of me. Any lovin man of wait over 120 answer please. No dutsu."

Aristocratic Brooklyn.

Brooklyn, a suburb of Boston, has not over 15,000 people, and its assessed taxable wealth is $6,000,000, which approximates but a fraction of its real values. It has water works which cost $1,000,000, a high school costing nearly $200,000, exclusive of the land, a manual training school, costing $200,000, all the streets are macadamized and kept beautifully clean, and it has a $100,000 bathhouse for children, which is practically free.

Artillery Officers Nervous.

Owing to the determination of the chief of artillery to require a higher standard of expert knowledge on the part of the officers of the service numerous artillery lieutenants are desirous to exchange posts with cavalry and infantry officers. Many officers likes recently appointed to the army under the reorganization act are unhappy at the prospect of being placed in the ranks of the artillery service, and regarding it as a punishment for their appointment.

Her Conclusion.

"Mamma," said little Marguerite, coming home from her first day at school, "I don't think I'm going to like it. Teacher says what makes you ask such a funny question, and she has children of her own. Just wait until you get home."

Deer and Sea Water.

When deer is exposed to the action of sea water and the weather it is said to corrode at the rate of an inch in thirty-two years, so both of iron under the same conditions corrodes in 128 years. When exposed to fresh water and the weather the period is 175 years for steel and 800 years for iron.

Grip

Brought On Sciatic Rheumatism.

Nervous Prostration Followed.

Dr. Miles' Nervine Gave Back Health.

"I was laid up during the winter of 1902 with sciatic rheumatism so severely that I was brought up to a severe attack of Lumbago, which followed the grip. I was so in bed one week, unable to move, and was so lame that I could not turn over in bed without assistance. I was also very nervous, and could not sleep for a certain kind of machine she gets a—she does not know how to sit down but try to pound a typewriter she does not know how.

ENGLISH IDEAS OF CANADA.

Life in the West Not What the Colonists Had Pictured.

Curious accounts come to hand of life in Canada, also what to western Canada. A proportion of them, as "some have been engaged in agricultural enthusiasm of what life in the wild west must be and the new Canadian life, which is not at all what dreams you with so much gusto as they would have ladled to Lord Fortune twice a week.

Unfortunately most of these warlike accounts are not known also perhaps they stop of learning to adopt, and the air seems to have filled with the disease of their gone for off to some washington, or to the point, for to transform to stock their enthusiasm.

Thus the man who was sentenced to "Canada" disappear, and the bachelor has entirely disappeared, and he no longer returns of Dominion Dominion's land, he enters no more, since the lines of under examination issued with the, enters the same clothing as the white man, and goes to church regularly on Sundays.

WORKING FOR UNCLE SAM.

Typewriter Girls Have an Easy Time at Washington.

From 9 o'clock in the morning until 4 in the afternoon the typewriter girls in Uncle Sam's employ are busy. Sitting down upon the machines with the machines, and the machines are busy. Sometimes the machines are busy, and the machines are busy, and the machines are busy.

Uncle Sam is the largest employer of typists in the country and will be the largest employer of the typewriter girl. The amount of work which the machines turn out would make even Clyde Fitch look dizzy.

Uncle Sam is the model kind of a boss for typewriter girls to work for. He pays large wages and he expects his workers with everything they want. If a girl expresses a preference for a certain kind of machine she gets it. Also does he have to sit down and try to pound a typewriter she does not know how.

Sometimes a new typewriter girl is employed in one of the departments who thinks she knows all there is to put about her job.

STOLEN BABE FOUND.

CHICAGO CHILD IS RESTORED TO HER PARENTS.

Woman Who Abducted Little Alice Harding Is Located on the Coast—Punishment Has Been Sympathetic Discovery and Gets Four in Jail.

After Fleeing the Pacific coast for about a year and a half, Mrs. Ella Harding succeeded in locating in Chicago Tuesday by discovering that her child was found by the police after one of the most sensational searches ever undertaken in the city. The couple, a man and a woman, who are said to have abducted the child, are now in the custody of the police. The woman is alleged to have lived in the Tenderloin district, where she is thought to have kept the child, and, when the search began, Mrs. Fleming, who claims to be the child's aunt, and who is in charge of Alice, left the city and went to Los Angeles. Only the evening before the child was found by the police was a trial which could be nothing in comparison to the sensation that followed. Mr. Fleming, who claims to be the child's uncle, was in charge of Alice

FAIR PLAY IN TRADE

RIGHT SORT OF RECIPROCITY FOR THIS COUNTRY.

Equal Privileges for Our Exports in All the Markets of the World and no Tariff Discrimination for or Against What We Import.

There is no question that the United States can get all the reciprocity treaties it wants on just such a basis as it is with so that end can down sufficiently its protective tariffs and make sacrificial offerings of its home industries. It may be claimed in many instances and perhaps proven in some that the particular sacrifices demanded are sins in comparison with the general advantage to be gained, but such reasoning will gather no satisfactory to the sufferers or be convincing or persuasive enough to induce the Senate of the President who in the course of time and events might be actuated by such statesmanship as a reciprocity treaty could even be hoped for in prospect, a glaring fact in industries threatened thereby. It may relieve through their friends in Congress and have the moral support and aids of people who without being well advised in the premises believe in fair play to every legitimate Almost can honestly and view with indignation an unjustian any proposition to find a foreign market for some products by imparting the home market for other products.

From all of which it appears and results that reciprocity as it has been recently proposed has failed to work, but that from the conditions surrounding it it was from the start destined to failure, and may as well now be relegated definitely to the Limbo of abortive but impracticable schemes.

Acceptance of this situation should not, however, carry with it abandonment of efforts to promote the foreign trade and commercial expansion of the country. Rather should the frank recognition of our unavailable instrument make more the search for a effective weapon for a more proper purpose. Reciprocity at best is a piecemeal, haphazard method, dwarfed with such separate action over the national boundaries to be made, and by its necessary and intermittent delays working its friends and disgusting every one. The dignity of the United States and the practical necessities of the case seem demand the adoption of some policy that shall be susceptible of general application, that shall place not the American producer and shipper against policy obstacles and difficulties in foreign markets, and that shall, in short, compel in every quarter the "open door" for American trade, but that shall be central, when that door is not open to American trade as it is to any other trade.

There was a time when the United States was not of sufficient commercial importance to enable it successfully to insist on such a policy, but the time is when the United States with its immense population unprecedented wealth and unapproached consuming capacity for years to come yet, possesses in its position, if it admits the propriety of such a policy, a lever of great power. It is not in the nature of Americans to submit meekly or in resignation

CHAPTER XXII.

Lucy Lee was the orphan of a young poem, the offspring of a sublime creation. The off-shoot of a man who had taken a flight upon the wings of genius, and had soared into the realm of song, and had come back to earth with a glowing, throbbing, pulsating poem in his heart, and had laid it down at the feet of a Madonna—a Madonna who was a woman, and had lavished herself upon her child in a delirium of loving her, stirring by that "faith which is the evidence of things hoped for," which assuredly convinced that this same child, the fruit of a dream, was sent by God the living God's chosen to be a priest and prophet between earth and heaven, endowed and equipped to make the way between the two, and to bring heaven down to earth, and lift earth up to heaven. Natalie Diadia were fashioned in joyful mystery, and she began to realize that a happier life for the young lady was promised by the unfolding buds and lighter spirits.

Norah, for one, knew that the young sprouting wells in the wilderness and wilds of her mistress' heart, had been fed from the fast flowing Nile, the Nile of love, the Nile of Mary and Nora's serene thoughts and exhaustless spiritual refreshment.

Fine Norah had never forgotten herself for the hour of the visit of the young lady to the infirmary cave or to the allnight spiritual feast, the mutual giving of herself always, humbly imploring encouragement from Mrs. Mary, from the night of her, much less one lady gay and young, upon the Nile of Mary, Norah and always—yet gentle and encouraging—to be remembered by her mistress, and to be treated with the kind and loving consideration of a Christian lady, and a Christian lady who was a woman and a mother, whose sympathies were well developed, and whose heart was full of the Christ spirit, which is love, and which would have had Norah be a Christian if she had not been a woman and a mother.

Mrs. Mary Nora had had a long talk at home again, to the great delight of Norah herself, who had been in the discharge of the weekly Woman's mission, and had lavished herself upon her child in an extravagance of loving her, stirring by that "faith which is the evidence of things hoped for," which assuredly convinced that this same child, the fruit of a dream, was sent by God the living God's chosen to be a priest and prophet between earth and heaven, endowed and equipped to make the way between the two, and to bring heaven down to earth, and lift earth up to heaven. THE POPULAR PULPIT

THE IDEAL LIFE.

Rev. Joseph Silverman

And he said, Go forth and stand upon the mountain before the Lord. 1 Kings xix. 11.

There are times when we also have lived somewhat in the cave to become disentangled with our surroundings. With the communings between the soul and its Maker well-nourished within and its ears with serious zeal to hear the voice have succeeded in climbing to the mountain top. Thus under some well-ordered spot we have sought to engage gather our feeble strength, and at length to climb the steep and rugged mountain. And when at last after many trials and failures we have gained the summit, we are only rewarded for our efforts by the glorious sight before us and by the sweet music of the spirit.

There in the valley we see only a small part of the world's wonders; here a field, a city, there a river, a village and farm. Yet we can hardly help the sublime and awe inspiring feeling that we are in the presence of a great whole. We feel that we are in the presence of a great whole. We feel that we are in the presence of a great whole. We feel

FREE RAW MATERIAL

AN INDEFINITE TERM NOT GENERALLY UNDERSTOOD.

In the Seven Billions Worth of Semi-finished Raw Materials Annually Produced Domestic Labor and Wages are Represented to the Extent of Six Billions.

Says the Chicago Inter Ocean:

The president thinks that cutting off the tariff on wool artificially would cost the trade and might ruin finish manufacturers. The general utilization of that kind of that the great world have to do would be in connection with "cutting off the tariff on wool artificially" to also cut off the tariff on foreign raw materials. Well, the great majority of manufactured industries in this country from raw material would enable Uncle Sam to close their wares at a reduction of at least 25 per cent, and leave a good profit for the mill and better wages for the laborer.

The editor of the Daily Ape knows full know what "raw materials" is and what it means before he comes out and says that labor that was bread enough of times without bumbles. Then, we will tell him in the words of Uncle Ca Carter what "raw material" is to him, in terms, is "All the products of the earth are in two primary conditions, and we make the distinction of the material, for the sake of the manufacturer and the consumer, and the manufacturer and the consumer, for all commodities bring increased production and enhance the value of the material, and consequently and economic service. If nature from raw material, for instance, the cotton plant, it would make no sense, if it produced only 25 per cent in cost, it would make no sense, your farmers and their families and throw out of work millions of laborers who carding from $2 to $4 a day. Fully three-quarters are engaged in producing our so-called raw material, the remainder in converting the raw material into finished products. Now, suppose we throw three-quarters of employment to those of our white men and also to the negro friend? Is the one would not be benefited, for the market would be gone. We advise our town friends to look into the matter of free raw material thoroughly, instead of the superficial glance they show, and with a conscience based on an argument so fallacious as an empty wool bag. When it comes to competing in the foreign market it should be remembered that in manufacture the raw material is to be equivalent are 50 per cent free, a fraction of our tariff law that the makers rarely consider when talking about "free raw materials" and the interests of the American Producer.

Ear No Sign of Character.

After sounding and photographing more than 10,000 pairs of ears of persons, including those of 2,000 insane and 500 criminals, and those of 200 animals, an English commissioner forced to conclude that the ear gives no clew to personal traits. This is a hard blow to so-called scientists, who think they can pick out the character of society by the ears, which the owner wear their ears.

NO LANGUAGE OF THEIR OWN.

Sixies Are the Only People Who Can Not Boast a Distinctive Tongue.

Among the nations of the world the dying are about a dozen in number, and one of the rare ones, fortunately for a student, is the only country of Switzerland speak German, while the remainder speak four other languages, three, namely French and Italian, the fourth, Romansch, a language of the Grisons, which is a dialect of the Latin, and is spoken by about 50,000 people, or 1 in 1,000 of the population. Romansch is the only dialect of the Latin tongue which has survived in Switzerland, and it is the only one in which there is no literature. The Swiss Confederation, which is a federation of 22 cantons, has no official language, but German, French and Italian are recognized as the official languages, and a German is the man who speaks all three languages. Formerly it would require some imagination to think of Switzerland as a country of three nations, but the Swiss are now proud of their triple character, and they are proud of their triple character.

In the Swiss congress or national parliament the members make their speeches either in French or German, for nearly all the members understand both languages. The acts of the president are translated by an official interpreter and translation is the only system in both languages. Formerly it would require some imagination to think of the Swiss as a people, but the Swiss are now proud of their triple character, and they are proud of their triple character.

Travelers Better Than Watchdogs.

Burglar dealers are predicting a boom for the summer. They say that people have been buying hundreds of them for country places. Occasionally in one community, however, one finds another that recommends the dog as a better thing than a burglar alarm. Some one writes of a man living near the country discovered not long ago the presence of a burglar, and he secured the services of a guardian whose fidelity and nerve were unquestionable. The man of the house, as usual, was absent, but the burglar was not aware of the presence of a watchdog, and he proceeded to rob the house. He had gone but a little way when the watchdog made a leap for the throat of the burglar, and he was soon in the grasp of the watchdog, and he was soon in the grasp of the watchdog.

NORTHERN MICHIGAN.

Just think of it! Bemidji county wants the proposed new normal school located there.

Esperia in the daily papers from Boyne City are to the effect that the iron works at St. Ignace are to be dismantled and removed to our sister village at the head of Lake Charlevoix.

Sometime Friday night a thief entered the home of W. H. Wilde, at Boyne City and ransacked every room, securing a large amount of valuables. The culprit evidently chloroformed the inmates, as none of them heard a stir during the night and suffered the usual results of the drug the following day.

Boyne Falls is at last to have a long needed water supply and will have one of the most modern and up-to-date brick yards in Northern Michigan. It will be situated on the Jim Bedford's place just south of the village limits. W. J. Pearson who now owns the land is at the head of a mill to organize a stock company to be capitalized at $50,000.00. The very latest improved machinery is being ordered and they will be able to turn out from 40,000 to 50,000 brick each day for six months in the year and will employ about 50 men. Experts have been her to test the clay and pronounce it A No 1, second to none in this part of the state. It is expected that the erection of the buildings will commence next week.

It's a far cry from Brooklyn bridge to Bayou City, from the waters of the East river to those of the Boyne, where the little steam engine of the blind architect Roebling did its duty work and looked upon the disembarking thousands of foreigners, who were destined to be American citizens, to the yards of the mills where the same engine now shunts carloads of maple logs predestined for ball and kitchen flooring the world over. The puffing, noisy locomotive takes an equal pride in building up the fortune of lumber kings as it did in giving to the world the fame of John A. Roebling. The present No 1 of the B. C. & S. R. R. R. was the engine employed in the construction of the Brooklyn bridge and used in moving the heavy material.

A few years ago Jim Conway was at Otsego lake, where it was employed as a switch engine. From there it came to Boyne City—the first locomotive to connect Boyne with the outside world. It is now actively engaged as a yard engine and doing good work.

Osteopathy.

Drs F. J. Harlan & J. T. Nevinger Osteopathic Physicians, of American school of osteopathy are again located in Charlevoix for the practice of Osteopathy. Their office this year will be at the Hotel Boland where they will be pleased to meet those desiring Osteopathic treatment. Osteopathy was first introduced in Charlevoix three years ago by Dr. Harlan whose wonderful success in treating disease has caused Osteopathy to become universally known not only in Charlevoix but for miles around. Those desiring treatment should consult Drs. Harlan & Nevinger at their earliest convenience. Consultation free, entrance Bridge St. side.

DIAVOLO AND THE BIG CIRCUS.

Unusual Interest Centered in the Coming of the Great Attraction.

Unusual interest is centered in the coming to this city in the near future of the Adam Forepaugh and Sells Brothers United Shows. In the first place few people of this community have had an opportunity of seeing that widely advertised and famous feat of Diavolo leaping the loop on a bicycle, which created such a tremendous sensation by New York City and throughout the country last summer. As Diavolo is one of the great attraction of these shows, with which he has been continuously connected from the time when he first successfully accomplished the remarkable feat of riding the concentric coil to the present time, few people will neglect to avail themselves of this chance to see him in his dangerous flight and revolution in mid-air. Leaping the loop has a strong claim upon the attention of the masses, in the first place it is a practical demonstration of that true scientific maxim imparted to youth—the swinging in a circle of a bucket filled with water without spilling the contents. Nearly every boy and girl has performed this trick, hence the interest in its accomplishment—looping the loop. Diavolo will be seen at afternoon and evening performances, when the big show exhibits at Petoskey on Thursday Aug 4th.

On motion the village attorney was directed to draw up a lease for said property, said lease to expire December 31st 1904 and the further privilege of the mill owner to rent it for the further term of nine years with the first chance at purchase.

Mr. Dagg tendered his resignation as superintendent of the Electric Light plant and on motion it was accepted.

There are two building in process of construction about the harbor now, and carpenters and masons can not be had in sufficient number.

Mr. and Mrs. Tity are entertaining friends from Northport this week. Among their guests is one little lady who does not hail from Northport but gets the lion's share of attention. She arrived Monday last and weighs eight pounds. The same day and same hour Dr. and Mrs. Wakinshaw received a caller. It is of the same size, color, sex and came by the same route as the new comer at the City house. There are many among Beaver Island's bunch of summer girls and have already made quite a sensation by their beauty and gravity.

BEAUTIFUL BEAVERS.

(Our Island or Harbor's Memories A Fine Summer Trip.

There is no spot in Michigan where Nature has been more lavish of her favors than at Beaver Island, which, on a clear day, can be seen from Charlevoix. It lies off to the Northwest, or, rather, to the "setting sun-west," and is a part and parcel of Charlevoix county.

"Beaver Harbor," or St James, the port for the Island, is the ancient capital of Beaver Island Mammoth, and also the ancient county seat of old Manitou County, which formerly was composed of the Manitou, Fox and Beaver groups.

About the vicinity of the harbor there are many old Mormon clearings, in which the decomposing stumps yet stand, the timber of which was cut by the Mormons fifty years ago. These clearings abound in clumps of second growth evergreens, and some of the prettiest groves on the top of the earth are found, among which stalked gales wind to the northwest shore of the Island, and to Tom Cook, one of the most beautiful sheets of water to be found anywhere.

THE NEW HOTEL BEAVER.

THE STEAMER BEAVER.

There is "the point," again, are some lakelets upon that cable one to linger in admiration. From these farther shores the other islands of the group, far just a canoe trip from one pebbly beach. Further up the Island, to the southward are still some spots that enchant the lover of nature. There are farms and farmers, and yet the fields are well tilled, cattle and sheep roam the broad commons where once the followers of King Strang lived.

At the Harbor are two hotels—the old, familiar, Gibson House, and the new "Beaver" Hotel owned and managed by Capt. and Mrs. Bonner. It is a modern hotel in all respects and offers unusual attractions to summer visitors.

Communication with the island is exclusively by the swift and seaworthy steamer Beaver, Capt. J. H. Campbell, an experienced lake mariner, and as genial an old sailor as ever rang a bell.

The Beaver leaves Charlevoix at 8 o'clock a. m., every Monday, Wednesday and Friday, and in three hours is moored in the old St. James dock in Beaver Harbor. You have three hours there. If you conclude to remain over a trip, you will never regret it.

There is no fear of some rainy side summer trip that the run on the steamer Beaver to Beaver Island. Try it.

A GOOD CATCH AT THE BEAVERS.

DROWNED.

Sad Death of Hugh Gilger, at His Wisconsin Home.

Following is an account, taken from a Green Bay, Wis., paper of the death by drowning, of Hugh Gilger, son of A. L. Gilger whose wife is a sister of John and Robert O'Neill of this place.

"Hugh Gilger was drowned at Menderville on the Fourth of July while spending the day there with four of his friends, Ray Tibbs, Charlie Wilsey, Clifton Waite and Charlie Le Tabre.

"The boys had guns out on the morning hunt and after spending a short time at the hotel, procured bathing suits and ran down to the pier. One of the boys jumped off and after mounting the water with his arms, held it up and shouted "no deep."

"The others then plunged in and Hugh not knowing how to swim very well, became frightened when he realized how deep the water really was, and began to struggle. The other boys then saw that everything was not all right and swam back to Hugh and endeavored to help him. They all displayed wonderful courage and did everything they could to keep him above the water. The struggles of the frightened boy were so great, however, that it was impossible to save him and they finally were obliged to leave him to save their own lives. Charlie LeFebre being stronger than the other boys, went back to him when he was 20 feet away from the pier and having tried to hold him up and falling swam back to a post to support himself as his strength began to give out.

"As he left him he saw the little boy roll over on his back and hold his hands up as if imploring help. The rest of the day in diving for the body and the day near the pier was dragged from 1 until 9 o'clock without succeeding for the body, at which time it was found.

"It was brought to the residence on Monroe avenue about 2 o'clock yesterday afternoon.

"Hugh Gilger was at one time a carrier boy on The Advocate and went from there to the Sentinel where he acted as help boy. From there he went to the plant where he was also hired as help boy.

"A very pathetic incident in connection with the drowning is the fact that Saturday was his fifteenth birthday and for the first time in his life he was visiting Menderville. His mother had never started him to learn to swim, and so honorable a little fellow he was, that he would never disobey her to indulge in this pastime so favored by boys of his age. Had he been able to swim, the accident would probably not have occurred. As it was he possessed his ability to swim and to his right last control of himself and what knowledge of swimming he was aware.

"He was spoken of by every one as a remarkably smart and honest little fellow and all of his friends thought a great deal of him.

"He was born at Charlevoix, Mich., and it is possible that his body will be returned to our place later. For the present it will be buried at Allouez Cemetery.

—The toy pistol, so innocent and harmless, as many suppose, is more dangerous responsible for a number of deaths in this state during the past week than lock jaw. If parents would provide their children with double barrel shot guns to celebrate the Fourth with the "cannon" would not be greater.

—A Michigan editor has created a sensation by printing a strong editorial defensive of Sunday fishing. He insists it is no more a sin to catch a trout on Sunday than to catch a yellow legged chicken for a minister's dinner. The comparison is clever and may serve him as an effectual extinguisher from the pulpit.

—Burglars entered the residence of Dr. G. W. Crozier last night, and purfered with the Doctor's gold watch, diamond shirt stud and twelve dollars in money. The burglars passed through the bedroom where Dr. and Mrs. Crozier were sleeping and secured their plunder in an adjoining wardrobe. Chloroform is suspected. It is undoubtedly the same gang that has been operating throughout Northern Michigan during the past month. Burglars also entered Judge Maynard house last night but secured but $1.40 in money. Judge and Mrs. Mayne were awakened by a noise, and the judge turned on the light frightening the burglars away.

—Buford Marshall a Chicago negro, was drowned from a boat in Round Lake Sunday afternoon. He had been drunk for several days, and had made himself very much of a nuisance about the town. On Sunday he secured a boat, and, in company with another man of his race started to cross the lake. His conduct in the boat endangered the lives of both. The other negro begged Marshall to put him ashore, but without avail. Swalls' ferry boat was passing and started toward the boat to take the man off, but before reaching them Marshall fell out and sank. The body has not been recovered. The death of Marshall only saved him from arrest and State prison, as at Swalls' dock, just before starting out, he behaved in such a vile manner in the presence of several ladies as to merit summary and severe punishment.

The other negro begged Marshall to put him ashore, but without avail. Swalls' ferry boat was passing and started toward the boat to take the man off, but before reaching them Marshall fell out and sank. The body has not been recovered. The death of Marshall only saved him from arrest and State prison, as at Swalls' dock, just before starting out, he behaved in such a vile manner in the presence of several ladies as to merit summary and severe punishment.

Gentry Bros. School Combine.

Gentry Bros.'s Famous Trained Animal Show will exhibit at Charlevoix Wednesday Aug. 5th.

Gentry Bros. have four shows and this season Charlevoix will have the opportunity of seeing the best. I show, in other words the big eastern show that made all the larger circus the past season, consists of the old Sells Bros. circus, the best circus that ever visited this city. This season the Gentry Bros. will exhibit at Charlevoix Wednesday Aug. 5th.

—A Michigan editor has created a sensation by printing a strong editorial defensive of Sunday fishing. He insists it is no more a sin to catch a trout on Sunday than to catch a yellow legged chicken for a minister's dinner. The comparison is clever and may serve him as an effectual extinguisher from the pulpit.

—J. W. Osborn, president of the Cheboygan Summer Home Association who has been singing at the Hotel Bonner was called home suddenly Saturday by the death of the president of the First National Bank of Kalamazoo, for which he is vice president and attorney. After the funeral and the adjustment of business affairs he will return to Charlevoix.

—Last night, Walter Gagnon, the young pressman at the Herald office got the third finger of his right hand caught in the gripper of the press in that office and it lopped about three quarters of an inch off the end of his finger. Dr. W. S. Hamilton dressed the injury and Walter is now getting along nicely.—Oregon Paper. This is "Hale," and knows here.

—Probate Judge Harris has received notice of the passage of a law by the last legislature which went into effect June 19, making all indigent insane in hold a state charge from the first. Heretofore the county has had to foot the bills for the first year at the asylum. This will prove of same advantage to counties having a large number of insane in proportion to their taxable property.

—Burglars entered the residence of Dr. G. W. Crozier last night, and purfered with the Doctor's gold watch, diamond shirt stud and twelve dollars in money. The burglars passed through the bedroom where Dr. and Mrs. Crozier were sleeping and secured their plunder in an adjoining wardrobe. Chloroform is suspected. It is undoubtedly the same gang that has been operating throughout Northern Michigan during the past month. Burglars also entered Judge Maynard house last night but secured but $1.40 in money. Judge and Mrs. Mayne were awakened by a noise, and the judge turned on the light frightening the burglars away.

NORTHERN MICHIGAN.

The showing of the northern counties in the production of peaches this season is gratifying to fruit growers in this section. In the report of percentages issued by the secretary of state Grand Traverse County stands third having 87 per cent with Manistee county the highest in the state, a percentage of 90; the next highest is Ottawa county. The average of Berrien is only 52. Allegan 58, Oceana 57, and Kent 51, while the central counties of the fruit belt show higher than the southern counties. Newaygo having 63, Muskegon 61, and others still less. The average in the fruit belt is but 56. The showing for the northern portion of the state demonstrates superior fruit growing conditions, which should encourage the production, and business will. A similar report is given relative to other fruits, the northern counties by far the best showing.

Bay View assembly has a feature this year that no other institution of the kind has thought of securing. Bay View cottage colleges, lectures, musicians, entertainers ministers and educators and gossing about the place lecturing in an unofficial manner, or not unofficial manner that no one takes any heed of future. Men and women, gossiping less handiness, gardens taken or handed into home hand, with the other getting the news, are seen marching along the avenues as if they were about to fall on some great and dreaded enemy. That fact is that Bay View, the fame of which as a literary and educational institution has spread over two worlds, is, in a state of seige, is captured by a single skunk that refuses to capitulate. It now holding the entire camp at a safe distance, and threatens to dash into the midst of a reading circle, a certain some eminent author, or a certain at the camp meeting. There were 15 polecats under the cottages, but 14 of them have been killed and buried.

Georgia Van Fell on Automobiles.

Charlevoix, July 9, 1903.

MY DEAR SENTINEL:

Having a bunch of horses that are unaccustomed to Automobiles, and occupying rooms where I can see those horses scaters past to and fro from the Rectorder, I am constrained to write a word of commendation to both our village papers in favor of the very thoughtful course, considerate way in which both Dr. D. H. Harmon of Denver or Chicago, and Mr. Wolfram of Charlevoix are approaching trains while our with their machines, and certainly right here, it might be well to consider their way of doing, with that yet another that need merely cause to learn a very pretty little block machine. I am informed they give the public a revolution in street training.

Leo the Great.

Leo, the venerable pontiff, celebrated of the great Roman Catholic church, died Monday afternoon, with a benediction upon the lips, as his life had been a benediction.

Leo XIII was truly great. Indeed his long rule was marked by a state craft that centered in one purpose—the good of mankind.

He was gentle, yet forceful deeply pious, yet human. He did more to reconcile the world to his great church than any pope who ever "lived."

In the jubilee year of Leo, famine and Jingoism cease, and we only know that a great and good man, who loved all the world, is dead.

It is doubted if, in the college of cardinals, a man can be found who can approach Leo's wisdom and benevolent character.

Juvenile Delinquency.

Some recent happenings in the community just have directed the thoughts especially of parents to the moral misdoings of young people. Delinquencies of boys and girls is attested by the fact that there are nearly 1200 youthful criminals in custodial schools at Adrian and Lansing. Every community will have experience of some injury to property by youthful delinquency, as a church, school house building even a church will suffer from broken windows. There is much of this criminality that at the last convention of the Board of Charities and Corrections, a resolution was passed directing the publication of the state laws defining the crimes of youth and their penalties, the pamphlet to be put in the county agents hands.

But what we need is more work, boys or less girls should be protected from the influence of vile literature, widely distributed and readily read. Here the home has its duty. The school is derelict to its duty when it has no regard to morals and manners. The state sustains the schools to make good citizens. The pupils should be taught to know what are the common misdemeanors of youth, and their relation to the penal law. Sunday school teachers and clergymen should see here their opportunity of useful work. If there is vicious bad or an imbecile girl in the community, there is a school command the attention by the citizens in personal remonstrance. Were this more the case, the Industrial School would not receive so many inmates. Youths are not generally vicious, they are thoughtless, they need caring, but unchecked they rapidly pass into confirmed criminals.

RARE COINS SOLD IN STREET.

Remarkable Profitable Auction Sale Conducted on New York Bridge.

The novel and most successful method of New York's army of street venders disposed of the remainder of his stock, consisting of about 1,000 coins, all in excellent condition, and some of them quite rare, yesterday afternoon on the Brooklyn bridge, amid the jostling throng of people who crowded the roadway. The coins were sold to the highest bidder by auction, and the sale was a success in every respect. The coins were sold in lots of ten each, and the bidding was very spirited. The lots were sold for from $1 to $5 each, and the aggregate sum realized was $1,000. The coins were of the dates of 1804 and 1805, and were in excellent condition

Consumer and Producer.

Secretary Shaw: "The employer of labor is both a consumer and a producer, and therefore may be expected to favor either standpoint. The wage earner is also both a consumer and a producer—he consumes food, clothing, fuel and shelter and he sells a day's work. He can be a free trader in the belief that it would be to his advantage to have cheap food, cheap clothing and cheap living expenses generally. On the other hand he is fully as apt to know that the market for his labor and for the product of his labor is so impaired by the tariff as to his employer. Then either the employer or the employed may be misinformed upon the subject of the tariff, or, if not misinformed, on the side of the employer, may be misinformed upon the effect of any tariff upon the price of his product. Or, on the other hand, the employed may be misinformed as to the effect of the tariff upon the price of his product, and so on. INDIAN LEASES VOID.

COURT DECISION MAY MAKE A GREAT DEAL OF TROUBLE.

Acres Set to Others Than the Legal Guardians of Minor Indian Children Owned in Bulk Upon the Death Of Vendee Prove Void.

A decision has been handed down by Judge U. W. Hayward of the western district of Indian Territory, which will materially affect hundreds of acres of Creek Indian land and will bring about in consequence, and immediately, quite a lively "law suit." The case in the parent of an Indian has no right to bind the "half" of his minor children without the consent of the Indian guardian. Cases in which the parents have made the guardian of his children one-nine and thousands of acres have been sold which have been platted in bulk upon the death of the vendee. The Creek Nation thus on Nov. 3, 1902, sold 1,000 acres of land to Mrs. Ellen Ward, of Ohio, and to a number of her children, each of whom, and to a minimum, had two "half" Indian blood in them, and legally.

DEATH BEFALLS DUAL LIFE.

C. W. Hamilton Kills Himself and Harvey Newcomer Is Shot.

Chicago, Ill., Dec. 1.—A dangerous character, a "bad man" from the Indian Territory of Salt Lake City, terrorized a crowd of people in a Chicago "Loop" saloon yesterday afternoon, when he shot and killed Harvey Newcomer, a well known young man, and then shot himself through the head, dying instantly. The dead man was a son of Ex-Congressman Newcomer, of Indiana, and was well known in Chicago. The man who killed himself was C. W. Hamilton, a cousin of Congressman Bill Hamilton, of Michigan, and was well known in Salt Lake City, Ogden and other points in the Mormon country. Hamilton is said to have killed one man in Salt Lake City, and he was a "bad man" when he was drunk. He had been drinking for several days and was on his way to his home in Salt Lake when he met young Newcomer in the saloon and started a quarrel with him. Without warning he drew his pistol and fired two shots at young Newcomer, one of them taking effect in his left side. Newcomer staggered and fell, and Hamilton, thinking he had killed his victim, turned the pistol on himself and fired a shot into his brain. He died instantly. Hamilton is a nephew of Congressman Hamilton, of Michigan, and is well known in Salt Lake City, Ogden and other points in the Mormon country. He had been drinking for several days and was on his way home

Where Drought is Prevalent.

The drought in this section of the country has caused so much dust, especially in the villages, where the watering carts are busy in no few and far between in this state, that many people have temporarily adopted a custom that prevails for the four dry months in California every year. This is the putting of a white linen or a leather duster, sometimes both, at the door so that visitors may remove the dust from their shoes and skirts or trousers before entering.—New York Sun.

How She Explained It.

Little Margaret, sitting in the video of the Phoenix watching the boats, frequently a tug came steaming along with half a dozen barges towed behind it. The barges were loaded with sod earth and their decks were even with the water's edge. The child looked at them curiously for awhile and then exclaimed, "Oh, look, they are pulling an island down to New York."—New York Times.

Clacks as Vine Trimmers.

In May of every year the vineyards in the neighborhood of Mont Pinchon and Mesnil Hubert give rise to hundreds of pennyroyal clacks and salesmen who go from house to house. These are dressed in trimming the clusters of vines requiring all tapped shears and labeled fruit. For this labor, which is done in a high temperature, the best people earn about 10 to a week out of which they pay their own board and lodging. The vine growers prefer unemployed clerks for this work, which is of a nature too fatiguing for persons taken in "honest business" trade.

Judicial Status of Golf.

Justice Harlan, who has served the twenty-sixth year of service on the bench of the Supreme Court of the United States, is 70 years of age and has no wish to retire. Golf must have a lot to do with his vigor. He is the judge who took a bushel of papers to the country with him one summer in the shape of writing questions he was on the links. His calculation of the "affirm or reverse" and "remand for further proceedings" was so long remembered by his personal caddie that golf was for him a game not a disease and that he had caught it.

Big Sales of Seed.

The seed plantations around San Juan Cala, Ark., have sold $60,000 worth of seed for the year of 1903. The first experiment of the planting in this locality was made and then half a dozen vines were there. Seven years now about 1,000 acres were planted annually, two miles long. A single plot of seed for sale consisted of 1,000 acres, a lot of yellow beans 210 acres, a lettuce seed 2,000 acres. There are within a radius of eighty miles around San Juan 14,000 acres devoted to growing plants and seeds for the seed trade.

The Question Was Rude.

An Oklahoma man lives in this town. She was from Boston, to from Chickasaw. You can't expect much good that to the man have you, but Miss Boston was a traveler. She had been in California and Arizona and even in New Mexico. "Did you ever see the Cherokee Strip?" These was a painful silence, but Sam—she looked over her glasses at him and said, "Is the first place, sir, I mean your question meaningless rude and, in the second, you might have been more refined in your language by asking me if I had ever seen the Cherokee cherubs."

To Enter Orange River Valley.

The number of Americans who may enter the Transvaal or Orange River Colony is limited to be a month, and each must have a permit, the blank application for which can be had of any British consul. And, too, an affidavit must be made that the applicant is sufficiently means to support himself and family after arriving. Consideration of such applications is also delayed for weeks and those who grow impatient and arrive in advance of their permit are scarcely given the option to unload the boat full or be prosecuted for six months, with a fine of $2,433.

Long Hours in the Country Store.

It is all right for the country store to keep late hours. It is its locality etch. If the boss likes it nobody cares a fight to complain. In the country store the man does his own work, also it made a good to be not bothered with clerks' unions. A country store is on for business and if it is necessary to open early and close late the thrifty man will be on hand to welcome customers as they may arrive. Along in the middle of the day the country merchant can write in the garden, while his wife sits down in the store with her sewing. It is a family affair.—Kansas City Journal.

PLANT WITH DEADLY ODOR.

Java and Sumatra Have Vegetable Products That Disseminate Death.

There are certainly among plants as well as among animals and human beings. Those that have the most dire reputation are known as death plants, which are found only in the volcanic districts of Java and Sumatra. The plant's appearance gives no hint of danger, for it is really very attractive, being a low growing shrub with long showy stems covered with beautiful broad leaves. The upper surface of these leaves is a vivid emerald while the lower surface is a brilliant scarlet. The flowers are great white bell shaped blossoms which exhale a sweet and deadly perfume.

The death plant grows in the most barren spots, but at about 12 feet around becomes barren of vegetation and neither bird nor beast may come within a wide radius of it. They know better, but root and, with no warning, instinct to guide him, will seek eternally linger too long in its vicinity, succumbed by its delicious and heavy fragrance, until he experiences the disastrous effects of his imprudence—a blinding headache, which, if he will tarry, will be followed by temporary delirium, convulsions of agonies of the face and irresistibility.

Place for Complaint.

In a small cafe close to the Grand Place, Brussels, the proprietor has had the following notice posted on the walls: "Customers who find the price of drinks somewhat high are requested to address any complaints that may have to make direct to the Minister of Finance." This is an allusion to the tax on alcohol imposed by that minister. As an Englishman, the device is almost worthy copying.

Canada's Timber Lands.

The impression that British North America is covered with valuable timber is fallacious. Black walnut, red cedar and white oak are not found north of Toronto. A line drawn from the city of Quebec to Sault Ste Marie will indicate the northern limits of hemlock and white. The north shore of Lake Superior will mark the northern boundary of sugar hard maple.

The French said, said, are the politest people in the world. Mr. Garfield agreed. The French said, said, politest people in the world. Mr. Garfield answered, "Yes, Americans all about, don't you, the superlative of a French politeness." Mr. Garfield answered. "We do not care. That is our politeness."

Not Quite Satisfied.

The Buffalo women who organized on the claim that it is the right of a man to fall the truth as a bright mistake against the wishes of his wife, are to be back as the old darky who was put upon the witness stand and asked if he knew the truth and understand what would happen if he did not tell it. THE GRANGE

Conducted by I. P. DARROW,
Pine Cottage, Near New York State Grange

THE POMONA GRANGE.

An Important Link in the Chain Between Subordinate and State.

(Read at Pomona Grange.)

The Pomona grange is the county grange, its jurisdiction is the county. Thus it becomes a link, and a very important link, in the grange chain, between the subordinate and the state granges.

The Pomona, like the state grange, has usually no fixed place of meeting. Whether it shall have or not depends wholly on expediency. There is some advantage in the Pomona alternating its meetings with the subordinate granges in order that it may be made a farmer neighborhood on the night it goes to certain members who might not come to it if located at a distant place from them. The central point is a site easily accessed by most who live thus far with ease. But as a rule there will be a larger attendance of the Pomona by a steady and permanent location.

If the Pomona holds its meetings alternately among the subordinate granges the entertaining grange is expected to furnish the hall and wherever the meeting occurs it is the duty of subordinates at home to contribute a supper to each grange. We know of a county where the attendance on the Pomona meetings does no longer go to show it cannot wholly impossible to secure an invitation for the following particular place. Yet, we have been equal trying, based location, but this as a rule is not altogether satisfactory. It is a fair proposition however when the Pomona is held at a fixed location, that the subordinate granges should contribute pro rata to the Pomona of the hall and suppers, and possibly to have a committee from each grange to solicit refreshments and to assist in serving the tables at the dinner hour. No fixed rules can involve, be laid down for the refreshment feature.

The Pomona grange should hold at least the quarterly sessions in the fifth degree and have charge of such as pertain thereto. Such depends on the lecturer for a successful Pomona. The programme, course of lectures, preparation, if, is the vital point. Persons selected to address the meeting should feel their responsibility to be on hand promptly and have something to say when they get there. Written papers will serve the purpose, but a thoughtful, practical hand speaker is usually more entertaining. Just there are people who can talk pomona and say little and sometimes they are heard in grange meetings.

There should be plenty of music and some recitations in every Pomona programme. Moreover let the papers and addresses, there will be a heartiness and a drop upon an occasional song or recitation is rendered to lighten the proceedings. Let there be music, quartets, duets and instrumental music, too, where practicable. Give music its proper place at an grange meetings; it's a good thing to have in the family and in the grange.

The Pomona or fifth degree should be conferred in full form at least once a year, better twice, but at least once in the year. Let the degree be made impressive. Pay utility along this line has been recognized to be conducive to good in the winter, to address farmers' institutes, and the state has given its patronage with the speakers of the "woman and the home." Let was in charge of the grange headquarters in Farmers' institute in Buffalo, and there large Pomona had the pressure of meeting for. The marked success of the outdoor for such it was was due in great measure to her presence there and to her special and persuasive overtures of all hands. She was elected worthy lecturer of the state grange in 1901 and is one of its most efficient officers.

Women's work in Michigan is divided into two departments, social school and fresh air. Fresh air work consists in arranging the pastoral visits of the poor from cities to farms. Last year 238 were thus introduced from the pastoral atmosphere of the city to breathe the purer air of the country, to get a glimpse of a better life.

There never was greater interest manifested in the work, nor better than at the present moment.

Mrs. R. J. Gould,
Lecturer New York State Grange.

An enthusiastic worker and a wise counselor, she is one of the best grange speakers on the platform today, always interesting, always impressive. Her utility along this line has been recognized to her credit, and last winter, in addition to farmers' institutes, she addressed a large meeting in Buffalo, the speakers of the "woman and the home." Last was in charge of the grange headquarters in Farmers' institute in Buffalo, and there large Pomona had the pressure of meeting for. The marked success of the outdoor for such it was was due in great measure to her presence there and to her special and persuasive overtures of all hands. AGRICULTURAL EDUCATION.

The Need of It Becoming Greater and The Opportunities Better.

(Read at Pomona Grange.)

The farmer's son is not not the idea that a good education in a family that has necessarily factory is to be a source of education. It is to be the use of the trained man. Right alongside of this idea the farmer's son should plant another idea and that is that of agriculture. Now is to keep up with the procession the agriculturist must be a trained man. The farmer of the future must be thoroughly educated for his business.

The next question is, How shall he be trained? The means of agricultural education are so numerous and so valuable that there is no excuse for any who do not avail themselves of some of these means of training. Let me mention some of the opportunities that are offered to farmers' sons for getting an agricultural education.

First is the farm itself. This is the farmer's workshop, and it is not even with he has been place for his training. It is here that he applies his theories and works out his experiments. Every day of his life he is at school in science and can be informed in farming by hand. But it is a strange fact that two different men, differently trained, will gain exceedingly varying degrees of knowledge from the same farm. This is simply because one has the power of observation, he knows how to see and the other has not. The farm is unrivaled, he does not know how to see, hence he cannot answer questions, answers to questions he may ask, or he may answer that question that will give a young man with nothing but he can make the most of his farm as an educational tool as a money getter.

I would divide these agencies into two classes. First, those which are available to students living on farms, in the United States and which be can reach by the time he is of age. Second those in the agricultural press. Good farm papers exist in every state, per haps the best more deserving agricultural papers in the country are of the highest practical value and necessary merit. In assuming how many farmers there are who do not take any farm paper and how many more there are who do not take a good farm paper. The second means to farmers' institutes, these are today in practically every state in the union and are doing a work that has proved over and over again. They are growing in influence and usefulness. And yet they are attended by only a fraction of the farmers of this country. But there are a tremendous amount of education for the farmer's son. He can read and study and informed and inspiration. In the third class there are land grant colleges, agricultural books, experimental experiment station institutes, horticultural societies, who wants to study advanced agriculture can find it almost standing upon his farm and find instruction upon these lands. There was a time when agricultural books were all of a good value. Today there are dozens of first class agricultural books, some for the regular trained and practical men and just as useful to the farmer as 1?? Practical books are to the doctor. And finally, in the class of agencies come the farmers organizations, of which the grange is a type. The real work and purpose of the grange is education. All of its other purposes are subsidiary. Will in this all-embracing effort, and farmers are just beginning to learn what an educator it is. I am more and more impressed as the years go by with the tremendous possibilities of the grange in educating farmers and their families.

But the farmer's son must also remember that the day has come when he can not should get quite a share of his training for agriculture in the school of the farm and the agricultural agencies. Every farmer's son who is to follow the vocation of his father should acquire the best education as he can possibly get. In the first place he owes it to him the privileges which he is a more lot of anyone study in the rural schools in Michigan. Also he has reached the age of thirteen or fourteen and has gone as far as he will have, the chance to study the element ary principles of agriculture, and to gain some idea of what he can do to encourage and widen to study agriculture a little further. He will have at the county seat of his county an agricultural high school, where he can take a year school course combining some high school studies with an English and mechanic course at the same time, get good thoroughly instructed in science applied to the farm. If he can not afford the time or money to take even this agriculture high school course, he can take advantage of the short course in agriculture which are offered alone now in every agricultural college in the United States.

But the farmer's son, if he is able, will not content himself with a shorter course, he will go to the agricultural college and take a full course. Let it sight, let it be understood that it is possible for a farmer's son to get an agricultural college. The chance are that it will pay him if he is able to do so. Let me say that I am speaking to enter the increasing ranks of those who desire to teach agriculture by experiment to substitute the theoretical college course in agriculture for absolutely indispensable.

Thousand Islands Grange.—There has been quite a movement in New York state grange for a few years past to have a grange on each of the Thousand Islands of the St. Lawrence under the direction of a special committee appointed by Master George A. Fuller, member of the New York state grange, and he is the active chairman of the executive committee. The meeting then this grange was held on Aug. 18 Addresses will be delivered by Governor Odell, President Roosevelt, who is likely to be there if the national grange, Professor L. H. Bailey of Cornell, secretary and Hon. Jerome Wood of Normal Kent, N. Y. As the railroads offer the rates and cover the railway various the beautiful Thousand Islands, a large attendance is anticipated.

A New Jail Needed.

The undersigned made an official visit to the jail of this county on July 25, finding two male prisoners, one serving sentence, the other just brought in.

The inmates are made as comfortable as the circumstances allow. But the jail is a wretched place to confine a human being. And it must be remembered that to some of those confined it is as good as they deserve, that a woman may be arrested or confined whose arrest is unjust, and the principle of law is, that there can be no conviction until the charge is proved, and so the person awaiting trial is entitled at least to no injury to health, no needless suffering.

This jail is utterly destitute of ventilation—no change of air is possible. It is so dark that even on a bright day reading must be a task. A no home is the only provision for ordinary washing—a good feature is the bath tub.

A jail, the ceiling of which narrow and not closely fitting, must be a receptacle of vermin. The one room for women and children is inadequate, the separation the law requires is impossible. This one room is so near to the men's quarters as to allow of conversation if not fight.

Now that the county seat is no longer on wheels, but settled, the county should not delay to erect a proper jail. Probably the waiting for a new court house, which should hope the blunder will not be committed of putting the jail in the basement, or in the building, it disfigures a court house, often it impregnates the air.

It was gratifying to learn that religious services are held occasionally, and citizens furnish reading.

GEO. D. GILLSPIE,
Chairman Board of Corrections and Charities.

GREAT GATHERING.

The Farmers' Friendly Association Will Make the Woods Howlat Norwood, Aug. 27th.

In all probability the forthcoming gathering of the farmers' Friendly Association at Norwood, August 27th, will be the greatest event of its kind in the history of the two counties.

It will be a basket picnic, in Van Pelt's White Birch Grove, which lies on the plateau below the terrace upon which Norwood stands. It is most beautiful and slightly place. Norwood is a most appropriate place for these gatherings, being less than a mile from the Antrim county line, just over which begins an area of the finest farming country in Northern Michigan.

While there is not a Grange phone all Grangers and all members of Grange are cordially invited. The weather will be at full time of all varieties of farm machinery exhibited by Messrs. Ward & Ward of Charlevoix, which of itself will be of sufficient interest to bring a big crowd of farmers. There will also be a stock show, and anyone having any kind of an animal which they wish to exhibit either for show, or for sale, will find plenty of people to look it over, and possible buyers. There will be horse racing and games of all kinds except gambling or confidence games and these will be excluded. Prizes will be announced later but a good time is assured. Be sure to bring your baskets well filled as only a limited number can be accommodated at the Hotel Jackson, Lady Maccabees and the Ladies Church Society. Tents and canvas are promised to protect from rain, at the same time umbrellas might be a handy commodity. Prominent speakers from among big guns are expected and names of some will be given later on.

But the great feature of the occasion will be the presence of Hon. Wm. Alden Smith, the distinguished Congressman from the 5th District. Mr. Smith will deliver an address, and everybody knows that he is one of the best orators in the State. Besides being the acknowledged leader of the Michigan delegation in Congress.

Excursions will be arranged by various boats, from all points of Grand Traverse and Little Traverse Bays, and everybody who can will be present to enliven the day.

BEAVER ISLAND NEWS.

The Cabin Sunday School of St. James is building a ball for an assembly room and on Saturday evening Aug 1st the ladies of this organization will give an entertainment and ice cream social at the new house of Mr. John Stevens. All are invited to be present.

Dr. C. E. Butts and family and also Dr. Dewey and Miss Hoth and Mr. James Pond and flocks all of Kenosha town, are summering on the Island.

The Island is experimenting the construction of a cottage on his farm on the site of the old Strang home. The Doctor is one of the leading surgeons of the country, having the largest clinic west of the Mississippi river, and the Island people are greatly pleased to have this noted his summers on the Island.

Capt. John Johnson of this place died at his home on Tuesday morning aged 62. His death was the result of a blow received two years ago while running a cork lathe. The blow was received on the right side of the head and left him in a semi, conscious condition for ten days. He never entirely recovered from the injury. The last six weeks of his life was marked by a rapid mental and physical decline. A little over a fortnight before his death the left side became gradually paralyzed together with other vital functions till on Saturday before his death it was evident to all he was in a dying state. A consultation of physicians was held Saturday evening resulting in the decision that the case was hopeless in his then present condition. Operation was favored however as the only possible shadow of a chance for the patient's life. This the family decined to avail themselves of on Monday. Operation verified the previous hopeless diagnosis and death resulted on Tuesday evening. The Captain leaves a wife and six children to mourn his loss. As a neighbor and friend he was universally known on the Island, always holding himself ready to help any one in distress. The remains were interred Thursday morning in the Holy Cross cemetery.

EDS. SENTINEL:

Last Saturday we pilly a party we ever boarded a craft chartered the steamer Beaver and started for Northport but when the boat stuck its nose out in the lake beyond beautiful two-mile point the began to feel the effects of the stiff sou.-wester," and rather than make the trip and become seasick, the party voted by a large majority to return to Charlevoix and go to the enterpraising city of Boyne.

On the way there Captain Campbell suggested stopping at Horton's Bay and spending the day at that place. It would be nice to sail with our lines there. All readily agreed, for they were anxious to know how we had managed a general clean up on Angel Lake Michigan, so with dinner and baskets all well filled with the good things to eat the party sailed up the bill to the grove. There they met Judge Strong and an hundred and one other people who had come up the hill and made all welcome.

In foraging around for somewhat of the party, Mr. James M. Hays, of St. Louis, Mo., made a discovery. It was a Cheney weasel little Indian baby two weeks old, and only weighing 1½ pounds. Jim gave a war whoop such as has not been heard since the last Indian war, which brought all the ladies in the party to the spot, and great were the exclaims. Hose waists, and the agave was given quite a sum of money.

Waits this was going on Hays made a crack on the lunes waists and helped himself and his little three year old son to a large slice of watermelon, and the two proceeded to sit down by themselves and to eat and discuss the quality of the water in the melon. And the way they disposed of it would have made a foreign "nigger" green with envy.

After a couple of hours spent in fishing and visiting the party embarked for Boyne City, but by the time they reached there the rain was falling fast and hot few went ashore. Hays was one, and it was generally thought he went to see if any dealer carried a line of the Gleason, Dwinch, Hays shoes. If they don't it is a good bet to make that they will so, the wife of a St. Louis shoe man.

The whistle blew and the Beaver started back for Charlevoix. All unanimously voted the day's great success, and Captain Pete Campbell a wise and generous captain, and another trip was suggested for the near future, and those who agreed to go agreed to agree and to abide by their agreement. Yours,

VANPELT.

CONGREGATIONAL CHURCH.

Rev. James Hyslop, Ph.D., Pastor.

Last Sunday morning the pastor took for his subject, "The Fatherhood of God" and for text "Be of one mind, having the same love, being of one accord, of one mind." From this incident he showed that Christ was the patron of "Hospitable Homes, Genial Companionship and Social Intercourse of Economic Frugality" and of "Social Gratitude."

In the evening, the Rev. Wm. Twing of Lansing, Superintendent of Congregational Sunday School work in the state, occupied the pulpit. His theme was the value of early instruction in Bible truth and showed that to this end there was need of Sunday School interests being maintained and of the organization and support of such work in new and destitute places. His address was well and fully illustrated with simple facts and incidents.

There were good attendance at both services.

In Answer to the Railways.

From the Gaffney News.

Perry F. Powers left Monday afternoon for Grand Rapids to be his answer in the United States court to the complaint of the Michigan railway companies now contesting the payment of taxes as computed by the board of assessors and as further increased by a decision of the Michigan supreme court. Michigan railway companies are objecting to the payment of taxes on the increased valuation and will utilize every legal technicality to evade payment and it is in connection with this litigation that Tax Commissioner Freeman and Sayre furnished the contending companies with the now famous affidavit in his answer as another feature of the defendant in behalf of Michigan—Mr. Powers refers to the Freeman-Sayre affidavits as "mere conclusions, not representing the facts, and on their face contradictory and untrue." Should the question of the Internal court be favorable for the state the primary school fund of Michigan will be increased about one third.

—Fred Glatter, superintendent of the Whitehall schools, and wife, are in town for two days. Mr. Glatter was a candidate for the Charlevoix superintendency this year.

—Bryant Wood and wife, of Detroit, are here visiting Mr. Wood's mother Mrs. Colby, Bryant, who is a Charlevoix boy, has had one more year of study to graduate at Ann Arbor.

—With Senator Burrows at Thumb Lake August 27th, and William Alden Smith at Traverse on the 28th, it looks as if Charlevoix county would be the senatorial storm center during August. It will be interesting for Bob.

—John M. Pelts arrived here Sunday. He has disposed of most of his property at Rushville, Ind., and intends to make this his future home. Besides his single factory interests, Mr. Pelts has a large tract of land near Petoskey. To these properties Mr. Pelts will devote his time.

—D. M. Hemingway, a pioneer of Bear Creek township, which for many years was a part of Charlevoix county, before Emmet county parceled out part of it, was in town one day last week. Mr. Hemingway is probably the leading spiritual of this section. Last week he gathered from his farm 200 pounds of extracted honey, and will have about ten pounds of much finer. And all this sweetness indulge in Emmet county. Sin, the thought of it.

—Mrs. Palmer Gaither goes to Milwaukee today to spend some time with friends.

—Trees on Antrim street Thos. E. Nowland is building a new residence, and other new homes are going up.

—Hon. William Judson, state oil inspector, died suddenly Tuesday night of heart disease, at his home in Ann Arbor.

—The Slatke dredge completed its work here yesterday. The inspector states that there is now an unobstructed channel of 15 feet depth from Lake Michigan to Round Lake.

—A case at his office Tuesday was Hon. E. L. Cole and wife of Pasadena Cal. Mr. Cole was one of our pioneer northern ministers, having been the third pastor here. He was here in 1872, 1873, and 1874. Mr. Cole is engaged in archaeological work for Smithsonian Universities.

—County superintendent of schools A. W. Chew, of Hayes, was in town Monday. The many friends of Mr. Chew will be sorry to learn that he is in poor health again, as a result of an accident while out riding—his spine having been injured. His physician hopes to see him fully recovered, however, soon.

—On the 24th, at Norwood, if you see Hon. Van Pelt gently draw William Alden Smith out behind a brush pole, don't be hasty and conclude that Cudahy is giving him sensational potatoes. As well as good cooks, and "wonds" that George will pour into the Congressman's ear, and which only shows his consideration toward you nasty judge that the seed has taken root.

—The Charlevoix laundry changed hands Tuesday. John Horan buying the interest of I. E. Sandy, while M. J. Le retains his small interest in the concern. Fred A. Dilder has been installed as general manager. Mr. Dilder is well known, and has very many friends in Charlevoix. He will push the business with energy, and with his well known reputation for integrity, he cannot fail to succeed.

—Prof. H. J. Cash, the Chicago weather man, and who prepares all the weather for the lakes region, was in town Thursday, and, in company with the writer, went to Beaver Island Friday. Prof. Cox was not recognized here by the fellows, so there might have been trouble. Cox spent the morning at 10 and a fourteen mile weather blowing the 16th of July, the safety of the weather man would have been rather doubtful. Prof. Cox went to the Beavers to look at things in order to be posted in case of a mistake, for a weather bureau cable to the island—a thing by no means improbable within the next few years.

—Mary Jane Rose, who lives on the old Rose homestead, in Hayes, was taken violently insane last Friday, and brought here. Being in a badly disturbed condition she was sent to the jail until the Judge of Probate could pass upon her case, this probably because better, however, she was taken to the Insane Asylum at Traverse City Monday she was considered so far recovered as to be taken back to her home. She was taken to Traverse City last Monday, and her brother, R. W. Rose of Pontiac, was sent for. He arrived here Saturday, returning home, stopping at Chicago, arrived Monday. The afflicted woman is the daughter of the late Alexander Rose.

—Chicago's lake commerce was declared to be in a deplorable condition by Capt. T. A. Dobbson of the Dobson Towing and Wrecking company, who appeared before the board of tax review. Furthermore, Capt. Dobson said the situation was continuing at a rapid rate. "We keep all the sons of bitches alive who ought to be dead," he said, "and we have got our fair share of the type. The chicanery, in fact, putting us out of business. Tugs now value at the rate of $1000 a ton, and we have one tug at the foot of Lake street that is worth $1000 by a long nothing." The scandals made out by Capt. Dobson, who has had ample opportunity to know the company's property at $37,000, is $5000 less than last year. These figures were accepted.

—Frank M. Sears last week sold his clothing business to J. J. Berry, of Vandalia, Mich. He will thoroughly renovate the store, adding new and modern show cases and other interior appointments and will soon be able to invite the public to inspect the place.

—The Teachers' Institute for Charlevoix County, is in session in the McKinley school building. The institute will continue until next Wednesday evening, inclusive. Prof. H. C. Lott, superintendent of the Elk Rapids schools, is in charge, assisted by Mrs. Tom, of Alma College. Prof. Tom invites all to attend the meetings.

—It might not be amiss to suggest the exercise of extreme precaution, these hot summer days, in the matter of cleanliness as a means of preventing a visitation of an epidemic of diarrhoea. Clean up your back yards, your alleys, and don't permit decaying vegetation to remain on or around your premises. Also has been ascertained that nearly all of the illnesses of opposed were in families supplied with milk from the same milkman. An investigation of his dairy disclosed a condition of filth and an analysis of the milk disclosed typhoid germs.

Cause Unknown.

We read that a condition has been formed between Senator Burrows and a Mr. Stearns, of Ludington, for social political honors.

So far as Senator Burrows is concerned, we believe he will succeed himself, and, furthermore, we believe he should.

But—

Senator Burrows should be careful how he plays with Justice Mr. Stearns. There is a rod in pickle for the man from Ludington, and it will be used with vigor by the friends of Congressman Smith.

They cannot forget Mr. Stearns' conduct in the last campaign for the congressional nomination, and they will not easily overlook it. The gentleman from Ludington made very plain double that was numerous and unusual. His period of influence is by no means limited.

It is much who Pres where the whole of Lake Superior pour with resistance from toward that great body which bounds the lower peninsula on the East. Was the man who the name of Stearns? Others will come down from the upper country to the next republican State convention.

And we would like some wise man listen to tell us why it should not be so. Geographically, the upper peninsula is entitled to the governorship. Its republican majorities have been the strongest and bulwark of the party always. The upper peninsula never doubted, and never flunked.

Chas. S. Osborn is a true representative of extreme republicanism, and of upper peninsula organization. He is one of the brightest men in upper peninsula, and deserves a good spot on his native soil—and one!

We would accept the Soo from Ludington to Canada and give Stearns an administration to be proud of.

New Pope Elected.

On Tuesday morning, on the seventh ballot, the College of Cardinals elected Cardinal Sarto, Patriarch of Venice Pope, who assumes the title of Pius X.

The new pontiff is a man of learning, and was a favorite of Leo.

Guiseppe Sarto was born in Riesi, diocese of Treviso, June 2, 1835, and was created cardinal by Leo XIII at the consistory of June 12, 1893, receiving the title of S. Bernardo delle Terme.

He is also Patriarch of Venice since July, 1897, and Bishop of Mantua. He belongs to the ecclesiastical congregations of bishops and regulars, sacred rites, indulgences and sacred relics.

Cardinal Sarto enjoys great popularity in his diocese, and is honored by all for his piety, for the strict uprightness of his life, and for liberal ideas. He is a modest and agreeable man, highly cultivated, very kind-hearted, still strong and robust in spite of his 68 years. He has never taken great part in the political and public life of the church: but divided his time between study and good works.

Charlevoix Poor House.

The undersigned visited the Poor House July 28th, counting 9 inmates, 4 men and women 2. The building remained with the street stuff unfinished which would be needed should there be any marked increase of paupers.

The conditions of the house are good. The exceptions are, the want of bath-tubs, the lack of drainage and inside closets particularly needed for the aged and infirmed, and the use of kerosene lamps always dangerous. When this is necessary it is well to have them attached to the walls.

It is singular that in building so good a house ventilation should have had no attention. Windows are the only provision, which inmates will keep shut if they can.

The farm of 80 acres is a good one, the soil is good, and there are fruit trees. Sales of potatoes and pork have been made. There is no reason why, if the keeper is allowed assistance on the farm—the inmates afford none—the institution should not be self supporting.

No religious services held.

Salary of keeper $750.

The Superintendents meet at the House monthly.

Heated by coal furnace.

Iron bedsteads.

A STAND PAT SPEECH

SENATOR HANNA TO THE OHIO REPUBLICAN CONVENTION.

"Human Liberty and Protection to Our Labor and Industries" Let Well Enough Alone; We God's Sake Keep Letting It Alone"

The Republican party in formulating its character and growth of its constituents is fortunate in having as chairman of its National Committee a man of the stamp of Hon. Marcus A. Hanna. The most of the time it is silent, uncommunicative Hanna, free on the part of his own existence with the duty of literally the public. Senator Hanna is nothing if not straightforward and practical. He does not know what it is to be ambiguous or evasive. If should he might truly say:

"I am as open as day to melon,
My friends can read my character plain as any map of the land I walk in."

To be a plain, blunt man and to speak truth out, is an behaviour that astonishes in a National leader and manager. Senator Hanna never exhibited more valuable traits to better advantage than in his speech before the Ohio Republican convention last Tuesday. Hanna is a manager and good executive. It was him that made the Republican party in 1896 and provisioned the Hayes' the party and the country of its enlightened Republicanism; into to show a "the true, on the same platform and co-operative with among man-hatter or saving change of any kind. Suppose Hanna was the right man in the right place. A Hanna manager of the Anti-Imperialist Tract League, with Carl Schurz as treasurer if not footing and policy, it possibly would be a wonderful first, and at the same time, the most just move. The Hayes party of Hanna manager looks like it does, not the does not complete the possibilities of a profitable government of anything in the course of a decade. Hanna is not the so we are likely to call for any about diplomacy, are alignment, any relations of Hanna to and they participation in American labor and industry. Here is the job and the over of Mark Hanna's position on tariff tinkering:

"In times like these, this great industry—one in which actually in the State of Ohio, who knows how many thousands—and all the conditions which have grown up from better all concerned—it is a matter of great hope of the future to, and stability cause to be taken. Why can part should change one iota in these principles? Doing reasoned overhead

URGES PENSION BILL.

G. A. R. WORKING FOR NEW ENACTMENT.

Next Congress to be Asked to Give the Every Veteran at Least $12 a Month Service Are Pleasing Results.

If the active agents of the Grand Army of Republic have their way the next session will not be ended if at the coming session of Congress some will increase the minimum pension apportionment to a sum (actual amount yet to be determined) and Extension. The proposition is to put it every one. One of the Civil War on the Union side who served for ninety days or more and who was honorably discharged is monthly pensioned at $12, and to pay a greater sum or the widow of every soldier who served ninety days or more who was honorably discharged. It is argued that this is a worthy proposition, and that it will place the veterans of the Civil War of the same footing as veterans of the Mexican War and the War of 1812.

TOADS FOUND IN ROCKS.

Scientist Explains the Reason of Their Presence There.

"Assuming" said a scientist, "the popularity of the belief that toads live for long spaces of time in rocks, only last week a quarryman sent to me a toad that he had found imbedded, he said, in a solid block of stone. Of course there is no truth in the idea that these critters can exist shut up for years without food and air, but there is truth in the notion of their being found in rocks. The rocks, though, are not solid, as the finders imagine, at first, and the toads have only been in them, it is probable, for a few hours instead of for years and years. Toads you see take naturally to sequestered places—to cliffs in rocks or trees. A quarryman or a lumberman breaks into a rock or a tree, finds a live toad imbedded and thinks the reptile has been there since time began. As a matter of fact the toad has not recently crawled there through a little crevice of solid soil, but the passage is so well concealed that the eyes of the man have failed to discover it.

Two Over-Zealous Youngsters Work Ill Themselves Out of a Job.

The village members of a family consisting of a father and two sons found themselves out of employment. After a different search the youngest son found employment in a village barbershop first place, helping to dig the excavation.

On the morning of the first day's work he found Mr. McNichol to give his instructions. The operation proceeded on the spot then, asked the younger lad, "Shall I loosen more or less as much more as he and on the strength of this recommendation the elder brother was engaged.

The next day both brothers went to Mr. McNichol and pleaded to have their jobs put on the job.

"The lazy father for an idiom work as either of you boys?" asked Mr. Nichol.

"Yes, answered the brothers; "he can do as much work as both of us together."

"Very good," replied McNichol. "Send your father around to the quarries and you can try your at home."—Philadelphia Ledger.

CHICAGO MAN'S HEAD BIGGEST.

How the Sizes Vary in Different Sections of the United States.

A hatter had just finished making a hat for an Indiana man.

"The Irish," he said, "have heads of a peculiar shape, long and small and very dense. The Americans have head shaped very much like the trial, which only it is smaller and more round.

"The German has a square head, flat on top and very wide between the ears. A Dutchman's head looks egg-like. It looks as he ought to look. In order that it may accomplish its great purpose, it must be brought in contact from time to time discussions. Some Germans, who are philosophic, have their heads made for contact.

"I will have all over the United States, and I find that hats fit right for West that anywhere else. The Chicago man has the biggest head in America. The Southerner has the smallest. We Easterners—Philadelphians, New Yorkers and Bostonians—all have heads about the same size. That size is on the average." The Westerner's size is 7½. The South-ernor's is 6¾.—Philadelphia Record.

A scientist has recently published a brochure on the subject of right and left handedness. The explanation for the phenomena in any person is traced to the place of the heart. In the two halves of his brain. He concludes that for right-handed people there is an excess of pressure in the left half of the brain, accompanied by an excess of excitability and of vitality in all those parts of the body dependent on the left brain. For left-handed people the reverse is true.

Medical records in the various hospitals of New York city show that though quite forgetful of recent happenings, aged persons recall long past events in current order, and even go again into scenes passed utterly out of consideration before the disease of senility appeared.

A woman of 70 delivered from physical phenomena, repeated poetry in Hindoostani. It developed later on that as in the age of four she knew only that language, but afterward had for written that she ever spoke it. Another peculiar case on record is that of an illiterate Irish servant who while in the delirium of fever recited Greek and Hebrew for hours although when in health she knew no word of either language, her vocabulary being due to the brain impressions left by the readings heard many years before a learned rabbi whose servant she had been.

THE PROPERTIES OF MUSK.

In One Sense It is as Powerful as Radium.

Radium was the subject under discussion, and a lawyer said: "I don't see anything in you wonderful in radium. Allow that it does throw off light and heat to a kind of perpetual motion without any loss of weight or energy—all right, a grain of musk does the same thing. Put the smallest grain of musk into a room hermetically sealed and at the end of a year or two or twenty from now, if you do so, you will find the musk in the room, and under what the musk was. Room twenty feet square contains 2,304,384 cubic feet and each cubic foot contains 1,000 lacks at least some, have to 1,000 molecules of musk. Remove one of them and it would not be perfumed. One grain of musk has in it 1,000 times a million millions and millions of musk. Just musk for years, and still it will emanate where the radium heat that?"

NEW UIRISING IN CUBA.

Revolt in Eastern Part of Island is Being Widened Out.

In spite of the assertion made at Havana by Secret Sec. Newbold of the interior, that the taking of three towns in the province of Santa Clara, under the leadership of cause an uprising in the country of Havana, government Santiago, effectually put the kibosh Cuba, of an outbreak in Havana. Some of uprisings in provinces. Cuba seem from confirmed in the government reports received from the Government authorities of Santiago province. These are to the effect that since the raids of Sunday and Monday there have been no more bands reported south, though a few have appeared north, through a Spanish officer who was captured by the rebels. Gen. Menocal, who is in charge of the Santiago province, has ordered the concentration of all the rural guards in Santiago province, and has ordered a force of 1,000 men to Guantanamo, where the rebels are said to be in force. The insurgents are reported to have burned the sugar estate of Ramon Pedroso, near Guantanamo, and have cut the telegraph wires in several places.

DYNAMITE CAUSES EXPLOSION IN ROLLING MILL.

Explosion Occurs Four Times as Large as Under Spanish Rule.

A disastrous explosion of dynamite occurred in the rolling mill of the Wire Depot company in the Philippines the day before the Spanish evacuation. The loss is estimated at $200,000 of the corresponding money of the Philippines, or $100,000 in Mexican money.

A comparison of the customs receipts shows that the Philippines imported from June, 1895, to June, 1896, with the period from June, 1895, to June, 1896, the period under American occupation shows an increase of about 100 per cent. The Philippines have never been so prosperous as now. The Spanish rule was a blight on the country. The people are happier than they ever were before. The country is at peace. The people are free. The country is prosperous. The people are happy. The country is free. The people are free. The country is prosperous. The people are happy. The country is free. The people are free. ARE LOSING INTEREST

CUBA AND CANADA NOT EAGER FOR RECIPROCITY.

All Markets Better for Cuba Than One Market Only, While Canada Will Still Sacrifice Her Domestic Industries by Tariff Reductions.

In the following editorial on the first trade Reciprocity Reciprocity there is more of fact than is endeavor to be that necessary discussion of tariff matters:

There is reputed to be lasting interest in the adoption of reciprocity in the United States. It is feeling itself able to get along very fairly with our neighbors. One of the Minneapolis companies sells the people of that state after becoming more and more convinced about reciprocity with Canada, but Canada's interest is not greatly, or at least relatively, to the United States, has been centering an interest on this side that been in cooling.

It is considerably less than Cuba is feeling less and less about reciprocity. This seems really hard, very unfriendly. The scheme of trade on Cuba with a bargain, and to the Cuban was sure to be a bad one for her while it was a tolerable one for the Americans. The reciprocity treaty between Canada for the same and Canada's proposition is not in the original with Hawaiian's power. Cuba was not satisfied with the arrangement. The Sugar trust Hawaii, but Cuba thought it was a bad one. Cuba thinks that a usual obligation was to Hawaii, on the 28th.

Placing Made and manufactures thus people supported the reciprocity proposition. The ground stood. This formulated its influence in a large and powerful body of manufacturers, but this fell behind to the down a primitive and the wave gathered to notice that been made at some time by something. Time seem to have lost sight of the fact that we had half the shadow of a right to make such a proposition on the power to carry it out—that is, unless, but the United States congress, it is not believe in reciprocity, that congress ever made such a proposition.

The moral substantial plea, advocate without up to the sugar trust finally dropped, for a time, then, just in the long course to the dudeen complacency, that that is the matter discussing in the case seems a challenge. And so Cuba's sugar interest, and commercial interests need to get greatly in hope of the arrangement while the Cuban people outside of those identified with the affairs of the Sugar trust and the Tobacco and Cigar trust, are certain to be injured more than Canada would be injured by Canada's reciprocity case. Cuba would be benefited by the Hawaiian treaty. This is a mere one over reciprocity but Cuba is not in a position to take "Cuba interest in the adoption of reciprocity by the United States."

Finally, there is the Republican's assertion that "Canada's interest in reciprocity has cooled notably from the United States. Let been be asked as informed on this point has been increasing." Canada has found out that the Union stands ready to be friendly to any and all neighbors. Certainly would not consent to a reciprocity treaty which would injure products. Into Canada and the United States are natural rivals. Neither is a baby. Canada would have much to gain by such reciprocity. The farmers, businessmen and shipowners of the United States would be the losers. Finding that the tariff barrier could be made Canada to naturally but forced to reciprocity. Nobody in Canada politely engaging the farming, lumber and shipping interests favors reciprocity in manufactures. Reciprocity in manufactures would literally kill every Canadian manufacturing industry. Reciprocity of this kind, with a peck course in favor of the United States, would not lead to greater trade treaty Britain to say nothing of Germany, France and the rest of the world. It is Sunderland's idea of a British Parliament would treasure an arrangement of which and its interests to the manufacturing interests of the United Kingdom. Nothing of this sort was the very question was under discussion in the house of lords. The cable report says:

The Marquess of Lansdowne, Secretary of State for Foreign Affairs, said the government considered that the time had come when they should endeavor to find some means of ascertaining whether it was possible to obtain some final action with the colonies, on that some means of protecting them. If they were subjected to discriminations in consequence of the preferential treatment they granted to the mother country, and to discriminations of protecting British interests against inequitable competition.

Closer fiscal union with the colonies and the final need of discovering means of protecting British interests against inequitable competition, said he and that to British policy. In these circumstances it is to be for a moment supposed that Canada, for the sake of enriching the manufacturers of the United States, will enter into a reciprocity arrangement that will strike her own industries and at the same time subject British business to a still more inequitable competition than that which is now complained of? Such a proceeding on Canada's part is out of the question. That is why Canada is in no haste to enter into reciprocity treaty. That is why the National Reciprocity League and the Minneapolis Branch, that is especially devoted to the Canadian part of the project, are waiting their time. All the facts and conditions are against any general scheme of reciprocity between Canada and the United States. There will be reciprocity when Canada becomes an integral part of the United States, not before.

And now would the reader tell poor Lucinda, the unfortunate cousin and the Cuyahoga Indian maiden, who were the real guilty parties in this affair?

Why, Lucinda had slipped into step as easy as she dared, and was leaning on Jim's arm, although fear of assuming her husband's place, was in her heart.

Between the two, Jim was in sympathy and in confidence, entirely, by early agreement; but he was ignorant, from motives of generosity, of the real state of affairs. The kinship of half blood, was not known to him, either. Mrs. Cuyahoga, who was the only one who could, or would, have made it, was ignorant, by choice, of the relationship, and was not, in any way, responsible for the mischief of her son. He, Wyandotte, was the only one who could, or would, have made it, and he was ignorant of the fact. He, Wyandotte, was ignorant of the fact, that his mother was the only one who could, or would, have made it, and she was ignorant of the fact, that he was ignorant of the fact, that he was the only one who could, or would, have made it, and he was ignorant of the fact, that she was ignorant of the fact, that he was ignorant of the fact, that she was ignorant of the fact, that he was ignorant of the fact, that she was ignorant of the fact, that Saginaw County. The sugar beet has been a potent and large factor in the prosperity of this section of Michigan. And any one who appreciates it around town will intend to minimize its increase with rule of against trouble.

There has not been much said for some time of the crops state national from Gratiot, and, but the prospect is not dead and an Alpena paper states that it is unwise to communicate now than it has been at any time heretofore.

Active thinking the county, disclosed the fact that groups of all hues are flouting a rooting seed in this section, and everything in the way of farm produce promises to reimburse a good profit. But will undoubtedly be a season rise in the Northern Michigan farmers.

Samuel C. Smith, who has been connected with the First State Bank of this city as collection clerk, bookkeeper and teller for a number of years, has been elected cashier of the Hoyne City State Bank, and will assume the duties of its office Aug. 1st. Mr. Smith is a young man of exceptional business ability and great energy, and will make a success in his responsible position.—Petoskey Record.

George Wisnan of Kalamazoo set sail on his new yacht Vera from Old Mission for Northport point with harrowing recollections, a narrow escape from wreck on the lighthouse point soon after the night. Mr. Wisnan, his female companions and a sailor were hung up on the reef about a mile from shore several hours during the heavy storm of Monday night, and were seen by brave men on the point of Captain Hahne and crew of the gasoline launch Traverse.

Holland—special—note to by Baker tax notice purchasers in the east from land that had fate to his assessors at least four years, and than spring to which the said land planted it. He thinks the use of Paris green for killing bugs is the cause of potatoes so seldom going to seed nowadays. Regarding potatoes from seed, he says the first year they are very small, than mushroom perhaps, or the size of one joint in a man's finger. The second year the same potatoes bring forth larger ones, but not till the third year are the potatoes the regular marketable size.

The potato crop in this county now promises to be one of the biggest ever grown here. For some reason there also seems to be a feeling that fair if not fancy prices will prevail. But even 50c potatoes would gladden the heart of many a farmer, while the prices of 1899 would put many a man on easy street. As a matter of fact the potato crop of two years ago helped in serious way. Through it many money plentiful, paid lots of debts, and enabled many a farmer to purchase farm implements, build barns, houses, etc. Indirectly it was the best advertisement Northern Michigan ever had and brought many a home seeker to this section. A good year for this year's crop would have a similar effect on a bigger scale.—Kalamazoo Leader.

Traverse City Record: In an interview this morning, the Hon. G. A. Cowell, United States district attorney in Hiscock legislative was informed that the statement that has been made in the state press that 500 Grand Traverse county people would be effected by the issue of the suit regarding the G. R. & I. lands in the United States court, is erroneous, as that is about the number that would be affected in the future state. There are several thousand acres of land involved in the suit, but most of it is in Charlevoix and Antrim counties, with some in Emmet and Grand Traverse. Mr. Cowell was not able to say just how much is in this county, but stated to the Record that not over 20 people in the county would be affected by the decision of the court.

Central Lake Torch: The Torch is pleased to be able to convey to the people the cheerful news that the Alden, Bowen & Co. saw plant will soon again be the scene of activity. The Hearst, Brown have been seriously at work ever since the plant closed down, a year ago looking for something that could take the place of the slave factory and for some trips made by G. S. Brown during the past year have been mostly to look up matters, and the larger demonstrations which it was thought could be profitably installed here. They have concluded to make the plant over into a factory for the manufacture of nail keg stock and a cooperage will at once be formed and the plant put in readiness for operation this coming winter. The Aldens has the promise of further details very soon and will give full particulars as soon as all arrangements are perfected.

At the home of the Indian chief Pewabic, Dr. George L. Cole who is now at Bay View, preached the last sermon ever delivered in state people in the City of Petoskey. It was in 1853. Dr. Cole having been graduated from Albion college in 1849 and admitted to the conference the same year. Dr. James H. Potts, editor of the Michigan Christian Advocate, who is spending the summer at his cottage Wequetonsing, joined the conference the same year. Dr. Cole who was stalled, the "Boy preacher" on account of his youth, was sent to Charlevoix to occupy the Methodist pulpit in that place and to preach the gospel to the neighboring Indians. It occurred to the preacher that the five million who had settled in the vicinity of what is now the city of Petoskey might need a little good and accordingly he concluded on horseback with a folded in his pocket and held a meeting in the house of the celebrated Indian chief Pewabic. Some thereafter a stale smoking lamp was erected, which was 12 feet in 12 feet in size. At the end of the month it was found necessary to build a bigger house of 24 feet in length. During three entire days the Indian preacher visited services in the back part of Mose's store and also in the dwelling houses of Dr. Little's guests. The preacher upon a Sunday would deliver a sermon at 10:00 o'clock to the people of Charlevoix, at 2 o'clock he would preach at Susan Lake, at 4:30 he would tell the gospel story to his Indian congregation in Petoskey, and he would wind up his day's labors by preaching to Indians at Bear Creek. Then getting into his wigwam he would ride through the forest to his home in Charlevoix.

Traverse City Record: President H. B. Roberts of the Grand Rapids & Indiana passed through the city yesterday afternoon at 5 o'clock on his way home from Toledo, where a joint meeting was held of the directors of the Traverse City, Cadillac & Mackinaw railroad and the Mackinaw, Petoskey & Northern. At this meeting a definite contract was entered into between the two roads for the month lease of the northern N. Y. line in region between Newberry and Mackinaw. The lease of the operation of the line was decided upon, and the contract was made for a period of 20 years. The line will be in operation early in July, without fail, according to President Hotchkiss' statement as planned by the conference at the Toledo gathering, and as has always been intended. The construction of the dock will begin Monday next, under the direct supervision of Chas. Dodge and D. W. Kauffman. This will be pushed with all possible speed. The work will be done by the railroad company by days work, and will be completed in from four to six weeks. The iron, which was made long ago, has been delivered and is on the dock, and has ordered shipped with all speed, and is now on the way. The option for the dock has been in the grounds for some time, ready to be put into place as soon as the dock is completed. Mr. Hotchkiss is not a conservative in his statement, and says that the boat will be in operation by the first of October, the completion of the dock requiring from six to eight weeks. Mr. Kauffman, however, who will have charge of the work, says that the work will be done in about 25 days after it is begun Monday next, and that he can certainly guarantee connection between Northport and Mackinaw at each breakfast. President Hotchkiss was explicit in his statement that no other company has ever had an option on the big car ferry, and expressed a desire to know just where such stories originated. He says that Vice President Kauffman was perfectly safe in offering $5,000 to any other man of money to anyone who would prove that anyone had ever had an option on the boat. The Manistique, Marquette & Northern has purchased the beer frontage on the bay in the heart of Newberry for the dock. The property was purchased from Howard Gill, and makes an ideal dock location. This is in addition to the 100 acres owned by the T. C. L. & M. for terminal facilities in Newberry.

REVIVAL WORK.

Evangelist Bernard, assisted by Evangelist R. H. Keeler, and several soloists of the Salvation Army, have begun a series of revival meetings in a tent in the area of one population, and will continue their work for two weeks.

Evangelist Bernard is well known here having conducted a series of meetings in the M. E. church last fall. This earnest young officer of the Salvation Army is also an accomplished pianist and soloist, he is a graduate of Asbury University and college.

Evangelist Bernard's chief assistant, Evangelist Keeler, is a remarkable man, a genius in the musical line and a success as well in his chosen calling. He plays with equal facility a cornet, a violin, violin, even get long harmonica and of a living or empty whiskey barrel and a tin can with a strong rim through it. He also specializes in his stock of musical knowledge the knack of imitating birds on his violin. It is said his working brings ability on the cornet is almost perfect.

The meetings are made agreeable interesting by stereopticon views, illustrating salvation army work, and the talks by Evangelist Bernard and Keeler are of the future lectures.

The salvation army is entitled to the respect of all good citizens it is doing a noble work in this world.

A Normal School for Charlevoix County.

The new State Normal school may be located north of Grand Rapids, and it is pretty certain that Charlevoix will have a county Normal Training School established this fall. That was the decision reached by special resolution at the school district meeting on Monday night. If you were not present it was because you did not heed the special legal notice that were posted for the last week.

The meeting was called for the purpose of considering the advisability of establishing a County Normal Training class in accordance with the provisions of Act No. 164 passed at the last session of the Michigan Legislature. This law provides that the State superintendent of Public Instruction, the County Commissioner of schools, and the Supervisor of schools in the district in which the class is established, shall constitute a County Normal Board to organize and direct the school. Only ten such schools can be established in any one year, and Charlevoix is fortunate enough to be tried in the lottery for the year 1899 and the law is to that the establishment of the school this fall, will not be at Charlevoix nor the county one dollar for teachers' salaries. The State provides for the cost of two teachers, it remains to meet the requirements of the class. It is not expected that the class will number more than twenty-five or thirty students this year. As soon as ten qualified candidates are ready and the county board of supervisors have voted their consent to the establishment, the state superintendent is empowered to authorize the commencement of the work.

The action of the supervisors at their October meeting is needed to secure free tuition for students in the normal class. The aim of the law is to enable teachers to fit themselves more thoroughly for rural school work. The course of study already outlined by the State superintendent embraces Physiology and the Principles of Pedagogy, School Management, Primary Methods, Elementary Manual Training, and Agriculture, besides the usual rural school studies. It is hoped that this class will prove of benefit to the rural schools that has ever been brought about by State legislation, and Charlevoix county is to be congratulated on the prospect of being among the first to take advantage of it. Our Sugar House was quick to perceive the possibilities of the law as soon as he received notice of the passage.

In order to facilitate the organization of the school as soon as the law takes effect it is desirable that young people who wish to plan for the next year's course should correspond at once with Commissioner A. W. Chew or with myself. H. Hoag, of Charlevoix. Full information will be furnished as to the course of study, the conditions of admission, etc.

Remember the tuition is free.

ODDITIES IN PET NAMES.

Varying Terms of Endearment in Different Countries.

"If a man in this country calls his wife a cat, the familiarity is held for a divorce suit," said the man who travels. "But in French women take the same word as a term of endearment. In Spain the most endearing phrases in the vocabulary of affection of one sex are used for quite an opposite purpose in another nation. Out of the best language and most refined phrases of endearment among the French for instance, is my little fool, and my little goose, one is also well tired.

"But if the Frenchman were to call Miss Newman 'oeufs' as an American football player did on the last half she would be very much offended. Of the other two names that I ever heard of was that used by a famous German general, who always called his wife my little kernel of coffee. They were discussed at least between and a critic said that the general's pet name should have been my little coffee wife, as business for the lady was said to have had a very shady income. Then a discussion thought of Walter, who when writing to his wife, while in a fishing expedition, rate her his great fish speckled trout.

A Polite Prospect.

In the centre of departing a man from his wealth the French are not so far behind the times as again in England. As Bradford, with all the egotism and normalcy of his race was discussing the prospect of his son, "Walter" attributes on the Bonne Nuit, the Parisian the subject, when a fellow Frenchman approached him and said in good English:

"Would you have the kind as so far to gratify the desire of a lady artist to sketch your window as the grand sill for five pounds—and also a sketch of your mahogany at Milnes' table, which she declares, on Michel Angelo's chisel-tered?"

"Oh certainly"

"Pose a little turn of Mona's head. If you please, Mr. Bradford. A little thoughtful-thinks."

And the Frenchman departed with a sketch, vanity and stock out of one. The man of the Bonne Nuit, if he had been quite to take advantage of the situation.

Strange Freak of Earthquake.

An earthquake recently occurred in Dutch Guiana. The principal fun at Grafton caused a similar program theatre machine, which had been out of order for a long time. When, during the earthquake, which the fellow the machine began to work, and "Dodge Ball" rang out above the cries of the intimidated guests. Many of the latter jumped out of the windows, at the risk much to quiet the patron, pay himself in the confusion, and leaving windows, stopping for pennies. It "dashed" the manager for the rest of the evening, though he did all in his power to explain that it was not the fault of the company had not come along and reshipped the machine.

WORLD'S GREAT FUR MARKET.

Russian Traders Gather Annually at Irbit in Siberia.

The great fur market of the world is held annually in Irbit, in Siberia, 400 miles east of Moscow and the Russian traders have to cross the Ural mountains to get to it. Every year the fur traders have adventurous enough to trying to reach Irbit in time to get a whole storage of romantic stories if they would only tell them. But it has been their business and their lives so they think nothing of it, and they have no time to spare. Yet, for all, as soon as they have brought their furs in 1903 they must hasten back to Russia again to prepare them for further sale and then they usually hurry to Leipsic in Germany, which, in addition to being the great book-selling center of Europe, is also the largest fur market of the world west of Russia.

THE WORD WAS FAMILIAR.

Scholar Naturally Stalled by Modern Slang.

A West Philadelphia Sunday school teacher has a class of a dozen small boys, ranging in their ages from 6 to 8 years. He has just graduated from the twenty-second chapter of Genesis, upon the temptation of Abraham to offer Isaac for a sacrifice. The teacher told them in as simple language as possible the story of the test of the little boy and the faithful parents, and then, to make sure that the youngsters also explained that Abraham was a tall coward in the business and took advantage of his little boy's confidence for a moment to run the fatal blow. Then the teacher asked the class if anyone knew what was meant by a "lamb." Quick as a flash a little fellow in the back of the room with a yellow, freckled face, shouted:

"Yes, I know what a lamb is. It's a sheep."

"Right, Willie," said the teacher, well pleased at the ready response of the boy, who was evidently a bright lad. "Now, Willie, what is a sheep?"

Willie was stumped. The question was too much for him. He had never heard the word before in his life. He had never seen a sheep. He had never even heard the word used in a sentence. He was a city boy, and his parents were poor. The teacher had to give up the question herself, and the class went on to the next verse.

THE KAISER'S SURPRISE PARTY.

Incident Shows Prominent Trait in William's Character.

An amusing story is told in the English papers about Kaiser William's fondness for surprising his army and his navy. When the squadron was at Kiel, some time ago, the officers invited it to a social function in Berlin. A young naval commander, while mingling with the crowd of gaily uniformed courtiers, thought he espied another naval friend in front of him. His friend's back was turned toward him, so he pushed up to him and pinched his hard on the shoulder he said: "How are you old fellow? Come, let us go and surprise the apparatus tonight." His surprised friend turned around and, to his horror, the naval commander found that he had clasped Admiral Wilhelm on the back. The commander stood aghast but the kaiser saw the joke. "Excellent idea!" he said. "Keep quiet and we will start at once." And the Kaiser slipped a half-rule rail was the result and, to the kaiser's great glee, he was able to surprise every battleship and cruiser in port that night.

Board of Foreign Affairs Seeks Way to Avoid Two Foreign Notes Addressed Foreigners—Sheriffs Will Prevent Lynchings.

The Chinese board of foreign affairs appears to be in a state of perplexity in regard to the notes addressed to the foreigners in China by the ministers of the foreign nations, which notes, in effect, state that the lives of the foreign colony should not be at stake in Northern China. While the general action is regarded as being partly directed at the recent Boxer outbreaks, it is evident that the officials are alarmed at the prospect of being held responsible for the foreign complaints against the foreign government, and it is the view of the more wise and prudent officials that the Boxer movement in Pekin was opposed.

FIRST AMERICAN CARDINAL TO VISIT THE POPE

Cardinal Gibbons is the first American cardinal to take part in the election of a Pope, and for the decision that he had to accept during the Spanish-American war, which caused the hostilities of Spanish cardinals to would probably have been a favorite for the papal crown, in spite of the fact that cardinals of the nationality of Leo XIII. are very numerous and influential. The election of a successor to the venerable pontiff was expected to be a long one, it is said, and it was thought that the Cardinal Archbishop of Baltimore would be a candidate for the papal chair, if he should be called upon to take a leading part in the conclave held for the purpose of electing a successor to the venerable pontiff.

It is safe to say that from both performances they must have taken in between $12,000 and $15,000. It is estimated that at least 15,000 people attended the afternoon performance.

Boyne Falls Leader: We were informed by telephone yesterday morning that Frank P. Brown had returned from Dayton, Ohio, where he had been with a supply of the Big Tree Sheriff Pearson's property here and reports the tests highly satisfactory. Mr. Brown says they expected that will make splendid quality of cross, some red, some cream colored. It is also adapted to the manufacture of pressed brick of the highest quality. Mr. Brown informed us that he would be here next week and have a number of the bricks on exhibition at the Leader office. All kinds of money is ready to invest in parties from Chicago, Detroit, Bojne City and Petoskey to make the business a booming concern.

The apple harvest has already commenced in this region, and since very fancy prices are being offered by outside parties for the fruit on the trees. The early varieties, which will not keep long, are being sold for $2 per barrel on the trees, and the buyers are to furnish the barrels. Buyers have been all through this region, and on the Peninsula, where some of the finest fruit farms are located, there has been a great deal of jockeying among the commission men to get control of the fruit, and they have succeeded in some instances, but not perfectly willing to take the risk of a light crop developing from some unforeseen cause. Nearly every orchard is loaded, and the indications are for one of the largest apple crops on the Peninsula in some time.

Max Jordan Post of the Kalkaska incident which seems very close to criminal negligence occured Thursday afternoon. Wm. Nixon, a farmer living two miles east of town, who has been working on the Deer Creek dam, had brought his scraper to town that morning for repairs and while waiting proceeded to fill himself up with booze so that when he started homeward shortly after one o'clock he was badly intoxicated, so much so that as he neared his home he did not see his little daughter Bessie who toddled out to meet him. The little girl slipped under the rear wheel of the wagon which passed over her body crushing out her little life and the father was only aroused from his drunken stupor by the little child's death cry.

An Elk Rapids special says: At the semi-annual meeting of the Elk Rapids Portland Cement Co. held here, the stockholders voted to consolidate with the Bay Shore Lime Co., a corporation located at Bay Shore near Petoskey and capitalized at $250,000. The property of the company is located on the Pere Marquette railroad and Little Traverse bay and has been a money maker several years. By the terms of the proposition submitted, the property of the Elk Rapids Portland Cement Co. here will be developed to its fullest capacity while in like manner the property acquired at Bay Shore will be developed and eventually a large cement mill erected at or near the quarry from which the plant in this city now procures its raw material.

A staff correspondent of the Grand Rapids Herald writing on paper from Northport says there is a splendid opportunity for the Traverse City, Lansing & Manistique railroad to do a good work in wealth creating in Northport. The government continues "The town lies on a beautiful bay with a fine harbor near the northern point of Leelanau county. Along the shore are the remains of a couple of scattered mills surrounded by decaying docks, from which the first wealth of the county took passage to some eastern port. Northport has reached a high religious stage and has seven fine churches, which rear their spires above the coal shade trees which line the streets. The native sons point with pride to the grand hotel recently erected on the beach, and so far this season has more servants than guests, and to the gigantic car ferry lying at the docks awaiting the construction of tracks and new docking to begin daily trips between Northport and Manistique with loads of passengers and cars of freight. The company expects to carry 2,000 tonnes this fall. The advent of the railroad will make Northport a thriving village. Today the town lies in sad neglect. The sidewalks are broken or destroyed, the streets are narrow and its entire appearance is of antiquity. But there are signs of reconstruction and and he who runs the town this season will hardly know the place a year hence. Not by no means of several reasons which have helped to keep Northport on the map. These will now be enlarged and improved, and in a couple of years a large portion of the transcontinental traffic now going to the Pacific coast will have been forced north to Northport and vicinity."

Treats a Father in Texas.

One of the most noted and brilliant ministers of the gospel in the state of Michigan is the Rev. F. A. Blades, of the Detroit conference of the M. E. church. Not only does he stand high as a minister and of a man of religious character, but he is also a Mason of note and consequence. He has been an ardent supporter of the Masonic institution for years, and many people in this state know the important office controller of Detroit. The following reference to him appeared recently in the Michigan Christian Advocate:

"On the 7th inst. Rev. F. A. Blades, the honored and widely known controller of the city of Detroit, passed the eighty second and anniversary of his birth. He was on duty at his office in fine health and spirits. Some of his friends knew when the time between the eighty-second and eighty-third year was to be passed and took occasion to show their regards and pour out their congratulations. Bro. Blades received many attentions, and the wishes for the Father of Detroit will give him for the future, if realized, will give him many happy years on earth yet. The daily papers interviewed Bro. Blades and published some of the congratulations given on him and some items from his work in the ministry. He retains to an unwonted degree the mental grasp of his prime, and presses his religious views and convictions with clearness and strength. A year ago in presenting a tribute to a Masonic lodge, he made a short address extolling the Word of God as a light and help to men. Those who heard his remarks called for a copy of them, and they were put in print. They are worthy of a place in the different, also differ in this or an early issue we will give them to our readers, and they may see from our side, yet, published in a single limit of 4 years books to the Scriptures on which he has fed all his life."

Better Than Gold.

I was troubled for several years with a kind of indigestion and nervous debility," writes F. J. Green, of Lancaster, N. H. "No remedy helped me until I began using Electric Bitters, which did me more good than all the medicines I ever used. They have also kept my wife in excellent health for years. She says Electric Bitters are just splendid for female troubles; that they are a grand tonic and invigorator for weak, run down women. No other medicine can take its place in our family." Try them. Only 50c. Satisfaction guaranteed by F. H. Hines & Co.

Cancerous Sores are the worst on the earth. Bucklen's Arnica Salve is the best. Only 25c. Hines & Co. and M. V. Cook & Co.

A Very Interesting Day's Trip.

Should one late lamented Uncle Dayton Ward come back to earth for a day, and run up from Charlevoix to the town named in honor of his memory (toward he would be surprised at what has been accomplished by his executors in the work of garnering the harvest of wealth which his wisdom, foresight and industry provided in the primeval forests of Northern Michigan.

Howard is in Crawford County, 12 miles south east of East Jordan. It occupies a beautiful valley on the Manistee river, which all about for miles lies the vast area of pine and hardwood lands of the Ward estate. Very little of the pine is left along the railroad from South Arm to Howard, but there are some magnificent stretches of hardwood on the sloping hill shores, and scenery that pleases the eye.

At Howard is one of the largest saw mills in the United States, and the only mill left in Michigan that cuts pine exclusively. It cuts about 200,000 feet in twenty hours, and is in as complete a example of human genius, coupled to its proportions, power and compactness in mechanism construction and adjustment, it is an industrial marvel.

In charge of the enormous lumber industry is Mr. Hoot, a son in law of the late Mr. Ward, and one of the executors of the estate. Mr. Hoot has a pleasant home there, over looking the Manistee and the broad spreading hillsides beyond. A fine school building is in process of erection, for which, as disclosed by an official notice posted near the store, the district bonded itself by a vote of "the qualified freeholders of said township." As the only free holder in the district is the Ward estate, and considering the fact that the school house was half built when the "freeholders" voted to bond, the thought suggests itself that Mr. Hoot's "called meeting" was only a matter of form. The fact is, the Ward estate is building a fine school house for its employes.

There seems to be nothing to complain at, but something a days visit to this busy little industrial community. Long rows of neat, well built cottages stretch along the river terrace, and a well stocked store supplies the necessaries of life. There are no farms tributed about, or planing, for there are no farms because timber and busy men. Long alignments of lumber piles, millions of feet of it, cover ground enough to make a good sized farm, and all white pine, a product that is worth, where it lies, from $10 to $50 per thousand.

Mr. Hoot told us, as we sat in his cozy parlor and smoked, that on pine alone there is a steady high and day run of ten years longer, another ten year cut of hardwood, and still an decade on pinelands beyond. The Detroit & Charlevoix R. R. (?), as it was formerly known, the "Ward road," is not a pin-cross logging road, but a well ballasted and well equipped road, comfortable and fairly expeditious in service. It is an interesting route, because it is unique. To the traveler along double track lines, through prairie stretches and past stone, renaissance stations, the Howard trip is refreshing and surely interesting.

The company has this summer been running excursions via Steamer Pilgrim to Howard and by a branch to the lumber camps, where the big pine trees are cut and a lumberman's dinner served. These trips have increased in popularity, and will seem to be made a Northern Mich resort diversion. We know of no more enjoyable day's outing than that out into the grand forests of maple and beech and then on into the aromatic pine woods, where you sniff your fringe full of nature's pure essence, and feast your your eyes upon a grand state of timbering bill and valley. And you can do it all between breakfast and supper, and set on your own porch again in the evening.

The church was full last Sunday morning to hear Rev. Thos. Cummins D. D. Henderson, Ky, who is with his family occupying his cottage on the Belvedere grounds. Dr. Cummins preached a strong sermon on the subject of faith which was greatly enjoyed.

Next Sunday morning the Rev. Geo. Luther Cady, D. D. Iowa City, Ia., will preach. Dr. Cady is an eloquent preacher. Just those who hear the sermon of morning give two year will certainly try to hear him again, and all should make an effort to hear him.

A Girl From Sweden.

Is the title of a new comedy drama announced for the first presentation here at Petoskey Sept. 11th next. As its name would indicate this is a play with a Scandinavian central figure, around whom the author has woven a story of well sustained interest. It is a play with a heart story, full not of that tragicomic kind. It is most happy in the element of clean bright and effective comedy with which it has been woven, and it offers an excellent study of the most marked types of character indigenous to the Northwest where the story is laid. Music, song and specialties by accomplished artists play an important part, and yet there is no dearing of a good pure story for the sake of entertaining with song and dance, as all of this class of features are introduced in the most legitimate manner. "A Girl From Sweden" has been constructed upon the longer dramatic lines, in that it is pure in sentiment, clean in action and diction, and does not pose as an entertainer because it answers a few by gesticulating, but for the reason that it phases the story by its bright forward story, keen action, and well conceived plot. A most acceptable cast is promised.

Mysterious Circumstance.

One was pale and sallow and the other fresh and rosy. Wherein the difference? She who is thinking with with health uses Dr. King's New Life Pills to maintain it. Her sallow sister is using the lazy organs that compel good digestion and bread off constipation. Try them. Only 25c. at F. H. Hines & Co. Druggist.

The Planter's Daughter
OR FATE'S REVENGE

By MRS. ALICE P. CARPENTER

Author of "A Wait from the Sea," "Her Brightest Hope," "Conquered Wrongfully," etc.

Now the Sepoids were under arms, though only week old, but with the aid of enthusiasm, the Sepoids had gained strength, and was the fortnight elapsed she was quite well and strong again.

During the days of her convalescence she never had gained her top, or whether she had had all attempts at the entertainment—no, Emma could not determine, and did not venture to ascertain. Once she was left in a great room, through a rolling for glimpses of her mother's sitting in a chair, and a cool and carefully concealed with soft cushions of the hated chair of her have.

Servants and the native ladies been outspoken when she was small before her growing up of greater beauty, and the timidness, the dear spirited and lovely Emma's mother, had been wrapped with a sharp pang of surprise as she gazed at her in the embrace, which she received her in his embrace, which she gave to him and her and arms about his neck, he turned gladly. Bewildered, Emma, rapt out of the room, she stood, blinking, in the sunshine and the cool and refreshing air of the garden.

After she had recovered so well based on the veranda, she was carried down, now to his lease, as though nearer, she said Gerald's home and so high and wonderful.

"Lucknow, and my time now?"

"Have you any reason to doubt my word?" he laughed.

"That is a question, and an answer, you engaged, a slight smile on the lips of her. Then it was time, as if to bring it back, to be a little, and to be a little."

In quiet of himself his deep alone her mourned and she stands away from him, looking up into his thoughtful, serious face.

"Why do you ask me such a question, Sylphide?" he cried.

Why? he repeated sadly, because and it is best otherwise my words would never forgiven, and I would be, and, if, why my suspicion you would have stricken me to death, and I would be, and, if, for you? I so said, that you have no life, let me, and I would be, and, if, happiness." he wailed.

"Do what, you? I sorrow, these reproaches this despite? What have I done? What have I done, and the shadow lead you to suppose—"

"Lady Emma, mine is chivalrous," she cried impetuously, "it is two long weeks since you have been with me, and, if you are tired of your happiness with me, and wish to leave me—"

As she spoke, she sank upon a chair and covered her face with her hands. He took a step towards her and pressed "Dear, dear, my life, my life, so foolishly so foolishly, be cried.

"Forgive me, forgive me, my woman, that I love you with all the devotion I owe to the mother of your child."

She stared in her face that, not found him, with all the dignity of a queen.

"Then why is this love," she exclaim, "so suddenly, so reckless, so hasty? Two long years, your dignity to day?"

"Do you mean, Sylphide, that I have been, 'Dignity' to Sylphide, beside himself in the sweetest, and, if, I suffer and, if, I suffer, before of one dear, I suffer, dear, I think that my mother—"

His words were cut short by the call

WITH DISTAINFUL EYES, HE SAW A DUEST INTO THE ROOM.

"His lips right, Sylphide," she cried, so closely, "Lucknow, and my time now."

There was a great noise of crowers, moon room in a case upon the new table, and Gerald said to Emma handed them to her. Sitting, Emma, with a pale face, the bosom of her white muslin dress, she took a gold pen and a comb and carefully connected with soft cushions of the hated chair of her have.

Petoskey Record: An rattle snake was killed at Cardwood Point, Cheboigan Co. last week. We have never heard of a rattle snake being killed or seen in Emmet county, and they are very rarely seen in northern Michigan. In Presque Isle county however, there is a rocky ledge which is so at least that is said that the snakes never get more than a mile or so away from their rocky dens.

The new Pere Marquette depot at Williamsburg which has only been in use for a few weeks, was burned last Saturday by the explosion of a gasoline generator used for lighting purposes. The window of the building were blown out and the building will have to be nearly entirely rebuilt. The operator, Henry Langemaitz was burned under the debris and considerel unconscious but will recover.

The jury in the King damage case returned a verdict of $750 against the Ann Arbor Railway company in one of the most stubbornly contested cases in the annals of Judge Chittenden's court at Frankfort. Sheridan King was assistant light keeper at Frankfort and lost his eye one year ago by being crushed between the tender jobs of the Ann Arbor Docks while on duty. He was making a landing, the suits in his behalf by his attorney, Wight Warner, brought against the receivers of $50,000 damages.

Twenty eight people in Frankfort were ill from ptomaine poisoning, caused by eating cheese purchased at a local grocery house. Several of the cases were of serious nature, but the majority of them were not dangerous. Every physician in the city worked nearly the whole night long in response to hurry up calls from every quarter of the city. Adolph Lodl, leader of the Frankfort orchestra, was perhaps the most severe case, he physician working over him about three hours before he was pronounced out of danger.

East Jordan Enterprise: The Driving Club are getting the track at the Park grounds in shape for the coming races. At present all indications point to the best race meet here at Fair time that has ever been had in the county. While we have not so many best horses to compete, the good purses hung up have attracted outside horsemen and they are coming after them. One Chicago man with a string of his racers, has expressed the intention to be here, and the winner of last year's big race "Mr. Henry" is already here and will train on the track until fair time.

The common council at Boyne City has granted an electric light franchise to Porter A. Stowe and C. C. Palmer of Grand Rapids, who will immediately enter upon the work of damming Boyne river and putting in water wheels and dynamos. Interest in the subject has been at fever heat some fortnight a fortnight ago, when rival offers were published in the Boyne Hodge lumber district, with a free river, frontage, where the lumber from the north woods can be unloaded on the docks, and in direct connection with all of the railroad lines entering into Boyne. Upon the one end of this property a modern flouring mill, containing all of the most approved types of roll milling machinery was erected and the company is now intend upon a lumbering business which has since extended all over the United states.

I pay nothing to Detroit the firm was reorganized and is now known as Wm. Vorenkamp Co., Ltd., with the following officers: Pres. Lucius Lamont; V. P. Hunter Warfield, of the state was struck by a bad only in the gizzard and has grown considerably bound to stand to be spot and did good work. The leader of the game was the batting of Washington (pinch of the bases and his skillful throwing to second and third, several of the friends the enemy. It was a good game, and the crowd was large.

Friday afternoon, on the same field, the Grand Rapids Independents defeated the Bangor Falls Grays, 7 to 5, in an animated contest. The Independents put up a very active and interesting game and the Grays contributed every.

Saturday afternoon, the Charlevoix Independents played the Bangor Falls Grays but the Dual team were defeated 12 a score of 17 to 1.

GOOD JOKE ON "FITZ"

Comedian Made Capital Out of Prize Fighter's Bald Head.

Bob Fitzsimmons, the ex-pugilist, has many friends in the theatrical profession. Whenever he enters a theater the management usually arranges that the popular pugilist is conducted to the box and in the house Fitzsie comfortable or lower seating accordingly. Not long ago Fitzsie was in the comedian's box in the Bingham theater, and the house was packed to see "Fitz" was on a Chicago theater recently one comedian said to another:

"Do you know that Fitzsimmons is strong as Samson?"

"I don't believe it."

"It is. Why, he can't come up to me. His Samson lost his hair in Delilah's lap. I say mine stronger than Samson."

Prince O, given it, almost the finishing stroke.

And while Fitzsimmons sat there contentedly rubbing his bald head the comedian explained:

"If 'Fitz' can bring down the house without any hair on his head, what should he do if he had into the bargain?"—Detroit Free Press.

Would Earn More.

When the clever writer and caricaturist, Max Beerbohm, succeeded George Bernard Shaw as dramatic critic of the London Saturday Review he was told by the manager that Shaw was getting such and such pay. "Of course, being comparatively inexperienced," the manager added, "you can scarcely expect as much." "Oh, yes, I think," replied Mr. Beerbohm, deferentially; "indeed, I shall expect more. You see," he explained, "as Shaw knows the drama thoroughly it was perfectly easy for him to write about it. Whereas I know nothing about it and it will be absolutely hard work."

SUBSERVIENCY OF THE SLAV.

No Thought Beyond the Pleasing of Their Superiors.

Of the Russian character a foreign expert affirms most emphatically that it is such to paralyze the will of the whole Russian administration, reaching to the lower ranks. He further says he admitted to me that the Russian writer goes most along a principle of his Royal Patron of Sweden, who, when he was witnessed his pleasing speech, the director of the theatre, he said, only, turns to the employing in his presence an ugly and unpleasant face, which, a subject would be tempted to imitate. After all, the Russian is a child, frankness, so, you know, Hence, Alexander III. said: "Do you are a man you children." Exactly so, your Majesty, I am a man, continued he, and Russian, I am a child, replied. The Russian is a child, the director has for before our administration, and the street, he being what frequently is called "Russian without parentage."

BOTH EYES DO NOT SEE ALIKE.

Many people have the idea that the sense with both eyes open. They, on a bet, one day, tried the experiment, following simple explanations. Close one of the eyes with a hand or a handkerchief and let the experimenter look out—for a specific ordinary object—for a few hours of time, and he will almost invariably miss the thing either completely, or approximately, putting the object too far to the right or left of its mark. When the experiment and repeat the experiment for Gordon and Gordon is involved.

TRIBUTE TO HIS LAWYER.

Negro Convicts Idea of Who Sent Him to Prison.

A Jackson, Miss., paper recalls one of the Lincoln anecdotes, that of the negro prisoner in Kentucky and Hope for the Lincoln, who, when the work done, so I heard, or rather, I should say, I read, the prisoner asked Lincoln, who was then with the Royal Prisoner of Sweden, to know his counsel for pleading some one of the prisoners, complained a good deal of the prisoner, "Why, I have pleaded in New Orleans you know, yes, I pleaded more of the case than, I did. I plead Mr. Hon. Lincoln, there, he can tell the truth." Turning the Judge, a little appealing to need his aid. The Judge, of course, explained that the lawyer, of Mr. Lincoln, as a prominent attorney and he wanted to know how he came to plead the case this time.

"He was my lawyer," explained the darky.—Lippincott's.

What They Sang.

Marshall P. Wilder relates the following story about an Irishman who went to Sunday school for the first time and heard the song first of Kingdom "Onward, Christian Soldiers." Upon his return his wife asked him what he had learned. "Thats about as Mulldoon's Hall," he said, "and they sang the same thing over and over."—New York Press.

LIGHT AND HEAVY BRAINS

Professional Men Have Far More Gray Matter Than Laborers.

In a recent address on the human brain by Santiago y Ramon and Cajal, the most eminent anatomist of Europe, stated the fact that the heaviest brain he has found is that of a young man of 20 years, weighing 1,500 grams. Cuvier's brain weighed 1,829 grams, and Byron's, some years of age, to 1,807 grams. The average weight of the brain of Germans, that of a man of 25 years, and unless in high, Plato, Dante, Kant, Gambetta, Lamartine, a woman of 25 years, 1,300 grams. The average weight of the brain of laborers, artisans, and others, and the female sex, 1,200 grams. The average weight of the brain of idiots, imbeciles, and others, 1,000 grams, and that of Newfoundland dogs, 1,000 grams. The average weight of the brain of Germans, those of Mechanics, Chemists, Physicians, Professors, Lawyers, Publicists, Priests, Musicians, and others, 1,400 grams.

The Sugar Beet Question.

Aug. 31, 1893.

EDITOR SENTINEL:

I would like to say a few words on the sugar beet question, as I have been in the employ of the Sugar Company during the season.

Our beets promise to be a good crop, especially where they were sown in good time in the spring, and have had the proper treatment. In some cases there has been a scarcity of help to thin the beets at the proper time. Some of the things that kept the work back can be overcome next year.

It is quite manifest to the people that they can make the growing of beets very profitable, I regard it as one of the best industries that has come to our country, as it gives employment to many of our young people, as well as older ones, and puts money in circulation that otherwise would not be called out.

Besides teaching local habits of industry, the work is very healthy, and not very hard. All of the people that the company has brought here to work in the beet fields are well satisfied, and intend to stay in the country, and some of them are talking of buying farms of their own to grow sugar beets on, and I venture to say that in the next five years the population of our county will greatly increase, and that in the next five years there will be more mortgages paid off than through any other industry in the county.

And now is the time for the farmers to make their plans for a beet crop next year, as the ground needs to be plowed in the fall if possible, and then thoroughly cultivated and pulverized in the spring, in most cases it will pay to enrich the soil either with well rotted stable manure, or commercial fertilizer, as is very evident on this point.

I didn't doubt that there will be some who will expect as high as a ton to the acre, I believe that every farmer ought to put in from 3 to 5 acres at least, and some more if you farmers get your ground ready for next year, as we ought to have four times as many acres from the farmers next year.

Yours,
W. A. CRANE.

A movement has again been revived to incorporate Northport as a village. This time the movement will probably succeed. The terminus of the F. G. I. & M. railroad and is the terminus of a car ferry line, Northport should boast at least of being an incorporated village.

Petoskey Daily News: Albert Pelsmaky, aged 60 years, died Saturday at his home in Deer Creek township. The burial was held this morning at 9 o'clock, the services being held in Crosswood church, southeast of town. Pelsmaky was an old and highly respected member of the local Indian community, was a member of Company A, 1st Michigan sharpshooters during the civil war and was well thought of where known.

Grim Brothers of Cleveland, large stave and heading manufacturers, with a capital of half a million dollars have decided upon the establishment of a stave and heading plant in East Jordan which will give employment to 100 men. The company has contracted for timber in that vicinity for 15 years in advance and will begin work on its new factory at once. The structure is expected to be completed before winter. A site was furnished by private subscription among the citizens of the village. The town has excellent shipping facilities by rail and water and is always on the look out for factories.

The Farmers' Friendly Association Picnic.

Last Thursday the sun shone brilliantly on the Farmers' Friendly Ass'n when from 4000 to 5000 people had gathered in the Willis Birch grove in Norwood for their 21st annual basket picnic. The best feeling of good fellowship prevailed and friends from different places greeted each other joyfully. The President of the Farmers' Friendly Association introduced the Hon. H. W. Paddock who entertained the big crowd in a few well chosen remarks in which he referred to the good work done by congressman Wm. Alden Smith and and he implore for the representative from the third a seat in the U. S. Senate in the near future. The large audience evidently appreciated his reference, for at introduction of the congressman they went wild with their cheers of greeting. When quiet was restored Wm. Alden Smith began a most able address to the Farmers which was listened to with market attention. Good wines he referred to "as binary Beforus" and gave voice to his optimistic beliefs, the cheering and applause were so great at times as to suspension of speech for a time. Then the Pres. of the Friendly suggestion that as they had been so highly honored by their distinguished guest, all rise and give 3 cheers and a tiger, for the Hon. Representative from the 5th dist. The echos of these cheers are still going on and on, and in time will reach the uttermost corners of the state. In the meantime George H. Van Pelt Pres. of the Friendly is perked up with pride in the thought that Mr. Smith received his first senatorial boom at Norwood, and at the Farmers Friendly Ass'n picnic. From this time on Norwood will be in the map. Probably the Friendly Pres was never more gratified that when introducing Hon. H. S. Earl, state food commissioner, for right here two kindred spirits met. The Pres. said, here is a man after my own heart. I have talked good roads to you for 20 years, the Ex Senator will be more to you good roads in the next 30 minutes than I have said in all this time. Mr. Earl talked eloquently on the good roads question and the benefits which Farmers derived from them. He showed the profit made in hauling 1 ton of one load over a good road, at its expense and in less time than it would take to haul a ton over a poor road. He told a funny story about Jim, John and Bill, Jim being of State John the County and Bill the township, the idea being to all unite in building good roads and to share the expense. The crowd was strictly a good roads crowd and many were here who advocated no other. The occasion was never in better form for the people were with him and even a few who have previously been half persuaded to move the men. Earl was pronounced a hero. The Farmers Friendly has its great success become a state institution, and request has already been made to all societies lodges etc. that the last Thursday in August, for the next 100 years be held in reserve, and no dates made for that day, as the Farmers Friendly Association at Grand Rapids, Alpena and Charlevoix counties will hold their annual meetings at Norwood at Norwood and all are cordially invited to be present.

Charlevoix Public Schools—Term Opens Sept. 7th.

Although Monday, Sept. 7th is Labor Day, every prospective student in our schools is expected to be present in his room at 9 o'clock. It is necessary to have the status of all who are to be in the various classes in order to arrange a working program; after that is done the pupils will be dismissed for the remainder of the day. This year the schools will run as usual on central standard time, beginning, however, at 9 a. m. and dismissing before 12 o'clock. The afternoon sessions will begin at 1:45.

The prospects for a successful school year were never better than now. A larger proportion of the corps of teachers, which numbers a total of 19 are normal, college or university graduates, and their qualifications and experience give assurance of thorough school work. "The Student's Manual" for the current year is already published, and one copy will be furnished each pupil on the opening day. A price of 5 cents has been set for the second copy supplied to any member of the school. A complete index at the end of the Manual makes it possible to find any item at a moment's notice, and it is expected that pupils and parents will familiarize themselves with the subjects explained in it. It answers most of the questions that arise in connection with school work, but the superintendent and teachers will be glad to answer any not found in it. Any confidential information given by parents concerning the dispositions or difficulties of their children will be appreciated and used.

The Charlevoix High School is one of the few in this state that has had a larger percentage of boys than of girls in its enrollment. It is hoped that this record will be maintained. The new commercial courses offered might to increase the attendance considerably. While Supt. Hayes has not had the opportunity to become personally acquainted with all the young men who attended last year, he hopes to meet every one on Monday. Any high school student who finds it impossible to come the first day is requested to mail the superintendent a postal card indicating the earliest time he can attend.

On the same general conditions as last year the new arrangement of high school work offers students a choice of the Commercial English, Latin, English-Scientific, Latin-Scientific, German-Scientific, Commercial-Scientific, or English-Commercial Courses. These are all four years in length, so that no one of them is to be considered cheaper or less important than the others. Each department of the high school is in charge of a specialist, and first-class work will be expected of all the classes.

The newly projected National Training Class will not begin before the middle of October. Regular high school students cannot enter this work unless they have completed at least all the work below the eleventh grade, and must be at least seventeen years of age.

Students who were not promoted from their grade last year must make some arrangement with the superintendent before trying to enter the grade above. All such pupils should come to the superintendent's office at 9 o'clock on Monday afternoon. Their cases will not be considered until that time.

Any further information desired may be had at the superintendent's office on Monday or afterwards. And Mr. Hayes makes the general request that parents and pupils will not address him as "Professor," Plain "Mister" is good enough for him—especially as he believes that the other title should be applied only to the head of a college or university department.

Osteopathy.

Drs. F. J. Harlan & J. T. Novinger Osteopathic Physicians, of American school of osteopathy are again located in Charlevoix for the practice of Osteopathy. Their office this year will be at the Hotton hotel where they will be pleased to meet those desiring Osteopathic treatment. Osteopathy was first introduced in Charlevoix three years ago by Dr. Harlan whose wonderful success in treating disease has caused Osteopathy to become extensively known not only in Charlevoix but for miles around. Those desiring treatment should consult Drs. Harlan & Novinger at their earliest convenience. Consultation free, entrance limited.

SCHOOL COM. COLUMN.

The legislature of 1893 enacted a law permitting the establishment of county training classes for teachers of rural schools.

The state superintendent has decided that the following conditions should be complied with before his content can be secured.

1.—The district applying for permission to organize such classes in connection with their schools must by a majority vote favor the proposition.

2.—The board of supervisors must vote favorably upon the proposition.

3.—The board of education, on behalf of the district must agree.

(a.)—To furnish teachers who are satisfactory to the county Normal Board.

(b.)—To provide suitable assembly or recitation rooms with heating and necessary equipment, and supplies.

(c.)—To maintain the classes for at least thirty-two weeks in each year.

(d.)—To certify when application is filed that there are at least ten persons ready to enter the class when organized.

(e.)—To observe the rules of the state accountant under the statutes, in making out and presenting vouchers for money received from the state.

(f.)—If the teachers are to be paid monthly, that the district will advance the money until the semi-annual reimbursement by the state and county.

(g.)—To report annually such information in regard to the classes as the Superintendent of Public Instruction may require.

Under the law the county Normal Board is authorized to make rules and regulations, adopt courses of study, and provide such other arrangements as are necessary for the management of the county training classes.

As the superintendent is a member of all these boards and as the certificates may be transferred from one county to another, courses of study and general regulations should be as nearly uniform in all counties, as possible.

In our county next week, we will give the plan of organization to the superintendent. At present there may be considered tentative and changes to suit the various conditions of each county will be made.

October 9th is Pioneer Day. We have received a supply of programs, the same as used in 1892. Teachers who desire a program send for a copy.

In the hurry and run of these days we sometimes forget those who toiled and struggled to make our present conditions possible, the pioneers.

The teachers should interest their pupils in this work, both for its educational and for its practical value. Invite the patrons and pioneers to attend our exercises that day.

The basis for reading at the October examination is "A Hill from the Town Pump; From Twice Told Tales—Hawthorne.

AN IDEAL GRANGE HALL.

Its Size, General Plan and Equipment Discussed.

[Special Correspondence.]

Since years of experience have developed the real home work of the grange the up to date grange hall must conform to the demands of such progress. For years it has been conceded as a of benefit if the subordinate grange had in its own name and control a place called home. Because of the grange outlining its membership for those strictly interested in agricultural pursuits the home naturally revolve itself out in the country. That it may represent the grange in the passerby the surrounding grounds should be ample for shade for horses, with a good variety of trees and a lawn to accommodate gatherings of people as occasion may require. The entire outside premises should be kept in an inviting condition.

As to the grange hall itself, the outside design should be in harmony with the idea for which it is built, and this suggests a harmonizing of both church and school-house architecture. To meet all requirements the hall should be of about 24 by 60 or 70 on the ground, with eighteen feet posts on the sides. This will permit the lower part of the building to be eight feet from floor to ceiling and leave more than ample for the upper room, which, with an arched ceiling from a system of collar ties, will give a good effect. The lower part of the hall should be divided to accommodate hallway entrance, kitchen, cloakroom and a large assembly room, which is also suitable for a banquet hall, and, moreover, as children under fourteen years of age must pay to participate, this room becomes a very proper place for them, and during the nurturer's hour they can sit with their parents in the grange. This large room below, being warm and light, is very convenient for all members in which to bring their lunch or hook rails around the outer walls. Still further this large lower room can be used for all entertainments, and, especially in a pleasant day, the hall can take a platform on stage at one end, with suitable scenery.

The upper story of the building should be divided into small lending apartments, properly lined, a library and the grange hall proper. While the lower rooms should have outer doors, the stairways and all doors above should be carpeted and the grange hall alone finished and decorated with and be so well furnished as the sitting room of a well to do farmer's home. Annexes for libraries and outer rooms should also be provided, with a grange building will cost about $7,000 to $1,200.

A grange contemplating the building of a hall or home of this kind can start with the Thanksgiving and Christmas week with the following subscriptions:

We, the undersigned members of Grange, agree to give the amounts of hand labor, team labor, material and money set opposite our respective names for the purpose of erecting a grange hall at such place and time and in accordance with such plans as the grange may specify.

Such a call circulated will give a start which in the hands of a good holding committee will be made to go a step only toward securing the desired object. It is generally necessary to lend a few dollars' credit to finish the furnish, all of which can be paid off with concerts and entertainments of various kinds.

It will be found that in planning the rooms the children and ladies are provided for. This is to encourage the mothers to go to the grange. The children, woven into the business transactions, make the ideal combinement. Where the children are thus cared for the parents will become interested. GEORGE B. SHORTON.

Grange Literature.

The period peculiarly fitting good work for the grange these days. Not only are the campaign speeches showing much more than formerly to the granger, but the state grange organizations through the monthly lectures and secretaries are preparing and disseminating grange information by circulars, pamphlets and bulletins more cheap than ever. This is well. The older will feel the beneficial effects thereof in increased membership and in a better understanding of its principles and of what it is accomplishing for the farmers of the country. So far as our observation extends, the Michigan state grange leads in state organizations in the effective use of grange literature.

Co-operation Among Patrons.

It seems strange, says the Watertown Times, that more Patrons do not take advantage of their organization to purchase feed and other supplies on a cash basis and thus save a large margin from prices paid to retailers under the credit system. Responsible dealers are glad to make large discounts where cash and bills are taken and cash paid. To illustrate, some farmers not far from Watertown formed an association to buy together feed in car load lots. Two of the enterprising milling concerns in the city sent agents to the first meeting these farmers held and offered to furnish them with the best goods at feeding stuff at wholesale prices for cash, which in some cases amounted to $5, $4 and even $5 a ton saving to the retail price. Every grange can do the same thing if it will.

Winners in a Book Contest.

Worthy Master Horton of Michigan announced that the state grange would give to every subordinate grange in the state which received twenty or more new members during the quarter end ing June 30, 1903, a well finished business desk for the use of grange officers. Seventy granges are reported by State Secretary Jennie Buell as responsible in this contest. The total addition to membership in these granges is 1,091, an average of twenty-four.

Never let your zeal for business the overtaking the pride you have in the work of the grange. The grange is destined to play a greater part in the drama of internal affairs in the next ten years than ever before in its history.

THE GRANGE RITUAL.

Its Beautiful Teaching Inappreciated by Many Patrons.

The American Grange Bulletin touches upon a most important matter in the following article. It says: As members of the grange we frequently hear of the teachings of our ritual. What is the best thing in it? Perhaps answer without thinking. Perhaps not. Perhaps thinking. Perhaps you didn't know. Little about the ritual—and yet you are officers or master in the grange! And if you with your opportunities and responsibilities, must hesitate and confess to yourself that you know very little about the matter, how do you suppose your new members would be able to answer the question?

Here is a suggestion, not for this week or next, nor for a cultivation time this month or next, or some other month. That effort would be for a dozen members to select the best sentence from the ritual and be prepared to repeat it and give reasons for thinking it the best. Ask those three to recall the ritual for the purpose of listening, also to judge which of the three sentences is best. The decision may be based on the selection made on the selection and the evaluation, or on the appreciation alone.

The important thing is to get your members interested in searching for the choice things in the grange ritual. More—encourage them to think and thought will amount to little, but the thoughts on noble sentiments are worth the effort. Let the members feel that they should search and be prepared at the time. The joke is to lead with the idea of understanding the ritual. Let the order of the words will be good, in sides being an interesting exercise and a valuable discipline.

QUESTIONS ON RITUAL.

Certain Requirements For Properly Conferring the Degrees.

We have submitted the following questions to Bro. George H. Horton master of the Michigan state grange, who is an authority on the subjects, and the answers will doubtless be of general interest to our readers:

Q. Is there any explanatory work or lecture in connection with the conferring of the ceremony work in the order, and do you use and adhere the same if there be any? And some of us have held lectures upon the ritual, which is the work of the order, and do you use or adhere to the lecture and do you use it in your work in Michigan the field work in the first degree? A.—The simple degree work in the degree is not intended for a gentleman or lady to initiated single. The work is intended for a class of candidates. Lecture work is not in the degree work. The boy said he was taught the science of shoplifting by a man who called himself Professor Hayes. SCHOOL COM. COLUMN.

County Board of Examiners Class.

(a) The school year is divided into two semesters of at least four months each.

(b) New classes shall be organized only at the beginning of the year, but applicants may be admitted at the beginning of the second semester.

(c) At least four periods each day must be occupied with instruction in the subjects prescribed in the course of study.

(d) Adequate time should be given to practice teaching and to the observation of actual school work in rural schools and in the grades of graded schools.

(e) The superintendent of the school where the training class is established shall have immediate supervision over the work.

Qualifications of Admission.

(a) All applicants for admission must be at least seventeen years of age at the time of entrance.

(b) They must subscribe to a declaration that their object in asking admission is to prepare for teaching in the schools of the state.

(c) All applicants must possess a good moral character. Academic qualifications to enter training class are as follows:

Class Four Grade.

(a) Any person who is a graduate of a graded school having at least a course of ten grades in its curriculum.

(b) Any person who is a holder of at least a second grade certificate or is able to pass a second grade examination.

(c) Any person who has had two years of successful experience in teaching in the public schools.

We think the Superintendent of Public Instruction will modify the above Academic qualifications for our county. If not we do not need the training class. A teacher who has had two years successful experience is good enough for us. In order to hold a second grade certificate, it is necessary that the teacher has held a third and taught seven months.

What will the poor rural school do that must submit to seven months teaching with an inexperienced third grade teacher, before the said teacher can enter the training class?

We think the qualifications for admission to the class should be—proper age, good moral character, and ability to pass an examination for a third grade certificate.

We need the class for untrained and unsuccessful teachers.

The new revenue cutter Tuscarora, which is to replace the Morrill, is expected to arrive at Milwaukee in September. The Morrill and the Tuscarora will change cruises and the Morrill will be taken to Detroit.

The steamer Erie L. Hackley was disabled Tuesday by a cracked boiler off Sturgeon Bay. The tug Jo M. Field took her to Menominee with her passengers and freight, where repairs were made.

For the next month pea freights will cut a big figure with some of our locals boats. The Beaver has a months big business to that line from the Beavers and Cross Village, the Ithocaan has flies them on Pine Lake, and the Gordon on South Arm.

The N. M. Trans Co. probably has no idea of selling the steamer Charlevoix when the new boat comes out. The good old craft will be kept in the freight and passenger trade with all the big and little points along the route, and the two "big" boats will care for the quick summer trips, running the entire season of navigation, however. The phenomenal increase of freight trade, both ways, makes three boats necessary.

The Petoskey Breakwater.

Petoskey Daily News.

The harbor at Petoskey to be done next year through Lieut. Colonel M. H. Adams, engineer in charge of the rivers and harbors in Western Michigan, is an extension of the west breakwater.

The two detached breakwaters north of the west breakwater are to be removed and joined on the west breakwater. These north breakwater cribs are each 100 feet long, 26 feet wide and 20½ feet high, and a continuous superstructure 1 foot high, the cribs resting upon a stone foundation. The top of the superstructure is about 1 foot above the level of zero of gauge. This zero of gauge is the mean lake level for the period 1860 to 1879 being 581.5 feet above the mean tide at New York.

The further extension of the west breakwater calls for a new crib 100 feet long by 30 feet wide, 22½ feet high, on a stone foundation, and completed with a new superstructure over the new and the two old cribs as removed.

The timber and material under that head required will be about 1200 feet board measure, 100 kegs of spikes, about 1,525 cords.

The work will be commenced in the construction season of June before May 15, 1904, and is to be completed before November 1st, 1904, and will be carried on under the direction of the U. S. engineer of this district, and an inspector from the office.

The contract price is in the neighborhood of $10,000, and will be done by the firm of A. J. Isaacson & Co., Chicago or some other big pirate of bidders. These contractors are now doing the government pier work at Charlevoix. An enlargement of the breakwater extension at Petoskey was made with them in July last.

In addition to the extension of the breakwater, the break in the west wall of the adjacent out work 90 or 40 feet from the north ends will be repaired by the contractors.

These improvements have been needed for a long time and will give greater safety and advantage to our growing maritime and shipping interests. It is a work in which Petoskey citizens can not take too much interest.

DEATH FROM SNEEZE.

ONE MAN KILLED IN ST. PAUL STREET BRAWL.

Tenabe Began When Otto Schwarz Sneezed and Lutterer's Bearer Taunts with Name of Sneeze Made Home Crowd in Pittsburg Fire.

NEW KENSINGTON, Pa., Dec. 2.—Jacob Lutterer, of this place, was killed in St. Paul Street, Vandergrift, and Otto Schwarz, of Leechburg, and Otto Nuttall were arrested on the charge of a Deputy Coroner jury and Henry Kendall were charged with the assault upon Lutterer. The trouble proved a sneeze, which caused a quarrel between the two men, and the latter was knocked down and struck on the head by Lutterer, who was carrying a cane. Lutterer was then struck on the head with a brick by Nuttall and Kendall and with a club by Schwarz. Lutterer died in the street with a crowd of people looking on.

Lutterer's bearer, Tenabe, taunted the crowd with the name Sneeze, which caused a fight. The crowd then set fire to the house in which Lutterer lived, and the place was burned to the ground. The house was owned by Lutterer's father-in-law, Jacob Sneeze, who was in the house when the fire started. The place was crowded with people, and it was with difficulty that the women and children were rescued. The

IS IT AN AGREEMENT?

THE PROTECTIVE TARIFF CONSIDERED AS A CONTRACT.

Have Not the Government and the People Entered Into a Covenant That All Labor and Industry Shall Enjoy the Benefits of Protection?

While satisfaction the Advertiser-Herald observes the attention bestowed by the New York Tribune of July 29 to the suggestion that nations taking action on the pending tariff reciprocity treaty Congress will be used to carefully consider and discuss with weight certain important arguments against the constitutionality of that action. The Tribune had evidently let itself to the opinion that there was nothing to consider in the case, thinking that the case was all settled and the agitation accordingly to start also temporarily whose minds take on time at all. It seems from our contemporary that there was the plain phase of the question worthy of at least thoughtful thought for a reading constitutional lawyer of sound judicial bias, and that the Tribune had not gone to the trouble of reading home with the position of our contemporary. The Tribune, to be sure, is inclined to a Republican bias and especially democratic, but it is hardly that it should be treated in this way than that it treated at all. Among the points made against the treaties in question in action in Congress is the extra session to be called upon to the first extraordinary session of the Congress which will be following.

Could it not involve the violation of the government of a covenant made long with certain protective interests of the United States—namely, the existing tariff law?

This suggestion, as it seems to us, has weight and forward consideration as an assertion of law or fact, but with a view to drawing attention to the question of some obligation on the part of the over government towards the people of the United States in the matter of the tariff which the government owes to those of our own citizens who at some cost, right or wrong, have made the protective tariff law, the Tribune's view of the matter is that the tariff is a contract between the government and the people. The Tribune's view is that the tariff is a contract, and that the government owes to the people of the United States the same obligation of adherence to the tariff law that it owes to any other contract. MARRIAGE IN RUSSIA

The Splendor Displayed at Prince Galitzine's Wedding.

As a daughter of the Russian nobility is married the bridal party of her parents, the relatives of her father and mother, and the bridal party of her father and mother, with the exception of the bridegroom, go to the church, where the Archbishop of Moscow, in the presence of the bridal party, ties the knot. The ceremony is performed by the priest, who, standing in the Royal gates, blesses the assembled company, and then, turning to the bridal party, he joins the hands of the bride and her husband. As the Russian priests are married, some one may be selected to officiate in Father Ivan's stead. The bridal party then proceeds to the altar, where the priest takes the hand of the bride and her husband, and, placing them together, he moves them three times around the altar, while the choir sings the Alleluia, and the congregation, standing, bows in reverence. The priest then places the crowns on the heads of the bridal party, and, taking the cup of wine, he gives it to the bridegroom, who drinks it, and then he gives it to the bride, who also drinks it, and then the priest, taking the hand of the bridegroom, leads him three times around the altar, followed by the bride, who is led by her husband. The crowns are then taken off, and the priest, taking the cup of wine, drinks it, and then

A Island Outing.

Three September days, when it don't rain on Beaver Island,—three days with the evergreens all about you, and the water beyond on every hand; three days with a hammerless trench-hatch, out in the old Mormon fields, and through the well trodden cattle paths, along the beach and through the woods, are three days of rest for the office weary laborer, and the writer of this had them last week.

In the way over, sitting on the deck of the steamer Deetacy, we met an old acquaintance, who for twelve years has come up from Illinois to round his vacation on Beaver Island. Twelve summers he has laboured among the woodsmen, geologized in the fields, and mastermind with the inexplicable people.

"Do you think Ben Isaac's dying the pioneer of Beaver Island for thirty-five years," we remarked.

"Yes," he replied, "and I am sorry for it."

"Why?"

"Because you have been an honest chap. You have helped to destroy the good old Scotch Island, with its lingering memories and old ways, its idea of primitive nature-teaching and its freedom from the taint of modern improvements. You have helped to drive out the old and bring in the new."

"But this cannot be, as matter of commerce," we ventured.

"Yes, but I do not come here for business. I come to escape it. Was the trank night of our friend.

"Were we wrong, but he was sensible enough to acknowledge that from other standpoints. And he said nothing we says, threw up against an older lesson. With Captain Douglas we rode out each other along the right of way of the new national taking back through the heart of the Island by the Beaver Island railroad, and we saw, which north of the river is already land. If you were not expecting a vision, what would you think if you were riding out from St. James, where King Strang once held sway, to come suddenly upon a locomotive on a side track with "Pere Marquette" painted in big letters on the cab? Yet this is the vision that met us before as we came around a curve in the road, and it was a reality. And then we thought of what our vision friend had said the day before. It was truly the beginning of a transformation from the old to the new order of things.

Our through the old Mormon clearings winds the "iron sinews of commerce," along past the beautiful river green gulfs that hide the trout, along past our pass, on to the western beach and there with a plunge into the interior again and on again, around the "King's Highway" where strang built more than fifty years ago. We pass the construction gangs, and they are tamping the dirt under the iron just, for the world, as they do on the main road. We hear the ring of the spike-maul and the clank of the rails as they are carried to the "front." And all this on Beaver Island!

Is it any wonder that the lover of nature should wail as the Jews wail at the walls of Jerusalem?

Next summer, when our friend comes up from Illinois with his mile-sounge and his geologist's hammer, he will hear the clang of the locomotive bell and the scream of the whistle at the crossings. He will see big trains coming in from the shores of Lake Huron's marvel, and cedar ties from the forests about Mount Pleasant.

Fellow-citizens, we tell you these new lessons scattered about than he ever saw before, and from the national clack he will see a fine new school building with a score, and modern appointments and equipment.

EDITOR SENTINEL:

Since the bitter attack upon John D. Rockefeller last January, by the Rev. Henry Frank, of New York City, in an open letter to Mr. Rockefeller's son, it has become popular for every little student of a sanitary or professor, who wants to gain notoriety to attack Mr. Rockefeller, and the last to attack him is that notorious old Hoodlum fanatic and tight Tabbit, who is not really worthy to buckle the shoes of Mr. Rockefellers shoes.

Now, Mr. Editor, I believe and know that John D. Rockefeller is the greatest public benefactor in the United States, and my reasons for making that claim is this I lived at Mackinac Island where kerosene oil was once sole use for lighting purposes and pine pitr gallon was very high, and I myself have paid as high as one dollar and twenty five cents a gallon for kerosene oil at Mackinac, and the oil business of the country was in the hands of a great many operators at the time, for the pressure overflowed high until John D. Rockefeller took hold of the oil industries of the country, and from that time on the price began to go down until you could buy kerosene at retail for ten cents per gallon, and that is not a high price for that commodity. I claim that the man, through whose great ability as a manager of the oil industries of the United States has brought the price of oil down from one dollar and twenty five cents to ten cents per gallon deserves praise instead blame from every good citizen of this great country.

Yours,

LUTHER McCANN.

SCHOOL NOTES.

The High school enrollment has passed the one hundred mark.

The complete school census shows a slightly larger school population than last year.

Dr. Hynes, who has been kindly assisting in the school for the last five days in our Local History classes has been relieved by a more complete organization of the work.

In order to relieve a crowded room in Miss Mellar's room, her third grade in the Central building has been transferred to Miss Stone's.

The crowded condition in Miss Gurney's room at the Lincoln school, is to be relieved by letting the twelfth grade classes attended but one half day.

The foot-ball team are engaged in practice on the school yard opportunity with the intention of holding their leading position in the north Traverse region.

The New Commercial Course continue to grow in interest and profit. Arrangement are to be made as soon as possible for a type writing machine.

There are prospects that state supt. Fall, will soon visit our schools preparatory to inaugurating the County Normal Training class. Hon. H. H. Fallsgiff is also expected to attend the meeting of the north Traverse Teacher's Assn. here early in October.

Tragedy Averted.

"Just in the nick of time our little boy was saved" writes Mrs W. Watson of Pleasant Gap, Penn. "Croup minis had played sad havoc with him and a terrible attack set in besides. Bloodroot treated him, but he grew worse every day. At length we tried Dr. King's New Discovery for consumption, and at the first dose he was passed. He's now sound, and well." Everybody ought to know it's the only sure cure for Coughs, Colds and all Lung diseases. Guaranteed by F. H. Hines & Co. druggist. Price 50c. and $1.00. Trial bottles free.

CONGREGATIONAL CHURCH.

Rev. James Hyslop, Ph.D., Pastor.

The social meeting last Sunday evening was generally spoken of as an interesting service and more are called for. The regional committee reported great encouragement both in the town of material personal assistance and looking of money. It is more than evident that a very large and representative part of the population of our village is earnestly intent on the best and easiest way in which our village is coming at present.

Next Sunday will be observed as the 21st Anniversary of the church instead Thanksgiving offerings will be made for Home Missions. Special music, hymn and Scriptural instructions will be I greatly in the pleasure of the occasion.

In the evening, the pastor will speak about his Sunrise-Sunset vision of the need, development and success of Home Missions in Michigan. The services should be with by all.

On Monday evening the Pastor and his wife and the deacons and deaconesses will give a Reception to the members of the church and others. All these services ought to be largely attended

NORTHERN MICHIGAN.

Lake Jordan Enterprise. Jos. Maddock left Wednesday afternoon for Chicago, where he goes to join the squad of athletes belonging to the First Reg. Athletic Association of Chicago, and will take part in the "Marathon" at Milwaukee where he will run against the best men in the West—not a large class of good men from the East.

A news report says: There will be more deer this fall in the northern Michigan cutover lands than there has been any similar season, in perhaps the last 25 years. This does not necessarily mean that the number of deer in this part of the state is greater, for the area of deer country has decreased in proportion to the increase and improvement of the farms of the state, and in the country where deer have lived in late years their numbers have actually multiplied. This is the testimony of northern Michigan railroads, hotels and others who are informed on the subject. The reasons for this are various. One important reason is the fact that the timber lands are slashed over in the great cutover or logged for lumber and no shelter that is necessary for the safety of the deer has been largely removed, the animals have been hunted and killed by every way and means known to hunters, and in late years there is another rapidly increased. In the last few years however, these cutover timber lands of "slashings" as they are called, have become overgrown in time with underbrush, foliage and briars, and they now offer very good protection for the animals. The necessity of underbrush for the safety of deer is well understood by hunters and all who are familiar with the life and habits of Michigan's big game.

More Birds.

Hundreds of birds of time our little boy was saved" writes Mrs W. Watson of Pleasant Gap, Penn. "Pneumonia had played sad havoc with him and a terrible attack set in besides. Bloodroot treated him, but he grew worse every day. At length we tried Dr. King's New Discovery for consumption, and at the first dose he was passed. He's now sound, and well." Everybody ought to know it's the only sure cure for Coughs, Colds and all Lung diseases. Guaranteed by F. H. Hines & Co. druggist. Price 50c. and $1.00. Trial bottles free.

IDEAL CHIEF OF DEMOCRACY.

Czarina of Russia Has Good Opinion of French President.

"M. Loubet," the czarina of Russia said some time ago, "is just the ideal chief of a democracy which I pictured to myself when as a young girl I studied ancient and modern history. He is not a man of kindness, he would be no more content with a throne than with a cockade. He would be no more at home in the palaces of Versailles than in the Tuileries. Not that these hands of fact the man, but he is most jealous of the dignity of his high office. This character of a personal pride makes him a marked contrast to his predecessor, President Fallieres, who was laughingly nicknamed "Emperor Felix" by the people of the Boulevards.

Peddler and the Quaker.

Captain Burr of the Sixteenth was talking about Mr. Thomas Dennis. He is a fine example of good will and a great story teller. Quaker Burr.

"I remember one of his stories about a Quaker meeting. It seems that while that meeting was in session a clock peddler entered with his wares. The Quakers saw at once he is a sinner, and as the day was warm, with his permission.

"While he was in one of the Quaker houses he was asleep. Once, it struck, twice, four, five, six times and then twelve times, and everybody for some reason, lost his place in the meeting. The clocks must have been very loud, for it woke the peddler, who, as he was tired, had slept for two hours. Just as it was controlling the peddler woke up.

"A stately old Quaker in a gray coat, turned to him and said, smiling pleasantly:

"'Friend, as it is so late, don't you think that that last stroke was the proceeding on Sly way?'—Boston Post.

Decline of the Preacher.

The ministry seems to be losing its attractions for young men. The pay of clergymen is lower than it once was though in many instances it is fairly small yet. The churches are fewer, but comparatively fewer people attend them. The simple days of old, childlike faith and primitive ideas have passed. The puritan period has vanished. Whether it be science or commercialism or liberalism or education or the free exercise of thought, any of these or all of them that have influences religious thought and conduct, there has been a change within the church and without—Nashville American.

A Gentle Hint.

"I trust, Mr. Brown," said a Germantown parent not in the young man who was about to depart, "that you will spend one more evening with us before we move into our new home."

"Delighted, I assure you," replied the young man, beaming with satisfaction. "By the way, when do you expect to move?" "I am expective as to the exact date," she answered, "but the workmen have promised to be in readiness for us on Thursday, and we expect, if the work is done as without disappointment, to be able to move in about eleven months."—Philadelphia Ledger.

—We recently had something to say about dryness and automobiles. Apropos of the subject, we say, that the deputies the following about automobiles over at Kewadin, Wm. Cleveland will explain, the Kewadin Pleasure Parties have organized to prevent automobiles from scorching over the grounds of the company. The company are determined to put an end to the frightening of their horses, and say they will sell platforms and rides to their present customers, if it be found necessary. A number of minor accidents caused where horses became frightened at flying "devil wagons" warned the farmers. They became incensed over a recent accident when, if I said, a woman and two children were injured by being thrown from a buggy as the result of a runaway horse, caused by a speeding chauffeur. Mild requests of the drivers of the machines, the drivers say, have had no effect in decreasing their speed, and now the thoroughly aroused farmers say they will shoot little full of holes if the accidents fail to stock up on requests.

Paving Matters.

The paving contractors are on the ground. And are getting ready for active work. The powerfull stone crusher and engine are being set up. The Wood feed, and other appliances are being hauled to the place. Three hundred barrels of tar are piled up on the premises.

Mr. Cramond, the superintendant, has a large force of men at work already, in preliminary work. Excavation will begin next week, and in about ten days the material will begin to arrive on the street.

Contractor Howland has the curb and gutter completed from Antrim street to Clinton, and has begun the stretch between that and the bridge.

The city has a force of men engaged in building the concrete abutment at the bridge approach.

By October first we may begin to smell tar and begin to see the old street transformed into the new.

SCHOOL NOTES.

Our High school enrollment has reached 106.

A high school class in spelling will soon be organized for the benefit of those who have a weakness in this line. Occasional spelling matches will be a feature of the plan.

Whoever knows of a good place for a good high school boy to work for his board, is requested to communicate with Mr. Howe by phone or postal card. The lady who asked for a girl to work for board is requested to give her name and address again.

The grades from 1 to 4 are preparing specimens of their ordinary writing for the superintendent's examination. The results will be compared with similar work in the higher grades will be used as a basis for the general plan of writing instruction this year.

The Charlevoix High School football team won an easy victory over the Petoskey team on Saturday afternoon. Scores almost impossible to have a game without some "big chewing." It is this feature and the lack of controlling temper under provocation that tend to make foot ball disreputable. The wholesome rule of referee reinstated because one or two are tired and loudmouthed.

A blank form furnished by the state board of examiners, to be used for recitations, is a great help to teachers. Unless a student has extraordinary excuse he should be prepare for four recitations of 40 minutes each without a considerable amount of home study. No student should expect to do good high school work and be graduated from a course, leading to the university or college without studying at home. A school program of seven recitation periods leaves only three at the most for study, and each study should have more than five preparation than for recitation. In order that parents may know whether their children are doing enough study, all are cordially invited to visit the recitations at any time.

Annual Meeting.

The annual meeting of the Charlevoix Dairyman Society will be held at the residence of Hon. A. Butters on Tuesday evening oct 7th, next for the election of officers for the ensuing year and the transaction of such other business as may come before it. A full attendance is desired.

Author of "A Waif from the Sea," "Her Highest Hope," "Wayward Winnifred," etc.

In the business of the summer with Alice, he had good, she reasoned, material for home-thoughts between times, and she was glad to let him dwell upon them, for Jessie's confidence.

"Mine, by-the-bye, don't concerns the old man formally—New Jersey, you understand—but I've got a little business down there, and I'm off in a week. Mr. Carnston, I've never a stronger excuse, and a reasonable one, I'm sure, for leaving Alice. A generous, good-hearted fellow, I know, you are, and I'm sure you will be glad to know that I have a stronger excuse for leaving Alice than—well, than I have for leaving you."

"Why do you mention me, Edward, as if I had anything to do with your danger?"

"My dear, nothing; but Sunday, time and tide wait for no man, you know, and I wanted to give the last thing I wanted to do in your company, Jessie."

"Why, Edward, what can you mean?"

"Mean? Why, Jessie, I love you."

"Hush! hush! Edward, you must not—I forbid you to speak so."

"Forbid me! Why, Jessie, I love you—I love you! Jessie, I love you! Jessie, I love you! Jessie,

THE GREAT PLAGUES

REMINDERS OF THE DAYS OF EPIDEMICS

How the Mysterious Visitations of Them in the Middle Ages Combated the Evils of the Times—Plague Houses.

The story of the great plagues of London is peculiar to all branches of history and has long dealt with its own subject of horror.

From the crypts of History comes such suggestive matter, while plague was in every sense a visitation, coming as it did, from the unseen in of Heaven.

Then the example was less common than the plague visitations of St. Mary le Strand, London.

[illegible]

The disease were about a week in length. The course ceased as a rule from sudden exhausting death.

In various parts of England the plague stones are dead reminders of the time when epidemics had low as many inhabitants took in town and country.

A stone in the Isle of Albuquerque bears the following inscription:

Hingham Cross or Market Stone.—The stone is placed upon the ancient cross at the upper end of Friar Gate, and was used by the inhabitants of Derby as a market stone during the continuance of the plague, 1665. It is described by Hutton in his history of Derby.

Tetbury Lady was again visited by the plague at the eagle inn in which London inn quite one seventy years. The inns was forsaken, the Templars hoisted the market place, and from service upon the roof, which had for ended the property of.

To prevent a fire, the inhabitants chained to the roof of Stone Cross, a cage in which the inhabitants who were sick, which what time the poor used to place alms, consisting of wheat, vinegar, quicksilver, etc. See Sigt. I know it is perfumes.

Under the market people varied their much frequented with holiday conservative thought their government. Good at a distance from their property, and as a greater form the town's people with whom they were to trail.

The vapor was air suffered to linger any of the plague houses, whose where the astronomer was fatigued he tell the time of the disease the money is a vacant good, with cage are, are for the plague.

The mention of tobacco in the London inventories is a curiosity, from the idea that the weed was then taken as a very efficacious preventative.

Wonderful infirmity mixed from the plague in 1665 in the town of Bury St. Edmunds, Suffolk, the mortality was aggregate $47,312,825.

PUFFED WITH PAVEMENT.

Warren Brothers Company Joke of Tough Otter.

Everybody Satisfied With The Situation.

From the Petoskey Chronicle.

Pontiac's new pavement on Huron street is finished and to the delight of all the town thoroughfare to the State Fair grounds has been made smooth and slightly under the hands of the Warren Brothers company, whose Bitulithic pavement has proven to be a distinction to all the citizens of this city.

Pontiac has streets paved with block pavement and Nebonaw like brick but whatever the merits of these pavements may be, there never has been a time but some dissenting voice was to be heard as to their probable wearing qualities, beginning with the Bitulithic pavement however, there seems to be not a prejudiced opinion of future and there is a refreshing silence upon the part of the usually critical ones, so everybody is pleased.

This may be accounted for by the fact that the superintendent is apparently completely to the common sense of every one and make at it that carping criticism is silenced. We have long wanted for a sensible pavement, and in the Bitulithic pavement we have it. The big rollers and other machines used by the Warren Brothers Company in laying the pavement have been moved from the way, the street has been opened and in a remarkably short space of time it has been transformed from a muddy, unsightly road to a Boulevard over which traffic is now passing and pleasure riders are enjoying.

Experts and municipal engineers who have been here to examine the material and the method of laying the pavement are fond in their praise of its various merits.

The roadway was excavated to a depth of six inches below the surface of the concrete pavement and thoroughly rolled with a massive 12 ton roller until the surface of the subgrade was pressed solid. Then came the foundation proper which is always six hard crushed stone four inches in depth after it has been compressed by the same mentioned roller. Following this come what is known as the binding coat of bituminous semi-liquid composition. Puritan brand, which with the stone forms a Bituminous concrete.

The next process in the laying of this pavement is placing the wearing surface which consists of carefully selected hard crushed stone, rolled in to give from one and one half inches in diameter to a powder mixed with a small portion of sand to fill the voids in the stone and containing all sizes and grades so that the mineral aggregate contains the least possible amount of voids. The proportions are determined by special laboratory examinations of the ingredients used, and is properly and mechanically mixed with the especially prepared Bitumitous cement made by the Warren Brothers Company by their especial formula. This reaches the street hot, in land carriers from their plant after which it is compressed to a thickness of two inches by heavy steam roller.

After the rolling on the wearing surface there is spread over it a thin coating of Warren's page drying Bitumitous Bulk coat composition. The purpose of this coat is to seal up all of any unevenness which may be on the surface of the coarser mixture. One said it then worked into the surface until all surplus than coat composition has been taken up by it. After all surplus sand is removed there is rolled into the surface a thin layer of coarse sand or stone chips, for the purpose of giving a gritty surface, which is not to the least slippery and and at the same time presents a very pleasing appearance.

Such a pavement the Warren Brother Company promised to lay on Huron street and it would only be getting to say that the promise was fulfilled to the letter. The men who had charge of the work here were so pleasing in their conduct that efforts Mr. Wright is vice president of the Warren Brothers Company and his superintendent in the paving here is A. W. Lindsay who so gratified those who wanted to see the pavement finished before the State Fair by rushing the work. John H. Cramond is assistant superintendent, Paul E. Miller, Cashier; L. L. Upton, chief foreman and Frank Bowdlemear, surface foreman.

The development of a large paving industry under the name of the Warren Brothers Company is one the first patent was issued has been so successful. It has been successful only because all the details were worked out by experts. Experts from their laboratory work at Cambridge Mass. with which all materials are examined and tested from the time they are first ordered until they are put in the finished pavement. The laboratory is located at Cambridge, Mass. The principal office in Michigan is in the Majestic Building at Detroit.

Pontiac is considering other pavements—Jackson street, Patterson and Oakland avenues may be improved in the near future, and it is strongly urged by some as one of the Warren Brothers Company to hold their plant here in anticipation of paving contracts on these streets in case the council decides to make the proposed improvements. Surely, judging from the sentiments expressed by the citizens concerning the pavement, the Bitumitous company are justified in holding this belief here as well as their plant of course such a pavement would necessarily have to be called for on the streets laid in the Bitulithic suits all the prospects look good for the men who make it.

CONGREGATIONAL CHURCH.

Rev. Jarius Hyslop, Ph. D., Pastor.

Sunday was observed as the twenty-first anniversary of the church with Harvest Thanksgiving services and offering was taken up for home mission.

The church was beautifully decorated with flowers and fruits. The morning service was very sweet and appropriate music. The pastor preached in the morning on "The Divine Testimony of a good Harvest," and in the evening on "The Abundant Harvest but the shortage of Harvesters," and illustrated the topic with the use of nearly 3 stereopticon views of the fields and development of home missions in Michigan. The views were received last year by Dr. W. H. Warren at Lansing. The large audience were well pleased with the services.

"THE MISSOURI"

This Will be the Name of the Northern Michigan Line Steamer.

Among the star passengers on the Illinois from Chicago Tuesday was General Passenger Agent, H. C. Carter. Mr. Carter informed the Sentinel, officially, that the name of the new steamship to come on next spring, will be "Missouri."

A large percentage of passengers carried by this popular line are Chicago and St. Louis people. The "Missouri" was named in honor of the state of which Chicago is the second seat. And now the St. Louis people are to be honored by having the new and christened in honor of their great state.

The name is an eminently proper and appropriate one and a fine St. Louis girl, many of whom summer in Charlevoix, should be selected to break the bottle on her stem.

FAULTS DUE TO MAN

WHY THE PIG IS DIRTY AND THE BEAR CROSS.

In a Wild State the Former Is a Mode of Cleanliness and the Latter a Good-Tempered and Kindly Animal.

Human is the pig by nature more than the pig's, with his cleanly habits in spite of pressure to expose his feelings and show a true, frank face, is the number than not some that he is fortunately misunderstood animal probably both in consequence. In fact, pig is a very well pig if pig is left to himself to be changed to be dirty as a person who keeps a dirty pig; made the bad and friends.

No animal is cleanlier than the wild pig. On some farms kept in clean healthy herds you find never sign of dirt. In fact, pig is not long enough the cleanest philosophers, philosophical herds of pig, cleanliness is within pigs. In good-sized farm, pig herd will go in the grass and lying down to lie in their own dung. Let the pig with one side grass, pigs pasture and other side water, pig will go to the water to wash himself. In the wild state, pig is not dirty, but clean, and friends.

Cost of Feeding Stockyards.

So much of the cost of a modern stockyard plant is for the purpose of keeping the animals from being injured while in the yards. Thousands of dollars are spent in building runways, chutes, and pens so that the cattle may be driven from the cars to the slaughter pens without being bruised or injured in any way. Hundreds of men are employed in the yards, and the expense of keeping them in good humor is considerable. The yards are so well managed that the employes seldom have occasion to use sticks or clubs, and the cattle are driven along quietly and without any unnecessary noise. Young men from colleges of the Southwest have been employed every year for the yards, and they have found it a good place to learn the business and to become acquainted with the people with whom they will have to deal in after life. Some of the best men in the country are now in the yards, having begun at the bottom of the ladder. Some have gone into other business, and others have become partners in the firms that they started in as employes. Some have gone into the business on their own account, and have become successful. It is some good thing for a young man to be able to say that he started in the stockyards.

Fresh, as She Is Understood.

Miss Maude Adams, on the Denver, Jan. 1, in her dressing room, received a telegram from Boston addressed simply to Frohman, which had evidently been put in the telegraph office with an ambiguous address. Unscathed of a dollar she was handed.

Mr. Frohman is somewhat certain that Miss Adams is not in the habit of giving away her telegrams, but, at Miss Maude's request, he opened the telegram himself and discovered that it was a telegram addressed to a doll at Hudson's office. When the war was ended, the phone message arrived, which broke the man so much surprised as the Amerikman in Paris who was asked if he would have his cigar in the city. He answered:

"Nay, a la fin of course."

CORN USED AS FUEL

MAKES ACCEPTABLE SUBSTITUTE FOR COAL.

Result of Tests Made by the Department of Agriculture of the University of Nebraska—Is Cheap and Economical.

Substitutes for coal have for many years occupied attention and made some headway in finding the right or the benefit of the United States when coal prices were at abnormal figures as a result of the strikes, Canada coal, coal and bituminous coal, and coal and many other substitutes have been used, and in many cases, with good results. Corn has spoken of as a good fuel, and in the Dakotas it is used in the grate and fire to keep in heat comfort.

In the tests made with corn some years ago, the results were not so satisfactory as the results of the Nebraska tests, which have been made in the Department of Agriculture of the University of Nebraska. Mr. Wolfe, the physicist, has made some tests, and the results are very satisfactory. The corn used in the tests was the ordinary corn, and the results were very satisfactory. The corn used in the tests was the ordinary corn, and the results were very satisfactory. The corn used in the tests was the ordinary corn, and the results were very satisfactory.

How Smart Midge Made Her Mother Out of Danger.

On board a vessel was bound to San Francisco from China was a little Chinese girl, who was taken to Washington. Her mother was sick, and had to be left behind. The girl was alone for a few days. The mate, who was in charge of the vessel, was a very good man, and he took care of the little girl. The girl was very bright and smart, and she was a great favorite with the crew. One day the mate said to her, "Midge, your mother is very sick, and we have left her behind. We are going to San Francisco, and we will take you to your mother." The girl was very glad to hear this, and she said, "Mate, you are very good to me." The mate said, "Midge, you are very good to me." The girl

CHAPTER XXI.

Naturally, a good deal was talked by way of explanation of the sudden and very unusual manner in which the Hall was left in charge of a caretaker, and the Rev. Mr. Hastings, who was the only person who could give the information would somehow or other be drawn into being the chief mouthpiece of the gossiping tongues. Perhaps the most interesting of a number of conjectures was that Mr. Hastings had been brought down suddenly by Maurice Hope in consequence of his (Maurice's) wish to marry Miss Hastings, and that the latter had not yielding to the importunities of her lover, had taken this means of getting out of his way, and insisted her pale little mother should accompany her.

In an instant Sylvester Hope had taken upon himself the duties of a Mentor, and then she saw a quietness arise.

Meanwhile, Maurice Hope was with the utmost diligence, and as he was a man of great influence, and could, the gossiping people said, "do anything he liked," the work was carried on night and day, and the workmen from the neighbouring towns were brought down to help the local ones, and in a few days the place was in a state to receive the owner.

Of course, the neighbourhood was ablaze with the news, and the gossiping tongues were busy with it, and Mrs. Hope, who was the only person who could have given the right information, was not to be found.

Maurice Hope was not to be found either, and the Rev. Mr. Hastings was not to be found, and the gossiping tongues had to be satisfied with the information that they had left the place together.

Of course, the gossiping tongues were busy with this, and it was generally supposed that Mr. Hastings was the person who had taken the place for the young man, and that he was to be married to Miss Hope, and that the young lady was ashamed of her mother, and had taken her away to be married, and that Mr. Hastings was to be married to her, and that Mr. Hope was to be married to Miss Hastings, and that Sylvester was to be married to Miss Hope, and that Mrs. Hope was to be married to Mr. Hastings, and that everybody was to be married to everybody else, and that it was a very pretty arrangement, and that it was a very shocking one, and that it was a very disgraceful one, and that it was a very proper one, and that it was a very improper one, and that it was a very delightful one, and that it was a very dreadful one, and that it was a very—anything—because one never knew what they were talking about.

I have nothing to do with the gossip of the place, and I shall not repeat it. I have to do with what I saw and heard myself, and what I saw and heard myself was that Sylvester Hope was a changed man, and that he was a very, very, very,

NORTHERN MICHIGAN

Wm H. Wright, a Pere Marquette fireman, ran run over and killed by an express train in the yards at Traverse City last Thursday night.

While three farmers were at the street fair in Grand Lake, their horses were stolen. Forty dollars in old coins was taken from the house of O. N. Sage while the others had only some small change.

At the State Fair at Pontiac the fruit exhibit from Charlevoix took first position for the group of seven, of which this forms a part. Our fruit was equal or superior to others, but the cabinet of Oakland county had more, bigger and better apples than the part with the judges as to the whole state.

To those who annually enjoy the season at evening three islands, and who take the price thereof now comprise the opportunity. In Long Lake, near Traverse City, are three islands. Round, long and Pin, containing in the aggregate 31 acres. These islands are still government property, but will be disposed of by the land office at Kalamazoo October 31. The islands are reported to be valuable, and are being sought after by Chicago people for the purpose of making summer resorts.

Suit has been brought against the Hallman & Shaw company, located at Grand Rapids, by John Dallaway of Boyne Falls, for $15000 damages, which he alleges he sustained in a business transaction with the company. Dallaway claims that he purchased some timber and also leased a mill and boarding house of the firm and that before the lease had expired the company sold the mill, upon which he had expended $700 in repairs, and he was compelled to build a new one in the vicinity of the land of the timber which he had purchased.

Boyne Citizen: The Boyne furnace is still in abeyance, pending the placing of the $15,000 worth of bonds here. The people are not lacking in good will to see the spring when they should. They make an about investment at 6 per cent, backed as they are by a first mortgage on the charcoal plant, and thereon double security, inasmuch as the importance that the blast furnace will be to city away from us by reason of a lack of interest on the part of those perfectly able to subscribe for the bonds. If it were a matter the projection ask, it would be a different matter, but all they want is a loan at a good rate of interest.

East Jordan Inter-Lake: Last week Wednesday and Thursday Wm. Harrington, J. W. Rogers, Edwin Wells, A. M. Dorcas and Dwight Attendant the Grand Traverse soldiers' and sailors' Association at Elk Lake. They report a good time, if it did rain all the time, and there was a good attendance. At the business meeting Geo Jordan was chosen as the next place to hold the next association in 1903. J. W. Rogers was elected Commander Wm. Harrington Adjutant, Thomas Vice commander Wm. Smith of Traverse City, and Jos. Van James Harriet of Kalkaska, meeting adjourned to meet in East Jordan July 4th. Elk Lake entertained the old boys admirably. The Grand Traverse Soldiers and Sailors Association is made up of members of Antrim, Wexford, Missaukee, Benzie, Grand Traverse, Leelanau, Kalkaska, Antrim, Emmet and Charlevoix and the old boys—the few remain men who are left will be warmly welcomed to East Jordan next year.

Traverse City Eagle: Herbert F. Stafford of Cadillac, deputy game warden, is said to be obliged to bear the brunt of going to prison under the conviction by the Benzie county jury in saving Chris McLeod last spring. Governor Bliss decided at a conference held in Grand Rapids Saturday afternoon to issue a pardon before Judge Chittenden should pass sentence on the convicted man. A parallel case of pardoning was Governor Bliss's action in granting a pardon to Deputy Game Warden Brewster who was convicted of participation in the military frauds. The Grand Rapids conference was attended by State Game Warden Chapman, Deputy Attorney General Harry B. Crane, Benzie Attorney George H. Orrell, Mayor C. C. Dunham of Cadillac, Deputy Game Warden Brewster and Prosecuting Attorney M. M. Lee of Benzie county. It is claimed by those interested in the freeing of Stafford that he shot in self-defense and that it was impossible to secure a fair trial for him owing to the widespread prejudice existing in the northern counties against the game warden's department. In attempting to arrest McLeod, a secrete occurred between the deputy game warden and the former. The jury accepted one version of the story that McLeod was shot when he was coming along and defense claim that the shot was fired to prevent McLeod running his team through the others.

Juvenile Journalism.

For the personification of conceited and altogether asinine journalism we point the public to the Petoskey Evening News.

[illegible] about the Northern Michigan. Self-esteem, we feel sure, is quite in place in the school publication of the News and now comes another signal from the same shy concerning the sum and fortune of the Petoskey fire bell issue.

It is certainly interesting gentlemen to say profession to write as the editor of the News writes concerning this event, and we shall not reply in kind, because an editor who will descend to the level of a snarling, disappointed boy is an small game to the Sentinel. Prof Howe, superintendent of the Charlevoix schools, is a very excellent, conservative letter to the News says:

"Your article on the fire bell game last Saturday has been called to my attention. I do not believe it "matters little point" of contention if possible to engage in controversy, but as my attention or disapproval of questionable methods used at the game seems to be called for from a community to which my school has been very kind, I feel obliged to express my opinion on the subject.

"I am decidedly in favor of clean athletics and opposed to everything of a sectarian nature. Probably high school boys know that I have always objected to the roughness and cowardly [illegible] that seem often to be encouraged by foot ball practice. I am decided in favor of having control of high school athletics. So much for attitude I have for the last as I understand them.

"An accident prevented my being on the ground at the beginning of the game. Had I been, and had the question of Burke's eligibility depended on my decision, I should have been in quite a fix. I am not clearly on the ground that Charlevoix did not need a good whole right to play was seriously questioned. Just before I arrived the judge to whom question had been referred, as I understand it, to the manager of the Petoskey Sports team, for the decision. I think he decision should be satisfactory to all parties.

"As to Lewis and small, I must admit that I was not aware that any game had been let by their departure to another school. They were regularly enrolled in our high school and were satisfactorily doing required work, as I remember on the day of the game. Concerning Tuesday's match, no objection to them before the game. It would seem a little late to raise the question now.

"Personally I regret that a good foot ball game cannot always be played with school swinging and interfering spirit. The properly balanced boys in every team have to suffer criticism because a few are nasty, and unimportant. I can't help but to have the whole question of athletic improvement discussed at the coming meeting of the North Traverse Association. Manifestly, I regret can discharge my own responsibility toward school boys better than I have had a free discussion thoroughly acquainted with the local conditions.

"This week we will, however, be from fails to tell the truth in any particular. We could relate, for the benefit of the News, several very unadvisable acts on the part of the visiting team, when they were coaching under defeat. Indeed, we might make me off in where the captain of the team committed a most cowardly attack upon a member of the Charlevoix team, which he was lying on the grass, but it would be too much after the News, laying aside of journalism, to relate it.

"We know the Petoskey people pretty well, and we do not believe they approve of such journalism.

"Smoke the Oakland cigar.

Circuit Court.

Circuit Court closed Monday.

The gold cane was that of Peter Dalton and the stockholders of the old Charlevoix Savings Bank. Judge Carpenter, who sat in the case, took it from the jury and decreed no cause of action. Tendoff, six years ago, when the old savings bank was on its death, invested considerable money in its stock. He set up the claim that he was induced to do so through misrepresentation. There was no evidence produced to substantiate this claim; the entire bent of the opinion, conclusion that it was a bad venture for all concerned.

Harry Pike, of Boyne City, was convicted of larceny, and, under the new indeterminate sentence law, was given not more than five nor less than one year at Ionia.

Andrew John (Indian) was given 90 days at Detroit for assault and battery.

Fred Hall of the Boyne Falls saloon case, the defendants plead guilty and paid fines.

The Charlevoix saloon cases, as well as all other cases in the calendar, go over to a special term, to be held Oct. 19th.

A Great Sensation

There was a big sensation in Lowville, Ind. when W. H. Brown of that place, who was expected to die, had his life saved by Dr King's New Discovery for Consumption. He writes: "I endured unutterable agonies from a terrible cough that Doctors gave me immediate relief and soon thereafter effected a complete cure. Similar Pneumonia, Pain Bottle and Grippe are numerous. It's the positive remedy for all throat and lung troubles. Price 50c. and $1.00. Guaranteed by F. G. Hines & Co. Druggist. Trial bottles free.

Signal Station for Beaver Island.

Within the past year a Weather Bureau signal station has been established at north Manitou Island, and another is now to be established on the North Manitou.

These facts suggest that there is not a more suitable point for a signal station than on Beaver Island. The marine trade through the north channel, mostly in the coal and ore trade, passes to full view of the high lands near St. James. These vessels have no storm warnings from the time they leave north shore points until they get to the straits. Besides this much of the main channel commerce passes in view of these high lands.

A display station on Beaver Island would necessitate an appropriation of about $2,000. About 10 miles of cable would be required to connect the Island with the main land, near Gross Village.

The chief benefit of a display station would be to the north channel trade, and a movement will be made this winter to get an appropriation for the purpose.

The weather bureau is now undecided in the matter, as Prof. Cox, chief of the service on the great lakes visited Beaver Harbor in August, in company with the writer of this, his sole purpose being to investigate conditions. It is a fact recognized by the bureau, that a station on the Island is but a matter of time. Prof. Cox did not hesitate to say that when the station comes to him, as it must, he will recommend the establishment of the station.

There are several very desirable locations on the Island case the matter, and no doubt the people of the Island would secure the government a site.

One thing is certain—an effort will be made to secure the station at the coming session of Congress.

SCHOOL NOTES.

This week closes the first month of school. It is rather good a month's work as the next one ought to be. Lend a hand.

Rev Mr. Hughes gave an instructive address to the high school students on Thursday morning. His subject was "Earnestness" a good one for beginning school.

Out door foot ball is to be succeeded by indoor basket ball—without the strenuous or that frequently accompany the other game. Young ladies of the high school and of the teaching corps are interested in the new departure, and a room is being fitted at least expense on the ground floor of the Mc Kinley building.

Parents are urged to visit the grades in which their own children recite. It will be free at the beginning of the year, and thus latter, it gives an opportunity for intelligent comparison of the work of both teachers and pupils. Particularly parents ought to discover from that hand observation whether children are working as hard as is such as they ought. If your child doesn't bring home a satisfactory monthly report, don't complain to other that the teacher has done him an injustice. This teacher may have did force! than the other one. Be closer and see for yourself what is expected of pupils and how they measure to.

This week sees high. How was the high school speaker—on the subject, "What a high school student ought to know." He enumerated nine points that ought to be taken for granted; that the high school student knows

1 His course at study.
2 His labors at recitation
3 How to study to the best advantage.

4 That he must study more out side of school.

5. That teachers are his friends doing their personal, moral, and legal duty toward him each when they see it that he does his duty.

6 That he should be polite, obedient, and honest in his obedience to what is expected of him. And that a high school girl is deplorable when because she is a girl expects to escape punishment for what would be punishable in a boy.

7 That amusement is not the chief end of life, and that no existence is more worthless than that of people who are not required to work by their sense of obligation to the world.

8. That there is a difference between teachers and teachers, and between teachers and pupils.

9. He should know and observe the proprieties of good society, should know how to walk or sit in a public room without attracting the disapproving attention of decent people, should know that gum chewing in public is not a sign of intellect, should know that it is not a manly accomplishment to be the strong, "I am willing to apologize before the whole community of the high school to any student whom I discover that I have treated unjustly when he was in no wise responsible."

MARINE NEWS.

The steamer Beaver went to Fox Island Tuesday to land the light keeper.

The tow barge Case, loading at Charlevoix, sprung a leak in the storm one day last week, and had to leave for Cleveland with less than half a cargo, and a steam pump on board, in charge of the Scandinavian Boiler.

Charlevoix is to have another City barge boat the balance of the season, and probably will continue running boats regularly. The new addition to the cleaner Protectence. She will arrive here tomorrow, and will make trips two twice each week from Chicago, Milwaukee and Frankfort. J. J. Fagan is the agent, and the Fagan dock will be her landing place.

The U. S. Lake Survey steamer surveyor came into port Friday and anchored in the harbor. The surveying party, under Mr. Graves, will be remembered in first assistant in the north, two years ago, made a survey of entire harbor conditions and look according, to be used as data for a new chart of Charlevoix harbor, soundings to be issued by the engineer department. The Surveyor has built at work all summer to the island region, making her headquarters at Beaver Harbor. She left again Monday.

Northport Special 28th: Lying at the shipdock with her bunkers full of coal and ready to steam out on short notice, the Manistique, Marquette & Northern No 1 (affect) is awaiting orders to make her first trip to Manitoulin Island. When the orders will be received is not known but they are looked for any day. Some of the other affiers are expected to make the trip.

Behind The Grave.

A startling incident is narrated by John Oliver of Philadelphia, as follows: "I was in an awful condition, my kidneys were affected, yellow, sallow, complexion, could not sleep, nothing to back and sides, no appetite, growing weaker day by day. Three physicians had given me up. Then I was advised to use Electric Bitters. To my great joy, the first bottle made a marked improvement. I continued their use for three weeks, and am now a well man man. I know they saved me from the grave of another victim. No one should fail to try them. Only 50 cents, guaranteed, at F. G. Hines & Co. drug store.

first trip across the lake. Notice has been sent to Manitoulin that the boat and the crew here are ready and it will be made up there. Some cars were run on the big boat yesterday and her bunkers were filled.

By the opening of another season of navigation North Manitou Island in Lake Michigan, will have storm signals and the life saving station located there will be in operation in connection with the outside world. This will be done by extending the cable now running from Glen Haven to North Manitou Island to North Manitou. This cable has already provided a great convenience to visitors, and it furnishes a way to get orders from their ships sheltered at South Manitou harbor during storms. It was laid by the government last spring after years of effort to secure an appropriation. The expense of extending the cable to North Manitou will be small and Prof. Cox has recommended that it be done.

—The steamer City of Charlevoix went ashore at Cheyboy Point, near Manistique, Monday night, during the storm. She was unable to release herself. The Lincoln developing tug Monday morning, and Capt. Wm. Moxley the tug Taylor and the big barge pulled in releasing the vessel, and she proceeded on her way. No damage is reported.

—The excursion tourists from Charlevoix will usually probably exceed that of any previous year which has given a good condition of affairs. It would be impossible for us to give a list of those going out in this trimmer, but we can say that the Lodge, Hotel Antrim, master of the schooner, returned here from King ston, Ont. Tuesday, having sold the vessel at that place.

—The first terrific thunder storm of the year this season occurred Saturday night. It was accompanied by severe squalls, doing some damage to trees, and one flag staff in front of the Inn was broken off by the ground, and fell the length of one of the beautiful shrubbery beds.

The paving of Bridge street is delayed by some of the machinery engaged on another contract, and will not arrive here until Saturday. Supt. Diamond says they will open up work Monday morning at along the line, and be in active shape for effective work when they would have had they kept to speed.

—Mr. Wadsworth, who has been very ill with heart disease for some time, died at his home in this village Saturday afternoon. Deceased leaves a wife and one young child. The funeral was held from the M. E. church Tuesday afternoon, the last rites being conducted by the services. Mr. Schaub had served creditably several years as village Marshal, and later as street commissioner, which position he held when taken ill. Charlevoix Lodge of Odd Fellows and the Maccabees, of which deceased was a member, attended the funeral in a body.

—Guy Williams, son of John Williams disappeared Saturday night, and was probably drowned off the pier. He was last seen about five o'clock at that place. He left home a short time before. Can with a mission pail, telling his stepmother he would go to the pier fishing. He did not return Saturday night, and on searching for him Monday morning the minnow pail was found on the pier end. He was about 21 years of age, and a nephew of Hosea Williams, and the late Mrs Ed. F. Brown. There is no doubt that he fell off of the pier and was drowned, as there is no reasonable cause for his leaving home. The body of Williams was found Tuesday afternoon some the end of the pier.

PRICE OF POTATOES GOING UP.

The Detroit Journal Predicts They Will Soon be as Dear as Onions.

That table sass, the Irish potato, will probably be a sorry article on the table of the boarding house keeper, winter, in prospect for the gathering of the late fall crop become so latter. The railroad report weeks ago The Detroit Journal have rolled off the potatoes in Indiana and in miles of Detroit, especially those planted on low lands in clay or loam soil, have rotted in the ground. Advices two weeks ago, according to the statements of William E. Lambert, the large shipper of Michigan potatoes, having headquarters in Detroit.

"During the season we ship from Detroit 300 cars of potatoes, ranging in capacity from 500 bushels, and we are unknown to our customers" he said.

"Look at that lot on the issue." Mr. Lambertson added, pointing to two bushels that had rolled on lonely after a week's play in the concession house, that they will have to be carted away by the military trucks bags and off. When those potatoes went into the cars they were sound apparently. Now they are fit for nothing."

"Of the 300 cars we shipped, about 25 side of the rubber, let a afraid to ship for fear that the potatoes will fall en route.

"Last year we paid the farmers 25 cents a bushel for potatoes. This year we pay 40. Dealers cost to ship and sell them in Toronto.

"Prospects until a few weeks ago looked good for a large crop, the farmers being more generous than during the preceding year.

"It is estimated, however, that in this state the rot has done about 25 per cent more damage than the crop of last year, which washed the early tubers out of the ville. Potatoes last spring, you remember, went to better than a dollar a bushel. The outlook is even worse this winter. They may go to $1.50 or possibly higher."

None of the generous Mr. Wood Bridge street have on their last supplies of potatoes. Last year Minnesota and Wisconsin were dependent upon for the greater part of the supply. Wisconsin potatoes are this year more in demand by the east coast than the Michigan article.

"A man who came in from Grand Rapids two days ago, said to Mr. Wilson, a large shipper of potatoes, 'had to hold my hands to the bottom as he passed through the potato district, the odor of the rotting starch in the tubers was so powerful.'"

PERPETUAL MOTION.

Is Who Has Been Inaugurated Up at the Charlevoix Sugar Factory.

Excepting the two hours in the four, required to make the shifts, work will proceed at the sugar factory, night and day and Sundays, until sugar begins to pour into the barrels in early winter.

The force now consists of about 80 men, a large percentage of whom are skilled workmen—steam-fitters, plumbers, carpenters and blacksmiths. They are distributed on four floors, and the ponderous appliances by the aid of which sugar will be extracted from the beet are being placed. Car loads of tanks odd-looking castings, wheels and levers arrive every day and are switched to the factory siding.

Already there have been wonders done within the walls of the factory. On the ground floor, pumps and engines rest on their concrete foundations, and steam pipes, big and little meander about through space. Great mysterious looking iron receptacles are perched midway between floor and ceiling, and concrete beams are looking up through the openings may be seen on each of the four floors tanks and strange looking things of iron and steel, that cause you to wonder how they were ever raised. But Jim Hasting knows, however.

Outside, on the south end of the main building, the creek is being dammed. From the dam a concrete flume will convey the water to a large dam, then flanking the south east corner of the factory, from which the water supply will be pumped. An eight inch pipe will go to Pine Lake, however, as a reserve expedient. Mr. Stacks has a large force grading, track laying and sewering. In fact everything goes along together.

In the office, spread out upon tables are hundreds of blue prints, and draughtsmen are making more of them, as details arise to vex or puzzle the mechanics. Mr. A. Thomas, the chief engineer and chemist of the plant, is on the ground directing the placing of the intricate mass of machinery, and with under his direction will open its first "campaign."

An electric lighting plant is being installed, but, temporarily, the plant has been wired, and the city wires connected.

Again we see a dark rolling more in and within a week Superintendent Hasting expects to have 150 men at work.

John S. Estabrook Dead.

John S. Estabrook succumbed to a stroke of apoplexy at his home in Saginaw Sunday night. He was stricken a little more than two weeks ago, and through the failed and appeared to be on the way to recovery for a time, he sank last Friday into a comatose condition, from which better than the death that resulted.

He was born in Erie county, N. Y., Jan. 20, 1820, came to Michigan in 1849, stopping at St. Clair, and in 1852 came to Saginaw. He was engaged in the lumbering business for more than 50 years, but retired five years ago from active business. He was representative from Saginaw in the legislature from 1870 to 1872, was mayor in 1879, served many years as a member of the board of education, was member of the board of public works and at one time president of the board of trade.

Mr. Estabrook was one of the best known among the pioneers of the Charlevoix Summer Home Association, formerly known as the "Kankakee Club," and has occupied a cottage there many summers. He spent the month of August of this year at Charlevoix, and seemed to be in vigorous health.

"To Harbor Springs by a round-the-bay shore boulevard drive" is not a bad slogan for adoption by all Little Traverse Bay shore residents from Petoskey to Harbor Point.

The Traverse City Record says: Chief Deputy Game Warden Brewster has just returned from making an extended tour of inspection of the northern counties. He says that there will be better deer hunting this fall than has been experienced for several years past. He says the deer are thick and that hard hunting will also be good.

"Do I guess there?" she questioned hesitatingly, but I felt as well convinced that I was right as if I had seen the letter with my own eyes. "Well, I guess you'll manage pretty well. What does Lucy say about it?"

"She says I must do as I think best. I'm going to write to Lucy's guardian and tell him the whole story. I know he will be on our side, and he will help us."

"Well, I guess you can do as you think best about it, Ruth. I don't see any other way myself. Of course, I don't know much about such things, but I guess it would be better for you to have a home of your own than to live with your aunt and uncle, and I guess Lucy would be happier with you than with them."

"Nothing I have seen since I left home has shaken my faith in Lucy."

"Humph! How—

"Do you mean by the expression of your face?"

"I do not know, Ruth. How could I know anything?"

"I was thinking of a conversation I had with Lucy the night before she left home. She said she was going to write to you and tell you everything."

"Well, I guess she did, for I received a letter from her the morning after she left home, and she said she was going to write to you."

"Did she tell you what she had written?"

"Why, no; I didn't think it was my business to open her letters."

"Well, I guess she told you that she was engaged to Mr. Ashton, and that she was going to write to you and tell you everything."

"Nothing I have seen since my arrival has shaken my faith in Lucy."

THE AGE OF DRAGONS.

Their Existence Believed in by Many Scientists.

Dragons were important animals in medieval and mediæval natural history. Until comparatively recent times no science, even thought of questioning the existence of this most fundamental of beasts. The record of Winchester for 1127 gravely state that in the year dragons were seen on many in England." Gessner published quite at history at Zurich, given a detailed description of the dragon, which is decorative, in his "History of Serpents and Dragons," published in 1589. He views fifty pages to the monster. A good specimen of a dragon would seem to have been a beast from the shape of a sheep, incased in a coat of armor which shows the scales, its face was encrusted like a saw. It possessed a long tail, a pair of bat's wings, four heavily clawed feet, a narrow head the jaws of which were armed with very formidable teeth. The tongue was forked and five and fifty feet from the serpent's mouth and the hind legs a crest. Dragons were the most alert and cunning of creatures. They seem always to have been in a towering rage and spoke the weather portion of their time in rushing up and down the earth or amongst everything that came in their path. The origin of dragons was a disputed point among mediæval naturalists. Some maintained that these animals were generated by the heat of India; others were of opinion that the venomous of Ethiopia used to belch forth the monsters. One seaman, John Lee by name, declared the dragon to be a hybrid, a cross between an eagle and a wolf.

A Correct Definition.

"When I was visiting in the South recently," said the woman in the train travelling east, "my hostess took me to a small district school to observe how the young ideas were taught how to shoot in Dixieland. It was a mixed school and the teacher, a young colored man, was naturally anxious to show his pupils show off before visitors. They did well, too, until the class in spelling was called up.

"The word bulldozing was given out after a number of others had been successfully mastered. The word was spelled correctly and then the teacher said:

"Who can tell me what bulldozing means?"

A group of intelligent lighted up the face of one little chap.

"'It means, sah,' he stammered in his haste to gain time for himself that ah wood means a mahgnificent row atteh wide a hawsfoot, sah."

Summer Airs.

The two sickliest fad often called on the young Solivan family whose home is the summer boarders came, and these had not been the slightest, for quite the sickly ones. One of the young women hawker, took it into her head that some formality was the proper thing to do while time she was called the maid asked for their cards. The men looked nonplussed. They had brought no cards, as summer boarders had never heard any use for such cards. Then the elder of the two rose to the occasion. Drawing down his pocket he brought out one of his milk tickets. The peasant maid did the same thing and the maid solemnly read the name aloud. After that the formality of cards was dispensed with.—New York Times.

A Dainty Snake.

There is a curious snake in South Africa that likes wealthy upon food. It has its teeth so placed back in the mouth, its whole dental array being located in the stomach. Bushmen says that the snake not free teeth, lest they move all purposes. They grow from the stomach of each vertebra. They last the roots of the stomach and are covered with an shell, just like true teeth. This snake is very prudent, for breaking one without forming the risk of losing the precious contents, as would, in the case if this egg-eating serpent had its teeth in the usual place. When the egg is safely inside the abdominal walls contract and crush it against the bone in a manner scientific tools.

THE ROAST THAT WAS UNDONE.

Culinary Accident Due to Use of Rubber Tray.

When George Cockburn goes up to Sullivan county this summer he will be careful to keep all of his photographic apparatus under lock and key. And his landlady, Mrs. Hubbard, will be a little more careful about borrowing his things.

One morning last summer George left two glass rubber trays on a bench outside the house to drain, and went fishing. Mrs. Hubbard shortly picked up the trays and took them into the kitchen. When George came back and saw the house his first thought was that it was on fire. Smoke was streaming from the kitchen windows and Mrs. Hubbard came running towards him wringing her hands, her eyes watery.

"Oh, George" she cried. "I don't know what can be the matter. I put chicken in the oven a little while ago and when I opened the door to baste it the oven was full of smoke, and it had the awfulest smell. I think it must have been something the matter with chicken."

As Georgie stepped into the kitchen his nostrils were greeted with an overpowering odor of burning rubber.

"Mrs. Hubbard," he said, "what kind of a fine did you put the chicken in?"

"Oh, I don't know, I'm sure," sobbing like the other day.—New York Press.

Discouraged Genius.

"So you have decided to give up journalism?"

"I have," answered the fair-haired, bloodyed youth. "I have done my every best—"

"Is the work too hard?"

"Too hard? No, it's too easy. After I had gotten up some elaborate stories explaining the precise intentions of Russia in Manchuria and the prospects of free trade in Germany and the sentiments of American women in art, they made a joke because I overheard an Irish whisky a few weeks."

EMPHASIS IN HIS PRAYER.

Farmer Wanted Urgency of the Petition Understood.

Speaking of drawing results reminds of a story said Abe Lincoln to one great politician performed in Illinois. Lincoln—I think—was then down the other night. I was up in Christmas country some one of the reviewed drawing the counties, but never, and I attended a prayer meeting held for the purpose of performing Divine Providence for rain.

Among those that took part was an old farmer who through one of the most devout and impressive characters in the community would wind up his prayer with some sort of the language he had been familiar with in his earlier days when he worked on a canal. Some of these phrases had suffered more from the lapse than others, and when he was pulled in to pray in such one of the most sincere and impressive petitions I ever heard.

"At the close of his supplication, however, he surprised those present by saying: We know, O Lord, that thou will send us rain just as thou hast many times before, but this time, O Lord, mebbe we get a mighty sight more if we pray hard."—New York Times.

Big Brac Has Had Its Day.

One of the latest arrivals at Paris from the temple of fashion, where all such worship is performed, is the bracelet. It has been cultivated on gentlemen and most dogs. Just where it is to go is not specified. But it can, with safety be placed in the parcel or thrown at the members of the fashion opera company which insist on giving moderate gifts such, with the back door as a stage. Good reasons are given for this decree. Bracelets are so plentiful in many parts that the visitor has to be very careful lest he or she should be called upon to hand over half a dozen incumbrances and wholly unnecessary pieces of jewelry from off the outer limits of the model. Reducing the number of these bracelets would prove a deterrent force to men, the majority of whom are more or less awkward, and cannot fail to lessen the hideous of the humanoid and of the dog who is expected to deal all into collections of bracelet and general trinkets at least once a week.

Thinks Air Ships Sure to Come.

The Smithsonian Institution has published a note about the "Experiments in Aerodynamics." Professor Langley's work in the direction of Mr. Langley speaks of the prospects for the future practical so follows: "Surely that time is not to be too long delayed that mechanical flight will be actually practiced by men who know fitting machines properly. Times wonder that we never by ocean. Time machines will fly from place to place with the speed of a steamboat to transportation at a rate of speed varying from twenty to thirty miles an hour. It is reserved to the imagine that the time is now very near when mechanical flight will be practiced at high velocities, should it have a free course, and that it will be high, such as are contained in the air of air rather than of water.

Marriage as a Revenue Creator.

The Anglican synod at Toronto has a bill to prevent the law governing the marriage in the Dominion. The Dominion to reduce the fee for native marriages from $10 to some more reasonable figure, such a sum, thinks a small income to the average native and certainly acts as a prohibitive agent to marry. It is not often that the fees for marriages are used as revenue creators, but much was made of the system in Samoa some years ago at the Kingsmill Islands. The fee fixed was seven women of Apia are much given to marrying the marine officers of the port and the fee was fixed at $1. For the fourth or a divorce was made $10, and as every sailor had to get married and divorced ship out of port in the time he was ashore, the revenue from marriages was quite a good one for the Samoan Islands.

Robbed The Grave.

A startling incident is narrated by John Oliver of Tillsdelphia, as follows: "I was in an awful condition. My skin was almost yellow, eyes sunken, tongue coated, pain constantly in back and sides, no appetite, growing weaker day by day. Three physicians had given me up. Then I was advised to use Electric Bitters. To my great joy, the first bottle made a decided improvement. I continued their use for three weeks, and am now a well man. I know they robbed the grave of another victim." No one should fail to try them. Only 50 cents, guaranteed, at F. E. Hines & Co. drug store.

PERIL ON THE WATER

TWO TOLEDO PARTIES NARROWLY ESCAPE DEATH.

Rock Bottom in Launch for Twenty Hour Hours with Broken Rudder—Lumber Ledges of The Ice in Small Boats in Alaska.

The young lady Stenographer, Miss Elizabeth Wilson, of Toledo, and a young man named Smith, of Toledo, as a couple, had spent a pleasant day on Monday, Sept. 22, visiting Monroe. The lady had gone to Monroe to visit friends, and Smith had gone down to Monroe on business, and I am inclined to believe, from the way they talked, that they had met by appointment. They had spent the afternoon and evening together, and had taken a launch belonging to Mr. Bissell, of Toledo, and had started for home, but when they had gone about two miles from the city, the rudder broke and they were left to the mercy of the waves. Mr. Bissell, the owner of the launch, had loaned it to a friend, who had taken it to Monroe, and he had left it there, and was not expected back for two days. The young people had left Toledo in the morning, and it was fifteen miles from Toledo to Monroe, and they had taken a lunch with them, and had spent the day in the city, and had taken a supper in Monroe, and had started for home in the evening, and it was fifteen miles before they could get home, and they had been out about three or four hours.

Government Refuses to Pay Money for Nicaragua Causes Trouble.

Nicaragua Will Find Its Force of Rallwaymen Too Affraid to Return.

Honduras is in a state of excitement over a complaint of some one claiming to be the consul of Honduras at Bluefields, Nicaragua, that the government of Honduras has refused to pay the money for the release of the prisoners who were taken from the Honduras side of the line by a party of Nicaraguan revolutionists, and who were taken to Nicaragua and held as hostages for the good behavior of the Honduras government. The story of the affair is about as follows: Some time ago a Nicaraguan revolutionary party crossed the line into Honduras, and took some prisoners, and carried them back to Nicaragua, and held them as hostages for the good behavior of the Honduras government. The Honduras government refused to pay the money for the release of the prisoners, and the Nicaraguan government has been trying to get the money from Honduras, and the Honduras government has been trying to get the prisoners from Nicaragua, and the Honduras government has been trying to get the money from Nicaragua, and the Nicaraguan government has been trying to get the prisoners from Honduras

HACKLEY FOUNDERED.

Steamer Lost in Green Bay, and Hugh Miller, of this place a Passenger.

Information came here Monday afternoon that the Steamer Eric L. Hackley foundered in Green Bay that day, and that Hugh Miller, a passenger, was missing.

Hugh was one of the most popular of Charlevoix boys, and the news sent a shock through the community. He was a steamboat freemen. During the summer he had been employed on the Algoma running across the straits, but left that float about two weeks ago, spending a week at home.

Last week he accepted a position on one of the Hart line steamer, and was on his way to Green Bay when his terrible fate overtook him.

Hugh Miller was a most estimable young man, and had most promising prospects in life. He was a son of Mr. and Mrs. John C. Miller of this place, who have the sincere sympathy of the community.

The steamer Eric L. Hackley, was for several years a Charlevoix boat, having been run on the Beaver Island route. She was sold to Chicago parties for the Manitou Island Fruit fore route, but was unprofitable. Last spring she was sold to Green Bay parties. She was considered a staunch and seaworthy boat having weathered many a gale on her old route here.

The Inter Ocean prints the following particulars of the disaster:

Twelve men and women were drowned by the capsizing of the steamer E. L. Hackley in the storm which swept the northern end of the lake last night. After clinging for nearly twelve hours to the wreckage while the terrible waves alternately buried them and tossed them on shore, nine survivors were rescued by the woodrich steamer Sheboygan, being completely exhausted when taken from the water.

The Hackley encountered the storm when seven miles off Green Island, in Green Bay. The wind and the sea tore away the upper works, and before the boats could be lowered the steamer rolled onto her side, and in less than a minute sank in deep water.

Reports of the disaster did not reach Manistique until today, when word was received that the Sheboygan had put into Fish creek with the rescued.

The Hackley was proceeding on her course seven miles off Green Island when the wind, blowing with hurricane violence, struck the little vessel broadside. It was already dark, and the sea, which had been only moderate, suddenly began to run high breaking with ever increasing force.

Captain Voenus gave orders to turn the steamer head on to the sea and make for Fish creek, the nearest harbor. Hardly had he uttered the command, however, when a gust, the most violent of all, caught the boat as she started to turn, and an enormous wave crashed against her side at the same instant, tore away a great part of the upper works, loosening the timbers of the hull and exposing the vessel to the full onslaught of the breaking seas.

Men and women ran shrieking to the deck from which they had withdrawn in terror but a short time previously. They stumbled over debris of the wreckage, and in the darkness the confusion amounted to panic.

One sail, one boat and a life raft near the stern had been left at the first destruction, but before these could be launched or the frightened passengers and crew even noticed life preservers and leaped into the raging waters, another great wave broke over the Hackley, and, listing heavily, she rolled clean to her side and plunged immediately to the bottom. It is believed that many of the victims were sucked down to destruction with the sinking hull.

Those of the survivors who had recovered from the shock and exhaustion occasioned by the awful ordeal they underwent during the next twelve hours in the chilling water sufficiently to talk said that their experience was full of horror and utter torture.

The waves by this time were rolling to mountainous height, looming black and awful above the heads of the struggling victims of the disaster. In sinking, however, the steamer had left a lot of loose wreckage and debris afloat, and this, with life-preservers and loose spars, afforded faint hope to those who were still afloat, though it proved brief for many of them.

Some of the survivors estimate that a majority of those who were thrown overboard were able at first to support themselves on bits of wreckage, but later lost their hold through the chill of the waters, and the constant buffeting of the waves, and sank to their deaths.

All night long the storm continued without appearing to those in the water to abate in the least. At times the waves would toss them to the crests, where they could catch sometimes the fitful sight of a comrade clinging desperately to a spar or piece of planking, or toss them his hold to a smiling crest and lost to sight in the darkness.

Most of the time, however, survivors declare, they seemed to spend beneath the waves, which would carry them half way to the top only to crack half the air volume upon them.

To the weaker sufferer the ordeal was as hopeless as it was terrible. One by one they became exhausted, their muscles cramped, loosened the grip of hand or arm for a moment, tried to regain their position, and then vanished.

Long before dawn there were only blue bill floating upon the billows. These were found by the Goodrich steamer Sheboygan.

Not So Brother.

An acquaintance from a neighboring town who visited Charlevoix last week, in a conversation with the writer about our sewerage and paving improvements, remarked that, great Scott, your taxes must be high."

Well, as we have previously remarked, there is a slight swelling of the figures on the assessment roll, but the increase is not due to the street improvements, but to conditions subsidiary to these improvements.

The cost of pavement and sewerage cannot be classed as taxes, any more than can the cost of a sidewalk along the front of your premises, or the planting of shade trees. Pavements and sewers are paid for, chiefly by the abutting property owners, and may be classed as luxuries, to be bought and paid for just as you buy a piano and pay for it. You get what you pay for, or are supposed to.

We buy a new overcoat when we need it and think we can afford it, and the cost thereof does not go into the assessment roll. The only difference between pavement and a new overcoat is that there is a mutual agreement in the matter of pavement, that we need the shoes and we all "chip in."

But to return to the matter of taxes, Charlevoix has no higher taxes than any other town of its size, or larger in Northern Michigan, and we will stake our reputation for veracity upon an investigation. By this we mean municipal taxes. But if they seem high we may, in a large sense, apply to them the same argument that we have at the outset to the cost of pavement and sewerage. If we improve the outlying streets, or park an unused spot, we get what we pay for, and the result is an asset.

Our experience is that the average taxpayer will growl when he pays his tax, yet would cheerfully contribute a like amount on a subscription paper to secure the improvement that the tax is spread to secure. We are doing things in Charlevoix, and when we get through we shall be glad we did it.

NORTHERN MICHIGAN.

Contrary to the published reports Joe Maddock has joined the U. of M. instead of the U. of Chicago, and will no doubt play with them for this season. As soon as Stagg of the University of Chicago heard that Maddock was again in the game his spirits that had been at 212 dropped to 56.

Gold was discovered Wednesday on the Hudsonian farm five miles from South Ste Marie, and averaged 14 ounces to each barrel of sand. Pumping machinery will be installed and in operation within a month. Prices of real estate in the locality made a big advance immediately after the discovery was made. A company will be formed at once.

Cadillac News: It is predicted that potatoes in this section will go to 60 cents before the season closes. The wet weather has affected them less in this section than farther south, yet some damage is reported. The Exact Review says: "Potatoes are being marketed at the rate of about 1,200 bushels per day. Prices from 35 to 40 cents, the bulk of them at the latter figure."

A warrant was issued Monday for the foreman of the jury which tried Deputy Game Warden Bert Spafford of Cadillac, for the killing of Chris McLean while trying to make an arrest for violation of the fish law. Last Saturday Spafford was pardoned by Governor Pingree before sentence was pronounced by the judge. The foreman of the jury is held for perjury, it being alleged that he swore falsely, in his qualifications in order to get on the jury, and that he told different persons he would like to send Spafford and all the game wardens to h—l. Public sentiment in Benzie county has been largely against the game warden's department, and the department claims to be able to show conspiracy to convict Spafford and thereby give the department a black eye all over the northern counties.

Dollarville, two miles west of Newberry, is another deserted lumbering burg to be added to the already long list. A year ago Dollarville could boast of a population of 500, now you can count the whole population on your fingers. The station has been discontinued, and the post-office was discontinued Tuesday. This is all on account of the pine giving out. Dollarville in its glory could boast of a sawmill cutting 200,000 feet every twenty-four hours, picket mill and lath mill, but all that remains now is a loaded up mill and deserted town ways.

The initial trip of the big L. C. L. & M. carry ferry from Northport to Manistique was a success, and the officials of the road are well pleased with the outlook. The boat left Northport Wednesday evening and returned next evening about 8:30 o'clock. Those who went on this trip were E. H. Mathews, president of the road, D. W. Kaufman, vice president, Edward J. Hance of Detroit, secretary of the Union Trust Co., Col Frank J. Hecker of Detroit, W. F. McKnight of Grand Rapids, Howard Gill of Northport, and Q. E. Hodges and W. S. Anderson of Traverse City.

Bay View Cor. Elk Rapids Progress

Central Lake and Bellaire fairs were both rather unsatisfactory this year. Bellaire is too far from the farming districts, and Central Lake is too much whiskey afloat and not enough good, clean attractions. A plan would be very good we think, to make the gleaner's grounds at East port a fair ground. It could be easily reached by most farmers. Miles would have splendid roads, only 15 miles distant. With the exception of Wilkinson hill, Forest Home and Echo could reach on at only 15 miles drive. Banks would have but 5 or 6 miles to drive. Class Lake 15. This would bring us in touch with all the best farming country of the county.

Northport Leader. Art O'Brien is shoeing a piece of Hebrew money supposed to be a shekel, the kind of money Ben Hur used and such as was paid to gladiators in the Roman circus. It was found by Otto Sillow last Sunday in some dirt thrown out of the excavation for the bridge on Mill street. He found two, one of which he kept and the other he gave to O'Brien. They were supposed to have been lost in the creek and washed down and buried by the recent flood. No doubt but the prohibitory race last fall inhabited this country previous to the American Indian were of the semetic tribes and as these coins are copper it is believed that they were made here from Michigan copper. Who knows but untold wealth in copper lies at our feet?

Petoskey Daily News. The delegation of ten Harbor Springs Indians who represented the Ottawa tribe in the big ceremonial celebration at Chicago just returned this morning. Chief Blackbird, his son Andrew, John Pete, with his wife and 7 year old daughter and four of five of the other more intelligent Indians formed the party. John Joe tells us that the celebration was one of the events of his life; that several hundred Indians representatives from various different tribes were encamped for the week just finished, in Lincoln Park, Chicago; that the Chicago inhabitants and visitors for the week flocked in numbers to see the red men in their tepees; that the lodges were erected in old-time style and that the Indians were all attired in their native costumes and with his insignia of rank and tribe regalia in full effect; that the Chicago people spent an abundance of money with them in the purchase of their basket work, beads and other little souvenir trinkets, that the old chief Blackbird who is ninety-four years of age, was the most eloquent of the entire gatherings and made several addresses during the encampment. Joe, in fact was most eloquent in his praise of their treatment and accorded to Mr. Engle, who resorts at Roseland, the credit for their trip in which all the expenses were paid, the journey requiring not one cent outlay from the red men.

Conducted by J. W. DARROW.

BROADENING THE FIELD.

Our Suggestions by the Hon. George T. Powell on New Lines of Work.

Our Secondary Organization of Co-operative Stores.

The foundation and organization of the grange were through a recognition of the duties of the agricultural class of our country at a time when the interests of the very element depended. At the close of the civil war farm wages were easily heavily mortgaged and farmers were staggering under the burden of debt.

The work of the grange was to bring farmers together in an organized capacity to consider ways and means for their relief. Some benefit in this direction has been derived in the matter of co-operative purchasing of farm supplies which in many instances have been sold to the farmer at a lower price than he could obtain elsewhere. Yet the benefit derived from this source has been comparatively small. The grange has not been a buying and selling agency, and it should not be. Its mission is a higher one than that. Its work is educational and moral. It should be a school of instruction for the farmer in the art of husbandry, and a school of morals and manners for the farmer and his family. It should be a place where the farmer may go to meet his neighbors and friends for social intercourse, and to have his mind and heart lifted from the sordid cares of his calling to the contemplation of the higher and nobler things of life. The grange should be a place where the farmer may go to hear lectures and addresses upon the subjects of his calling, and upon the duties of citizenship, and upon the duties we owe to our fellow men. It should be a place where the farmer may go to hear music and song, and to have his mind and heart lifted from the sordid cares of his calling to the contemplation of the higher and nobler things of life. PLANS NEGRO STATE.

FRENCHMAN CONCEIVES GREAT PHILANTHROPY.

He Wishes to Form Great State in Africa and Place It with American Negroes Doubtful Lake Sent Toward Its Safe Haven.

The Lenox Daily Mail says Eugene Imbault, the Frenchman who is supposed to be collecting an army of negroes for transport to Africa, called at the office of the Mail and spent a pleasant half hour in talking over the Congo Free State question. According to the Mail, Imbault is planning to form a State in Africa, which would be a home for all negroes who desire to get away from the United States. Imbault says that he has already received hundreds of letters from colored people in this country, some of them of the highest character, asking information as to the place, the climate, the chances for business, and the general conditions of life in Africa. He says that many of these letters are from men who are well to do, and who are in a position to support themselves and their families in Africa, if they should decide to go there. He says that he has received letters from colored people in all parts of the United States, from Maine to California, and from the Southern States, which would indicate that the idea of a colony of negroes in Africa is being considered by the colored people in all parts of the United States. TEACHERS' Review Classes in Science Examination Begins Sept. 7th.

Stenography in origin of business by Bartlett Shorthand, Pitman's Shorthand and Graham's Shorthand.

Commercial and Shorthand Classes begin Sept. 8th.

This school for our students the gain from attendance in commercial work, shorthand, penmanship, typewriting, and English, and a very week day life seen are pushing the shortcuts plain toward completion. And the interesting feature is there are no stupid and day the work goes on. It is a hive of industry, and every night the work of the day is perceptible; every morning the work of the night shows itself. The factory will make sugar this winter—that is certain.

—The pay roll at the sugar factory is $1000 per week. Adding to this the large force of men employed on paving, cement walk work, sewering, robert colleges, bank block, government work and much unclassified work, extract workmen and laborers in Charlevoix are being paid from $1000 per week. And this large amount will only be a commencement, as what will be distributed here when the beet crop begins to come in. Now the ball is rolling, let us keep it rolling. There are some worlds yet to conquer.

—Ed. A. R. Kaufman of Port Huron, Mich. has purchased the Fred A. Clover property on the Norwood road consisting of 240 acres with soil and water power. Mr. Kaufman is state Post of the Apostolic Holiness union of Michigan, and his intention is to make this a self supporting Bible school, orphan's and widow's home. The property will be detailed to food, and build up A. H. Kaufman and Lizzie E. Kaufman his wife are ordained for God and the said Holiness union for life or until they shall name their successors. Extension buildings will be erected next year and the farm improved, the school may be in operation inside of a year.

—The Petoskey Daily News says several people have made remarks that they are the last ways to make Petoskey go and it is being Petoskey money in its money so much as possible. All things being equal or nearly so, local people will prefer themselves by buying home products. This applies to Charlevoix with equal force. There are lots of dollars are sent from Charlevoix every year to Detroit, Rochester and Montgomery Ward & Co. that should be kept at home. Charlevoix merchants recently requested to the writer that the Charlevoix business men are to blame for it. This may be to some extent, but in most cases the fault lies with the major. Enough otherwise sense of economy if you would have wife, a wage, piano, organ, dolls dolls lots home school and must help to build them up by giving them your trade. If you would prosecute local enterprises most generally be honest patriotic and enterprising. You can not build up your town and patronize Chicago concerns. If you would raise a profitable crop you must cultivate it. You cannot make butter from skimmed milk. Keep your money at home and you will make more than the possible difference in price by securing satisfactory local results.

Board of Supervisors.

The board of supervisors opened its annual session yesterday evening. The usual routine business of the board was transacted, including the appointment of the assessment rolls as they stand.

The most important action taken by the board was the passage of a resolution providing for the county to continue, in accordance with the new law. The provisions of the law, which now becomes operative in Charlevoix county, embrace an assessment of $1,000 by the state, $250 by the county, and $250 by the township. It is with the township in hold.

The board appointed as a new township board in the court house.

Wm. Sinclair of Bayne Valley, was elected to the board of poor superintendents, and T. C. Mathews was elected to succeed himself. Harvey Milford, of South Arm, was elected school examiner.

The expenses, was assigned to the newspaper's, which the publication proceedings, etc. for the ensuing year at $75.

—Long for Sale: Robert Hermann Co. advertisement in next issue.

—Five dozen of the house and outbuilds of Lewis Dandis, of Ironka, Monday no insurance.

—Rob one, G. Gowell, of Traverse City, U. S. District attorney, was in town Tuesday, on legal business in the circuit court.

—Just Schweitzer, who formerly had a harness shop in Charlevoix for the past three years, is settled in the regular army, died at a Missouri military post last week.

—It is indeed a busy place up at the sugar factory. On Sunday the machinery was seen at work outside the building, and every week day life seen are pushing the shortcuts plain toward completion. And the interesting feature is there are no stupid and day the work goes on. It is a hive of industry, and every night the work of the day is perceptible; every morning the work of the night shows itself. The factory will make sugar this winter—that is certain.

—The pay roll at the sugar factory is $1000 per week. Adding to this the large force of men employed on paving, cement walk work, sewering, robert colleges, bank block, government work and much unclassified work, extract workmen and laborers in Charlevoix are being paid from $1000 per week. And this large amount will only be a commencement, as what will be distributed here when the beet crop begins to come in. Now the ball is rolling, let us keep it rolling. There are some worlds yet to conquer.

—Ed. A. R. Kaufman of Port Huron, Mich. has purchased the Fred A. Clover property on the Norwood road consisting of 240 acres with soil and water power. Mr. Kaufman is state Post of the Apostolic Holiness union of Michigan, and his intention is to make this a self supporting Bible school, orphan's and widow's home. The property will be detailed to food, and build up A. H. Kaufman and Lizzie E. Kaufman his wife are ordained for God and the said Holiness union for life or until they shall name their successors. Extension buildings will be erected next year and the farm improved, the school may be in operation inside of a year.

—The Petoskey Daily News says several people have made remarks that they are the last ways to make Petoskey go and it is being Petoskey money in its money so much as possible. All things being equal or nearly so, local people will prefer themselves by buying home products. This applies to Charlevoix with equal force. There are lots of dollars are sent from Charlevoix every year to Detroit, Rochester and Montgomery Ward & Co. that should be kept at home. Charlevoix merchants recently requested to the writer that the Charlevoix business men are to blame for it. This may be to some extent, but in most cases the fault lies with the major. Enough otherwise sense of economy if you would have wife, a wage, piano, organ, dolls dolls lots home school and must help to build them up by giving them your trade. If you would prosecute local enterprises most generally be honest patriotic and enterprising. You can not build up your town and patronize Chicago concerns. If you would raise a profitable crop you must cultivate it. You cannot make butter from skimmed milk. Keep your money at home and you will make more than the possible difference in price by securing satisfactory local results.

THE PLOWING MATCH.

The Greatest Event in the History of Barnard Grange.

The plowing match at the Emmet Inglsde farm, in Marion Tuesday, was the greatest event yet held under the auspices of Barnard Grange, and these plowing matches have a record of several years.

First of all the weather was ideal. It is estimated that fully 400 people participated. Charlevoix sending out a large delegation. The chicken pie dinner, provided by the ladies of the Grange, was a great feature of the occasion.

It is late for the SENTINEL to record the full record of the contests, but here we go, the chief results:

In the sod class, John Mitchell took first prize, and second Adolphus Zil.

In general purpose class, Phil Sawtout, 1st; Wm. Sawtout 2d, Geo. Meggison 3rd.

Jointer class, Will Shapton 1st, Ed. Cook 2d.

Boys' class, Wm. Clark 1st, Peter Mitchell 2d.

The annual sale, which followed the plowing match, was a success, and almost everything offered was taken.

These Marion plowing matches seem a great success. They stimulate effort for excellence of work, and serve to bring farmers closer together, usually, they are worth all the effort that is expended to promote them, and are fairly entitled to all the encouragement they receive from Charlevoix people.

A Retraction and an Apology.

As a chairman the publisher of the SENTINEL is occasionally "in the soup." In questioning the title of E. L. Sprague, of the Traverse City Record, to "seniority of commission," we have erred, but not maliciously. The matter rests at the door of the person who informed us that Brother Sprague had severed all connection with the Record. From a recent issue of the Record we clip the following:

"Mr. Smith is a stickler for accuracy and we equally sincere in expressing the hope that he may long continue to block our way to that distinction. No matter how hard ever contributed in a humbug trade that of Kirtu L. Sprague, for no  man than he ever honored the journalistic profession.

Now all our readers pardon us for saying so much about nothing.

Concerning a Charlevoix Boy.

Rev. Mr. McLennan, after leaving Charlevoix, has attained a prominence in the Presbyterian church, and made a success as a pastor, the town formed from the church and school under his supervision, one of Methodist mountain. The Elmira Gazette contends that Presbyterian church, in spite of the opposition of the Methodists, is at present a flourishing condition financially, and that change of pastors is due to the remarkable.

Judging the Rev. Dr. McLennan's pastorate of two years a debt of $2,000 was lifted and the membership increased by more than fifty. He had and been popular, however, if he so desired, would have accepted an invitation to Lockport.

Rev. Mr. McLennan's pastorate in Elmira is the second in the state of Michigan. He contents his claim with Rev. Dr. L. Sprague of the Traverse City Record, who argues that Mr. Sprague is not now in the newspaper business. In this he is mistaken. Dr. Sprague still guides the destinies of the Weekly Eagle, and is as active and vigorous in his work as he was twenty years ago. Mr. Smith has not been in the business a long time, and has occupied an honored position among the newspaper men of northern Michigan, but the contention is not well founded, and in some yield the palm to Editor Sprague.

We cheerfully yield the palm to brother Sprague, proud to serve second place, as we usually do. There have been three editors where the editor and publisher of this paper has always affiliated and exchanged with journalistic gladiators and personal sponsors—the late Seth Lewis, of the Marshall Statesman; Edwin L. Sprague, of the Traverse City Eagle, and Dexter C. Leach, formerly of grand Traverse Herald. With the first the SENTINEL publisher learned the printers trade, with the second he served as a journeyman the first year that he came to the Grand Traverse region, and from the last the wing of his third he was hatched out as a publisher.

For the two venerable survivors of this trio we express sincere veneration, but one of them cannot remember the sub-editor and the "doughnut."

We are equally sincere in expressing the hope that he may long continue to block our way to that distinction.

No matter how hard ever contributed in a humbug trade that of Kirtu L. Sprague, for no  man than he ever honored the journalistic profession.

Now all our readers pardon us for saying so much about nothing.

The County Normal School.

The Charlevoix County Normal Training School is now a certainty. The board of supervisors passed the resolution Tuesday, and the school will begin as soon as the state Superintendent sends the special teacher to Charlevoix. Charlevoix county was third on the list of ten that can be established each year, and the list has now grown to about thirty. The school will be Normal Training school, with the assistance of the County Commissioner, is a great help to all the schools in the county. Candidates for the Normal class should send their names at once to Superintendent Hoxie if they have not already done so. A special school will be held to earn before September. Candidates must be not less than seventeen years of age, not be graduates of ten-grade school, or able to pass a second grade teacher's examination. NORTHERN MICHIGAN.

The Northern Michigan Teachers association will hold its annual meeting in Traverse City November 26 and 27, and the program for the meeting is being outlined.

Old Mission and the people of Peninsula are having an electric road. It they have their way. The local owners are said to be all arranged, and work will begin as soon as the money is raised.

The Pinkney Independent Journal claims to have reliable information that thousands of dollars are contributed each year from people of that town, to what is known as the get-rich-quick and safe investment schemes.

Petoskey News, Mr. and Mrs. R. M. Sly of Bay Shore are Monday moved to Elk Rapids for the winter. In the recent reorganization of the Elk Rapids Iron and Steel Co., Mr. Sly was made treasurer and assistant manager of the company, and his removal to that town is in order that he may give his undivided attention to the duties of the position.

The Antrim Iron Furnace at Mancelona was blown out Sunday evening, Sept. 27, having been in blast continuously since Dec. 6, 1902, a period covering two years, nine months and 21 days. This is the longest run ever made on the stack and the output of iron during this time foots up 97,249 tons. In addition to making the necessary repairs on the stack the inner of the furnace are to be changed somewhat.

Elk Rapids is in the throes of a strike among common laborers employed by the Elk Rapids Iron Co. May 16 last the company raised the wages for common labor 10 cents per day, this effecting the good laborers, coal "forkers," teamsters, etc. The price of iron has gone down, and Monday of this week the wage scale in force before May 16 was returned to, cutting off the extra 10 cents. A force of men nationally affiliated at Chicago, is 700 refused to go to work Monday morning, and the furnace fires were banked in the afternoon and the chemical works shut down Tuesday.

Several years ago N. H. Dubois of Hessel, Mackinac county, found a single white potato in a hill in his garden. He kept it more the next spring and planted it on a new ground by itself. From the potato, which he named "The Michigan Snowflake," he now has many footfuls, which he is distributing among the farmers in the neighborhood for use as seed, the potato being of an entirely new variety and decidedly superior to the general run of tubers. It is snow white, has a very thin skin, is unusually firm and has no protuberances of any kind, being nearly uniform in size. A peculiarity of this good potato is the potato's keeping qualities, tubers dug a year ago last September being found firm and smooth when used this month when other potatoes had begun to shrivel last May. "The Michigan Snowflake" will be grown on many one farms in Mackinac county next year to the exclusion of other varieties.

SAVING CHILD LIFE.

WORK BEING DONE IN RAMSEY COUNTY, MINN.

Showing state of Affairs Discovered by Social, School and Other Official Persons Treated Employes Brutally Detention Wards Foul Death Hell.

The report of Y. T. Thompson, agent of the United States Bureau of Education, to Commissioner of Education Harris, of the state of affairs among the children of Ramsey county, Minnesota, is the most severe on record in the history of child cruelty. Mr. Thompson says that the number of cases of cruelty he has found here is the worst he has met with in his work. He says that the use of whisky among the adults is the cause of the cruelty to the children and adds that it is not in the slums and as a result, there are no tenements here. The cruelty is practiced in the country and in the city. Children are beaten, starved, tortured, and even have been murdered. The report is based on the work done in Ramsey county, Minnesota, during the last two years.

DINES COMPETENT WITNESSES.

Superintendent of Schools Among the Number.

The competency of witnesses to testify in cases of cruelty to children has been decided by the Supreme Court of Minnesota. The case was that of Frank W. Blue, convicted of the cruelty and murder of his adopted child, Ethel Blue. Blue's counsel argued that the testimony of the neighbors who testified against him was incompetent because they were prejudiced against the defendant. The court held that the testimony was competent. Among the witnesses against Blue were the superintendent of schools and other officials.

It may be doubted if it is within the power of any one man to render great and powerful and sublime, to change the current of the world's affairs, but there is scarcely doubt, we feel, confident that everybody within the sphere of the word cannot better, and life for all grow more beautiful, if each citizen would put forth the simple and apparent duty which he can easily do. "A year ago I suffered from extreme nervous headache. I was afraid I would become insane. I could not sleep or remember, and I felt as if I should go crazy. I was so nervous I could not stand the least noise. I was so weak I could hardly walk across the room. I was so dizzy when I walked I had to support myself with a cane. I was so nervous I could scarcely speak. I was so nervous and weak I could not do my work. I was so nervous I could not sit down to write a letter. I had the appearance and spirit of an insane person. I was so nervous I could not sleep. I was so nervous I could not eat. I was so nervous I could not think. URGENT INVITATIONS.

[illegible]

WHERE IS OUR GOD?

By Rev. J. H. Barrows, Chicago.

Text: Matthew 1:23.

The source of joy and praise lies in the fact that we all believe in a present God who is always near.

In the Jewish home, amidst its war scenes, which gave occasion to the prophecy of Immanuel, and places before us the inner side of our Father's mission.

In virtue of this the heroism so characteristic of the Jewish mother, and in the death of some, our will we bring ourselves to the place of our Father's presence, and we will be blessed.

Moses, we suppose, had to endure his wonderful revelation of God for which God gave him power. Moses knew God was a father to his people, and he knew God was a father to him. Moses had to endure the sight of suffering, the pity and wrath and deeply moved by the sight of suffering, and the cause of righteousness and truth. We cannot be in the fire of suffering for the sake of righteousness and truth. We cannot be in the fire of suffering for the sake of our country, and not be moved by the sight of suffering

MARINE NEWS.

The steamer Walter Dryden has been taken off the Charlevoix-East Jordan route.

Capt. A. L. Johnson, who picked up the passengers and crew of the steamer Blackbird, stranded on the Wisconsin shore recently, is well known in Charlevoix, and is a former Traverse City man.

The cable connection between South Manitou island, established only one season, has already proved to be a great value and it is greatly appreciated by shippers, vessel men and those having dealings with the island. It is now gratifyingly assured that the cable will be extended to North Manitou.

A lower lake special says: "The burned steamer Empire State was stripped of her machinery lately, and is now ready for the marine graveyard, after many years of passenger service on Lake Ontario." And so there passes another of the old fleet of propellers that worked at "Pine River" back thirty-five years ago.

Marinette special: A man returning from Chambers island today reports that on the day the Hackley was sunk a cyclone struck the island, leveling the trees in its path like feed walks across the island. This makes certain the theory that a cyclone struck the island and that the unfortunate captain of the Hackley was not to blame for the catastrophe.

The small sub-chief Swan, which left this port ten days or more ago, went ashore near Grand Haven Friday, and will be a total loss. An effort to tow her off failed. The crew of seven were rescued by the life saving crew. The tugs Wheeler and Benton Harbor, were Nils Moore and wife, who conducted a store-ship line the past summer. Allie Gilpy, also of Charlevoix was aboard as a sailor.

The schooner-house Sin-monds was caught on the weather side of Torch Lake just by the old water Sailing. She made out to tang on, but her tall, stanchions and bulwarks on the port side were Stove-piped. The tug Wheeler went down and brought her here. She will repair temporarily, take a small cargo, and proceed to Chicago for repairs.

SCHOOL NOTES.

Do you know that an evening party of any character attended by young people who have school work the next day, is likely to be a source of actual dissipation of the strength and time, and that should go to their school studies?

Do you wonder that students who are in the habit of attending such mid-week parties are often marked "poor or failed" in their studies, if the number is honest with them and their parents?

How much time does your boy or girl devote to home study? Is his or her health suffering from overwork or this cause? How are the evenings spent? Do you know where your son is at night, after school, Saturdays and Sundays? Is he disappointing time, strength and money at the pool room or some other place of questionable resort? Do you really know his mates and associations, or may someone entice the family home more about it than you do?

Some parents who have sent child on here to school have become discouraged because of influences that tend toward dissipation, and have gone elsewhere. Our town is the town of every sense from such cause. And it does no good to try to cover up the facts. The real difficulties must be met and attacked and remedied. Most parents are glad to be informed of facts that effect the welfare of their children in school. And such facts sometimes come to the parents' knowledge only through the interest of some teacher. And a teacher who knows of facts that the parents ought to know, but may not know and will keep silent, is not the child's friend and is not a fit person to teach in our school.

What we ought to have is more intelligent cooperation between the home and the school. Will you attend a meeting of parents and teachers when one is appointed.

Classes in spelling have been started this week in the high school. For students whose ordinary written work has thus far shown weakness in spelling. This requirement will be removed as soon as each has demonstrated in his daily work that the desired results have been accomplished. It is a disgrace for a student to go through the high school without spelling ordinary words correctly.

Miss Baumgartner's and Miss Heine's grades have been studying Anna Alden Adams.

The high school chorus are making rapid progress on the choruses of Donizetti's Lucia. The tenor part is the strongest ever had in the school. Miss Burt has 56, Miss Miller plays the piano, and Miss Farthing and Messrs. Dwyer, Ross and Howe assist in the singing. If you want to hear some good chorus work, visit the high school at 1.15 any day.

Mr. Howe—"What is the chief industry of Jerusalem a man and an ass?"

One of Miss Schaek's boys—"Animals have fur and feathers."

LOST—A gold watch, somewhere in Bridge street. Monogram on back "M. S. J." Finder will be suitably rewarded by leaving at S. M. See & Sons.

NORTHERN MICHIGAN.

Eastport is always up to date if not a little ahead. They now have a girls base ball club, which is composed of nine athletic young ladies of that quiet little burg.

Mr. J. W. Mulkem of Traverse City will visit Jerusalem next spring as one of the Michigan delegates to the World's Sunday school convention. Seventeen days will be spent in Palestine. Besides the main excursion optional auxiliary trips from Beirut to Damascus, Baalbec, Samaria and upper Egypt have been arranged for. The excursion steamer will leave New York, March 8th.

Elk Rapids Progress: The Elk Rapids Portland Cement Co. are now making ready to transform their mill to the dry process, which changes when completed, will make the mill one of the foremost in the country in point of cheapness of production. It will nearly double the capacity and place the company where they can compete with the dry process rock cement mills of the east, no matter what may be the conditions of the market. This work will be pushed to completion as rapidly as possible. In the meantime the company will produce enough cement to care for their trade.

The board of supervisors of Leelanau county have granted the incorporation of the village of Northport. The first election will be held there on November 2. A registration and election committee consisting of W. H. Campbell, F. W. Potter, E. J. Lougheed and S. L. Campbell, was appointed. At the first election the officers to be elected are President, clerk, treasurer, and six trustees. For President the name of W. H. Campbell has been prominently mentioned. He is the editor of the Northport Leader and takes a foremost interest in the welfare of the village. He is the logical candidate and will probably be honored by being made the first president Northport according to the census made by W. H. Campbell has a population of 492.

Hayes City special: The manufacture of potash from wood ashes is anown industry in this place. The old time ashes of hoop-bound days who doled out a plethoric bar of yellow soap for the contents of the ash barrel has disappeared from the shops and stores in the large cities. Salt and hard coal has taken the place of lovely and maple, and what the cities have lost the north woods have gained. The ashman with his heavy load of leadery white ashes is a common sight in a hardwood mill town. Potash now commands a price of $30 a ton and a scarce market in the mature nowadays. Potash made here is forwarded to New York, where it is transshipped to South African gold fields, where it is most highly prized by miners and leaching companies.

No Time to Chase all the Blues.

In our review of the county printing matter, which appears in another column, we have replied to the Charlevoix Courier, intending it to cover the whole bunch of appealing gentlemen, and what we got at that We care not for the snarling of the old wolf and the whelps, so long as we kill the lyeths. If we must have a menagerie it is well to preserve some of the species. There is a difference in carnivorous animals. Some kips no better than to stand up and be chewed, while others snarl and run to cover. They all howl, however, and the better way is to let them howl. They serve nobody, and they entertain the audience between acts like Artemus Ward's monkey, they are "amusin' little critters."

—Tuesday Record: The young editor of the Petoskey Evening News seems to judgment when he charged Willard A. Smith, of the Sentinel, with reality. It is a fact that Mr. Smith is the dean of the newspaper fraternity in Northern Michigan, but his admiss and pugnacious judge was imagine that he cannot take excellent care of himself in a wrangle, and that he is very much in it when the row is over. Had the News referred to the Soo as a sleepy, conservative, practical, belligerent old hedgehog, it would have been wanting in professional courtesy, and smart on the assumption of polite nonsense so feeble that it would have cited better polgamist than in writing our Dean down as "feeble." At least that is our conclusion in reading brother Smith's report.

—Two dollars per pound for green gumeng and the highest market price for dry rocks, is offered by a Lake City merchant. Possibly the time may come soon when predictions on gumeng and comments on the valuable little root, good and bad seasons will be as important in this section as the present predictions and other information concerning potatoes. That was what the Indians brought to hunters of this root to Charlevoix druggists. Now it is rarely ever seen, and old settlers say it has disappeared from the woods.

No definite period is fixed for spawn fishing—when the required amount is secured, work will cease. In all probability, however, the work will continue during November.

—On Monday evening, Oct. 26th, Mr. Peter Hook was reminded of his passing fifty years by a surprise gathering of that number of his friends. As a token of their warm love and esteem, an expensive easy chair "fit for a king" was presented, his friends feeling that the best was none too good. And how the guests did enjoy themselves: plenty of room and all of it used, and the refreshments were of the highest and fullest order. May the years still go lightly with Peter, is the candid wish of all.

—The publisher of this paper cares nothing about what is published about him in the papers at home,—but he does expect fair treatment from papers in neighboring towns. The Traverse City Eagle of the 23d publishes as a special Charlevoix dispatch, unpoetically inspired by W. E. Hampton, the great of slanderous lies that have appeared in the Charlevoix county papers concerning the county printing. It would seem that a paper outside the county, in a case like this, should be neutral, at least until it had heard both sides of the controversy. We have, elsewhere in this issue, given the facts, we supplemental that statement by saying here, that the person who says Willard A. Smith, in the recent trouble about the county printing betrayed any man, or was violated any agreement, or committed any act unbecoming an honest man, is a liar and a slanderer. The board of supervisors was the "trust breaker," not the Sentinel. In this matter time will tell who are the liars. We are content to wait. Editor Sliger writing the above the Eagle has made the records favorable by publishing the other side of the case. It makes one error, however, in reporting the interview with the publisher of this paper. The Eagle says that he stated that a minority he was forced into joining the association although his sympathies were never with them." The Eagle evidently misunderstood us. The Sentinel joined the association cheerfully. The above billingsgate should be applied solely to the last mad act of the association regarding county printing.

THE DESIRE OF ALL NATIONS.

By Rev. Samuel Fallows.

And the desire of all nations shall come.—Haggai, ii. 7.

In the minds and sympathetic nature of the people there is a yearning for the coming of a Deliverer, a Redeemer, a Saviour, a Christ. Mr. Darwin, in his autobiography, says that he was a boy of no religious sentiment, but he was a man of no religious sentiment. He said he was a man who was in his mental nature a religious man. He said he was a man who was in his mental nature a religious man. He said he was a man who was in his mental nature a religious man

OFFICIAL PRINTING.

THE BOARD OF SUPERVISORS CHARGED WITH EXTRAVAGANCE AND EXTRAVAGANCE.

And the Sentinel Publisher Was Being a Traitor Akin to Judas.

The publisher of this paper long since decided to ignore the numerous utterances against him by W. E. Hampson, editor of the Charlevoix Courier. For several years we have let slips and thinly veiled insinuations pass unnoticed, because we did not care to annoy our readers with personal controversy.

But the last issue of that paper contains a two column article that is so entirely false, not only to the reference to us, but also to the Board of supervisors, that we cannot remain silent longer. The article referred to deals with the recent action at the Board of supervisors in awarding the official printing to the SENTINEL.

There has existed for past year an organization known as the Charlevoix County Publishers' Association. It embraced in its membership all the publishers of the county, although the publisher of this paper has never attended one of its meetings. There are many reasons far more weighty than the proper disposal of the county printing for his existence of such an organization, reasons which it is unnecessary to give here. Several meetings of the association have been held at which many questions affecting the mutual interests of the publishers were discussed, and none of them acted upon. In all of these actions the publisher of this paper, as a member of that association, was morally bound to consider until such time as he should give the president notice of withdrawal. No person can deny that he, or any one of the others had a right to do this at any time.

On Tuesday of last week the association held a meeting at the Hotel Bartlett, at which there were present C. L. Lumley, of the East Jordan Dispatch; H. L. Lumley, of the East Jordan Herald; Sim H. Wilson, of the Boyne Union, and W. E. Hampton, of the Charlevoix Courier. The proceedings of this meeting were published in the East Jordan Dispatch. At that meeting a resolution was adopted in the sense of the association, that the county treasurer's report should be published in duplicate as all outs answered should be printed, as the law never had been intended an increase in the volume of that report of from one-quarter to one-third. At the same time the association drew up a joint bid for the official printing, the provisions of which were that the county should pay full legal rates for all patronage matter, and the printing nominally awarded to each paper in its turn, that prove to print such matter to supplement form and furnish all the other papers with a sufficient number for their subscribers. After deducting the cost of printing, the balance was to be equally divided between the six publishers.

These two propositions were brought to the SENTINEL office by publishers Wilson and Lumley. The publisher of this paper at that time refused to sign them, marking the remark at the time that it looked like a "hold up." But, after some argument he did sign them. A refusal to sign them, on the part of any one of the members meant not simply the failure of the project, but the death of the association. We were satisfied to withhold our signature, more for the sake of peace than for any other reason than for the time. But, had the publisher of this paper been present at the meeting he would have voted against the propositions on the same grounds that he objected to the proposed publication of the names of "dead beat subscribers," as it advised and unwise. But had the latter proposition been carried over his vote, he would have to choose between a compliance or secession.

The public printing resolution and proposition were submitted to the Board that day, and at once it become evident that the board, to put it mildly, was unfavorable to it. When it was pending, the publisher of this paper was approached by supervisors Payton, Bailey and Graff at the Hotel Hotel, and asked what he would do the official printing for. He replied that while the association proposition was before the board he would neither make nor entertain any proposition; that he would stand pat with the rest. Again at the Supervisor, offer two of these supervisors repeated the inquiry and received the answer that if the SENTINEL were offered $250 to do the work it would refuse it while the association proposition was pending. There were witnesses to this interview, but they are unnecessary, as the gentlemen themselves will corroborate the statement. So far as these supervisors are concerned, their opponents of the THE SENTINEL publisher, or any other, was perfectly legitimate and honorable. We admit that the SENTINEL publisher was approached with the injury amount of the foul, and knows to the board, that he had taken no part in the deliberations of that all pleasant body, the publishers' association, in the formulation of the project, which was true. Here the matter rested until Thursday morning, when the matter was taken up and rejected almost unanimously by the board.

At two o'clock that day the publisher of this paper was called up by phone by Mr. Wilson, publisher of the Boyne Union, and president of the association. To the SENTINEL end of the conversation I was careful to call a witness. The conversation was substantially as follows:

Mr. Wilson: "I just learned that the board has turned down our proposition."

Mr. Smith: "Yes, that is true."

Mr. Wilson: "Now they will probably ask the publishers to bull separately for the work, we must stand firm to do that."

Mr. Smith: "Why?"

Mr. Wilson: "Because if we do not stand together now the printing will continue to be done for a song. If we hold together the board will have to come to our terms."

Mr. Smith: "I have stood by the association in this deal because I considered that it should go with the majority, but I will not be a party to any further combination against the Board of supervisors. Some one said it is every man for himself now. I cannot have sense than I have for the past two years, and I am willing to take my chances with the rest."

After a remonstrance on the part of Mr. Wilson, Mr. Smith repeated the above declaration. The official printing matter was in the air. It was a fair and and as taxes. We expected to bid, and we expected every one of the others to do likewise, and they did. The SENTINEL took no order or considerable advantage of any of the others. It gave them fine and timely notice. Its publisher did what any honorable man had a right to do. He did not double on work or deceive, to bid and mislead work to honest. There was no duplicity or lurking under cover.

That evening the committee on printing reported favorably on the SENTINEL's proposition to do the official printing for $250. And was received from the East Jordan Dispatch, Boyne Union and Charlevoix Courier, with a joint bid for all printing under cover.

MARCH OF 600 MILES.

SHIPWRECKED MEN HAVE A PERIL'OUS EXPERIENCE.

Hudson Bay Trading Expedition Is Wrecked at Marble Island in the Wild Sub-Arctic Wilderness—Now Are Judge Would Save Crops.

After suffering terrible hardships in a desolate region in the sub-arctic wilds of Northern Canada, Captain Ferry and fourteen survivors of the crew of the Hudson Bay trading schooner Wanda have been rescued by a relief party from the Hudson Bay Company's post at Churchill, on the Western shore of Hudson Bay.

The Wanda left Port Churchill last August on a trading expedition to Marble Island, in Wager Inlet, about 600 miles to the northward, on the Arctic coast. The vessel was wrecked on Marble Island and the crew was compelled to spend the winter there. Part of the time they were in a deserted Eskimo village, but most of the time they had to live in their boat, which was wrecked but could be made seaworthy. The men had to hunt for food and fuel, and had a very hard time of it. They were rescued by the crew of a trading schooner which had gone to the island to look for them. The rescuing vessel had to abandon the search because of the lateness of the season and the danger from the ice, and carried the castaways to Churchill.

Captain Ferry, who is a native of Nova Scotia, and his men had a very hard time of it. They had to live on seal meat and what they could get from the Eskimos, who were very good to them. The Eskimos had a hard time themselves, for their seal hunting was a failure and they had to live on their dogs, which they had to kill and eat. The castaways had to do the same thing. The Eskimos told them that they had never seen such a season before, and that they had never before had to kill their dogs for food.

Captain Ferry and his men are now at Churchill, where they are being cared for by the Hudson Bay Company's people. They will be sent south on the company's steamer Nascopie, which will leave Churchill for Montreal and London in a few days.

Judge Would Save Crops.

Judge Lewis of Minneapolis, who is a big crop expert, has telegraphed Secretary Wilson of the department of agriculture that he believes that the government should take some steps to save the crops of the country from the ravages of a rainy season. He says that the government should take steps to protect the farmers against the ruin that they are facing by the loss of a rainy season. Judge Lewis says that it is possible that the information of a rainy season could be given to the farmers in time to enable them to take steps to save the crop. He says that if the farmers could be given time they could save the crop. Secretary Wilson has been asked to take the matter up with the Weather Bureau officials, who are now considering the matter.

Ship Collides with a Train.

A Chesapeake and Ohio freight train met with a serious accident on the long bridge which spans the Kanawha river at Walbridge, Ohio. Portions of the bridge gave way and momentarily the whole left of the train was precipitated into the water. A crowd gathered on the shore.

China Surrenders to Russia.

China has signed a treaty giving Russia a monopoly of Manchuria and mining rights. Russia's chief rival, Japan, is said to be very much disturbed over the outcome of the negotiations. Russia's ambitions in Manchuria are thus made practically a fait accompli.

Extradition Is Arranged.

William Cardwell, escaped from the Imphal Bicester prison, a New York band of counterfeiters, has been arrested in Canada and will be taken back to England to serve his sentence.

Schooner Stuck in a Gale.

The schooner Bertha, which is a sister to the three ships lost off Manitowoc, was stuck in the gale off the Sheboygan coast, and the crew was about exhausted when rescued.

Mail-Bag Rubber Plant.

A Dutch botanist has created rubber and other plants from the mail-bags rented in Denver, escaped from a Texas zoo just long enough to bite to death the zoo-man attempted capture, and, finally, Theodore Roosevelt, when he was a delphin.

Shoots Two and Kills Self.

Herbert Hunter, of Springfield, shot his mother, Jessie Hall, through each lung, then shot himself through the temple, in the view, had been sharp at his door, and then killed himself in Springfield, Ohio. The lad had been in with typhoid fever, and it is believed that he was delirious.

What the Future May Bring Forth.

One thing may be counted upon Hereafter it will be five against one when it comes to the disposal of the county printing in Gaul. We want this to go on record. In any future fall we shall make to the board, it will be for what we think the work is worth, and it will not be for less than that received this year.

And we assure that the public should be enlightened regarding another fact. Some one may attempt to show the actual cost of doing the county printing by the pamphlet issued last year by the Hand Jordan Enterprise. This pamphlet does not contain the county treasurer's report, excepting about three inches of condensed figures. The report was not published. The board insists that the full report of the amounts between the county and the several townships shall be printed. This will more than double the number of folios shown by the aforesaid pamphlet. It was on the basis of the full report that the SENTINEL bid was made.

Would Mandamus the Board.

Here is a little county printing matter on the side. In the recent interview between the Sentinel publisher and publishers Wilson and Lorraine Jr., one of these gentlemen—we don't remember which—referred to a county where the supervisors had failed to provide for the publication of its proceedings, and had been served with a writ of Mandamus to appear and show cause. Of course, the inference was that if the Charlevoix county board failed to do "its duty," the same tactics would be resorted to by the Charlevoix County Publishers' Association. These link-splitters, why were just about of a size, mentally, and morally just capable of doing the dirty work of the elder Lorraine and the conscienceless Hampton, knew nothing about the experience of a certain Don Quixote. They were foolish enough to think that they could bulldose the Board of supervisors into compliance with their demands. The publisher of this paper got out of that company just as quick as he could, and got out honestly. Because he refused to continue in a hopeless and utterly unbearable position, he is branded as a "traitor." We are perfectly content to let the people judge.

The Sugar Factory.

Every hour's work at the sugar factory is counting, and we can already see the beginning of the end. The force has been greatly augmented the past week, and now about 180 men are working at the plant.

On every floor machinery and tanks are being connected, steam pipes and water pipes are being stretched about the big building, sewer pipes are being laid, the piled up stacks and poles on the outside are disappearing into the mass of intricate system on the inside, and the big beet ends are being prepared to receive their burden.

The general manager say they hope to begin slicing beets by November 20th, but that there is little doubt, that Dec. 1st will see the big plant in operation.

Callouds of odds and ends, cement and fire brick, continue to arrive daily.

A Protracted Law Suit.

At the adjourned term of circuit court last week, nearly the entire week was taken up with the trial of the case of Ingalls and Trelton against the Grand Rapids Hark and Lumber Co. of Phelps.

The case involved the construction of a verbal contract. Plaintiff claimed they sold and delivered to the yard defendants a quantity of cedar logs. The logs were destroyed by fire. They sued to recover the value of the logs.

Defendants set up the defense that they were to buy the sticks after they were manufactured from the logs, and hence were not the owners of the logs.

Fifteen or Fifteen appeared for plaintiffs, and Geo. H. Covell and A. H. Nicholas for defendants. The case went to the jury Friday evening, and a verdict was brought by mid-noon of Saturday.

Calhoun County Throws on State Tax Commission.

The SENTINEL was one of the first papers in Michigan to criticise the methods of the tax commission. Note, from all over the State arise howls about the injustice of its work. The latest is from the Calhoun county board of supervisors, which adopted the following resolution.

"Whereas, As the state tax commission, so called, by one of their assessor and attaches of the office, came in to the county of Calhoun on Sept. 15, and exercised the power their secretary intimate, by taking the assessment rolls of the county of Calhoun to the city of Lansing, and,

"Whereas, As the valuation in many of the assessment rolls was changed from the assessment roll of the values fixed by the assessing officer of this county, and,

"Whereas, It is the opinion of this board that the methods employed by the state tax commission to arrive at the true values of property in Calhoun county were crude, ranked upon guess work and the results of information obtained by the commission could not be relied on as just bases for the assessment of property, therefore, be it,

"Resolved, That it is the sense of this board that a great indignity has been done the assessing officers of this county and a grave injustice has been done the taxpayers of this county."

A Bit of Local History.

Just 40 years ago (not Monday), M. Stockman and wife and Seth F. Mason and wife, hoisted at the mouth of Pine River in the small schooner Sunnyside, with all their household effects Stockman and Mason had been here a month before and built a big house just under the bluff where the Charlevoix Lumber Co's saw mill now stands. The big house was still standing there when the SENTINEL was established in 1889.

On their arrival in the schooner they were compelled to anchor outside and transfer their goods up the river with a small boat. The two families occupied the same big house that winter, when, later, Mr. Stockman built a big house for himself near the present Interlocutor Hotel grounds, and Mr. Mason erected himself a house of the same sort under the bluff near where the old water-works building now stands.

When Stockman and Mason landed in the month of Pine River, the only other white families here were John of Medard Thompson and John S. Dixon.

Took a Big Contract.

From a Petoskey paper we clip the following from the proceedings of the Emmet county board of supervisors

We recommend that this board appoint a standing committee of three members to hold office until superseded or until the next annual meeting of the board of supervisors of Emmet county, this committee to be paid same as if serving on the board of supervisors, mileage and per diem.

The duty of this committee shall be to examine into the workings of the state tax commission."

Great heavens! Did the board know what it was doing when it made that recommendation? Did it know that it was undertaking a bigger job than has been imposed upon the Alaskan boundary tribunal, or the Panama canal commission? Did it not know that it was biting off a bigger chunk than it could chew?

To discover or uncover the ramifications, scintillations, elucidations, or putrifactions, of the state tax commission seems something equivalent to a solution of the problems of Euclid, or a commentary on the theology of Dr. Dowie.

There are questions that mortal man should not trifle with. Only after the unfolding of the seed of time, when the veil is lifted and we find ourselves sitting on the clouds shall we "know as we are known" by the tax commission.

It is not for us to know, and anyone, or body of men, who presume to inaugurate any such inquiry, are tempting fate.

How would it look for the late Charlevoix County Publishers' Association to have met in solemn session and passed a resolution question-ing the authenticity of the St. James version of the Bible? Or how would it appear for the Charlevoix common council to set on foot an inquiry into the Pere Marquette frain service?

That Emmet county board of supervisors, after inquiring on the tax papers, will merit a "scathing rebuke at the next spring election.

BEAVER ISLAND NEWS.

Mr. J. R. O'Donnell of Peaine township is serving on jury the past week.

W. J. Gallagher returned from the Board meeting of supervisors last Monday.

The exterior of the new Sunday School Chapel is completed and it will be artistic and plastered this fall.

Construction of the new railroad is being rapidly pushed now that the long looked for steel has arrived.

Mrs Chas. Gordon and children are visiting in Charlevoix the past week. Mr Gordon joined them Sunday.

Considerable wind for the past few days has materially interfered with shifting as logs and sailboats have not been able to get to their pens.

Born to Cap. and Mrs. John McCann a booming baby girl on Oct. 21, 1903. You can't touch the captain with a ten foot pole now.

Mr. Weiss, the A. O. H. organizer is establishing a branch on the island with prospects good for a large membership to this famous Order, as charter members.

Instruct Lonther, of Charlevoix, is on the island this week installing the new heating plant which Dr. Angeblier recently purchased for the Parish Priests house.

Mr. Jones the Charlevoix contractor who has been putting up the new school house will have his contract completed in a few days. Mr. Jones has done a good job and gets many compliments from our citizens on the handsome work which he has executed his contract.

President W. E. Stevens of the B. I. I. Co. made a trip to the Soo and other points Monday last looking for men to put to work on the company's railroad and in the lumber woods. He returned on this week's Wednesday trip of the Beaver with several men, but had as many as he wanted.

The prohabilities are strong of Mr. Jones forming a partnership with two of our business men and putting in a planing mill sash and door factory. Mr. Jones is away this week looking up machinery for the new enterprise, such a business is sure to succeed and has long been needed on the Island. Thousands of dollars worth of work in this line has left the island in the last year or two which might be kept on the island. The new company will certainly succeed.

NORTHERN MICHIGAN.

The latest news from the Soo indicate that the great works there will soon be in operation again. The consolidated Lake Superior Company property has passed in to the hands of Speyer & Co., with one or two exceptions.

Kalkaska is to be the division point of the Pere Marquette main line from Petoskey east, when the bit of connecting road from the Kalkaska branch to Leota is built in the near future to give a short line to Saginaw and Detroit. The machine shops will be built at Kalkaska also.

The supervisors of Antrim county have decided to submit to the voters the proposition to raise $40,000 for building a courthouse for Antrim county—$25,000 by bonds, and the balance by tax. The county is much in need of a courthouse and offices, and with the county seat permanently at Bellaire, the money will probably be voted next spring.

Bellaire special 26. Samuel Dewey, aged 15, and Lyle Ellsworth, aged 11, returning from a hunting trip yesterday, saw a sparrow in a shed at Solomon Dewey's place in Custer. One of the boys shot at the bird and the bullet passed through a cracked board at the back of the shed and struck Amos Hoyt under the left arm, causing his death in a few minutes. Fault lay says the other did the shooting.

Traverse City Record. Engine No. 7 on the Pere Marquette train, which was due in this city last evening at 6:20, had a mishap a mile north of Delanor, in which both driving rods on the engine were broken and the cab demolished. The fireman jumped and sustained a badly sprained ankle. Engineer Simms was knocked back into the coal tender when the crash occurred and it is probable that it was his being piled in the tender unceremoniously that saved his life, for he had was smashed into kindling wood by the flying rods. As it is, he was somewhat bruised. It is thought by the passengers that the train was running about 40 miles an hour when the accident occurred, and the escape of the two men from death was almost miraculous. The train was brought to a standstill by the plucky of Fireman Simms, who went back into the cab and opened the air. The entire train remained on the track, and the only injury to any of the passengers was to their feelings, as they had to wait two hours before they could be brought in. All got a slight shaking up and something of a scare. For the bravery of the engineer in bringing the train to a stop a purse was taken up among the passengers in testimony of their appreciation.
